An English Theatre Planned for Palma

Organized on the Guild Idea, Group of Drama Enthusiasts Will Produce Plays Professionally -- First Offering Within Six Weeks.

ORIGINAL plays in English, written, directed staged and largely acted by professionals will be seen in Palma within six weeks, if the plans of a group of drama enthusiasts who have organized the Palma Theatre Guild go through. The group, composed for the most part of English and American residents who expect to make their homes here or have already done so, held two meetings last week and preparations for the first productions are well under way.

The Palma Theatre Guild, the organization of which was modelled somewhat in the manner of the most successful of all guild theatres, that in New York, will rely entirely upon the subscriptions of play goers. Subscribers will pay in advance and will be accorded preference in the matter of seats. Non-subscribers will pay a rather higher box office price. It is expected that the subscription rate will be only three pesetas a performance.

The First Meeting

The first meeting of the group was held last Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gomez del Val in Bonanova. The guild idea met with unanimous approval and Mr. Norman Jacobsen, who was one of the original organizers of the New York Theatre Guild, explained how that institution got its start. It was done by a body of men and women who believed in their own artistic aims and found more than enough subscribers to finance their first production. The immediate success of the venture is one of the most important items in modern dramatic history.

Those present at this first meeting pledged themselves "to support to the best of their ability a guild on this island to further the art of the Theatre with unselfish and complete integrity."

Those who signed this included: Mr. and Mrs. M.J. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. L.M. Burgess, Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Machefert, Mrs. Catalina Muñoz Nell, Mrs. Eleanor S. Sureda, Mr. and Mrs. Gomez del Val, Mr. Norman Jacobsen, Miss Sybil Sutton-Vane, Mr. and Mrs. David Alan Munro, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Jones, Miss Norah Nisbet and Mr. Richard Mandeville.

Thursday evening at the Rendezvous in Terreno another meeting thoroughly organized the Palma Theatre Guild for business. After some discussion of the aims and ideals of the venture for the benefit of several others who had become interested in the project, the following officers were elected: President and art director, Mr. Norman Jacobsen; business manager, Mr. Clarence Livingston Allis; secretary and treasurer, Mr. Gomez del Val; producer, Miss Sybil Sutton-Vane. A committee of four was decided upon to assist these officers. Two of them were elected Thursday, Señor Francisco Rosselló and Mr. David Loth. The other two will be selected from among the English residents interested in the new movement.

Many Professionals

During the entire discussion, it was apparent that the Palma Theatre Guild will be far from amateur theatricals. Many of the organizers have had considerable professional experience. Mr. Jacobsen, besides his interest in the New York Theatre Guild, has been connected with the stage for years. Mr. Allis has had unusually wide and successful experience with the Little Theatre movement in the United States. He has managed the Little Theatre in his own city, Worcester, Ohio, one of the best in the country, and another in Swarthmore, Pennsylvania. Mr. Allis had arrived only two days before the meeting, but he has been in Palma before and has brought his family with him this time. He is taking a house in Terreno for two years.

Miss Sybil Sutton-Vane has written for half a dozen London revues and is also the author of the popular play Greensleeves. Among the professionals who have volunteered their services is Mrs. Gomez del Val, known on the stage as Florence Bradley. She has played with Richard Mansfield, with the Coburn Players when they were doing Shakespeare, and with the Art Theatre in Chicago. She has also acted in and directed stock in Boston.

During the organization work at the Guild's second meeting, Mr. J. Seward Cottrell of London made a number of suggestions for the future work of the group. He was prevented from accepting a place on the committee by reason of the fact that he is returning to England in a few days.

Mr. Ivan Lake, the British Vice-Consul, who was also present, heartily endorsed the purpose of the Guild.

It is hoped that within the next few days the scope of the Guild will be widened to include Mallorquin drama lovers. One of the aims of the founders was to make the Guild an organization which would draw the English and the Spanish speaking peoples of the island closer together, promote a better understanding and friendship between them and exchange the artistic ideas of the two. Several Mallorquin ladies and gentlemen have expressed great interest in the idea.

If their co-operation in sufficient numbers can be obtained, it is proposed that some if not all of the Guild performances will be equally divided between English and Spanish. For example, there would be a one-act play given in English and another in Spanish on the same evening. In the interval, there would be music or an exhibition of dancing or a pantomime.

The founders of the Guild believe that not only would this plan promote friendship between the Spanish and the English, but that both would derive pleasure and a chance to learn another language from it.

Plans for the first performance will be announced later. Work is well under way already, but the producers do not feel that this has been sufficiently far advanced to talk about it. The exact date and place of the performance will be made public as soon as possible. Meanwhile the Guild hopes to receive subscriptions as soon as possible, since the core of the Guild idea is that no one shall be called upon to make financial sacrifices or take financial risks. It is felt that there is in Palma a sufficient public for the sort of plays the Guild will produce, and no one will be asked for more than the actual subscription price of the seats.

Deyá Boasts an Art Gallery.

In the little rustic fonda on Deyá's main street can be seen, by such as care to stop a moment, representations of the work of the colony of artists who make the village so interesting, especially to themselves.

Half a dozen nationalities and more than that many grades of genius are settled in Deyá because of the picturesqueness of its location and the cheapness of living. They are a busy little group, perhaps the busiest among the foreign residents of Mallorca, and they have to their credit an enormous output of local scenes and local types.

The fonda has become neutral ground, and on its whitewashed walls are hung the efforts, humorous and serious, of the colony. In this same room, combination lounge and dining hall, and in the cafe where Deyá gathers to receive its mail, are to be heard those elaborate, eager discussions on the nature of life and art so dear to the artist when not engaged in work. The talk flies fast and in most of the languages of Europe, for in the excitement the speaker is likely to drop into the tongue which comes to him most rapidly. In the gloom of the crowded, smoke-filled cafe, among the boxes and barrels and bags, the talk is all of beauty, varied now and again by an economic harangue as some old timer regrets loudly the rise in rents caused by the invasion of more recent arrivals. All in all, a cheery place, sacred to the traditions of the storied Latin Quarter.

Art Exhibits.

Erwin Hubert's water colors continue to charm, and his exhibition at the Galerías Costa last week attracted a great number of residents and visitors. His color effects are strangely impressive, and his feeling for decorative organization is probably the secret of his popularity.

In the same room may be seen a collection of oils, including a number of portraits, by Pedro Cáffaro — a Mallorquin artist — and while these boast less subtlety of color, the technique is undoubtedly good.

The treatment of local landscapes on the opposite wall by the French painter, Albert Rappaport, suffered by contrast. His lines are deliberate, his colors sombre, and suggest cold, stark scenes of the north rather than the warm tones of the Mediterranean.

The exhibit which attracted most attention at the Galerías Costa was the sculptures of Raimundo Gual de Torrella. The portrait bust of his mother is a sincere, straightforward study in character, and one is impressed with its technical excellence. In the group is a head of a man, and the vitality in the face, the expression of the eyes and mouth were commented upon by nearly all who viewed it. Señor Torrella has a number of paintings to his credit as well, and with such ability to portray character studies it is safe to predict that he can go far in the world of art.

J. Vives Llull exhibited some of his oils in conjunction with Señor Cáffaro.

The exhibition will continue until the 20th of this month.

OF PERSONAL INTEREST

The President of the Spanish Republic, Don Niceto Alcalá Zamora, has definitely fixed his visit to the Balearic Islands for the week after Easter. The exact details are not yet available from Madrid, but it is believed the President will be in Palma on March 28 or 29. The local authorities are making great preparations for his reception, and there is a good deal of discussion as to the best way of presenting to the chief executive the needs of the Balearics. It has been suggested that if the Presidential visit should extend over the following Sunday, April 3, a bull fight should be arranged in honor of Señor Alcalá Zamora. The season does not usually begin in Mallorca until the middle of May, but for centuries a bull fight has been part of the welcome accorded the chief of the government in any Spanish city.

Lord Dawson of Penn, physician to the King of England, is expected to arrive shortly after Easter for a visit to Mallorca.

Edna St. Vincent Millay, the American poetess, and her husband, Eugene Boissevain, arrived last week in Mallorca from New York on a freighter. Before leaving America, Miss Millay said she planned to take a house on the island, settle down for a long stay and write. She added that she was taking a freighter because that was the way people travelled years ago, and she had selected Mallorca "because I've never been there."

She has no plans as to what she will write here; the only thing she is sure of is that it will not be an epic, and before she begins it she wants "to lie down and look into the water for six months at least." Miss Millay thinks she is being very unconventional in crossing the Atlantic on the freighter Cabo Tortosa.

"I like Spaniards", she says. "I like their poetry. This trip is an impulse from which I may never return, but it's a lot more fun than doing the biggest of things conventionally."

"Cinderella Married", a novel by Mr. Sherry Mangan of Son Palerm, was published in New York last Thursday. The book deals with an imaginary Mediterranean island and is a sequel to the nursery tale, but not written in quite the same manner.

Dr. Thomas Ireland, an English physician who practices in Barcelona and is now stopping at the Calamayor Hotel, was slightly injured climbing among the rocks along the sea front. Dr. Ireland was looking for onyx. He is now much improved.

Sir Norman Kemp, retired Judge of His Majesty's High Court of Judication at Bombay, sailed for England on the Laurentic last Thursday.

The French liner Paris stopped here last Sunday on her Mediterranean cruise. She had on board 257 passengers, fifty—two of whom remained in Mallorca. They are: Justin Aldrich, C. Livingston Allis and family, Margaret Bange, Elsie M. Boyle, Alice Clement, Joseph Grever, Anne B. Glever, Henry A. Harrison, Florence Harrison, Adolphe Luffe, Helen Luffe, Grace Lyford, Benton McArthur, Lindsey McKinley and family, Woodbury Morris, Florence Morris, Mildred McNamara, Eleanor McNamara, Julia S. Loomis, Marguerite Serex, Jergen Wichfeld, Richard Jackson, William Bergh, Anna Seidl, Catherine Shea, Harrison McNear, Juan Estrameira, Grace Kerr, Jessie Simmons, Marion Simmnos, Pauline Kappus, Karlton Winter, Jan Boissevain, Ernest Freudiger, and Albert Pfister.

When the S.S. Laurentic called here last Thursday, thirty passengers disembarked for a longer visit to Mallorca than the cruise allowed. They were: Henriette Mayer, Genevieve Chalkley, George W. Deane, Gertrude and Ernest Delhaes, Phyllis M. Dugmore, Sophie and Ernest Fell, William Fahy, Isidor Feilbogen, Rosalie and Eugen Feist, Margaret Howell, Mary D. Jackson, Henry R. Lanktree, Arthur E. Lucas and family, Frederick A. Ludlow, Iva and Wilma Meyer, Kira Opienska, Barbara Peart, William E. Russell, Louisa and Gilliat Schroeder, Kathleen T. Seymour, Caroline Tweedale and Wilhelm Volpp.

More passengers would have disembarked if they could have been accomodated in the hotels, but all the advertised hotels were full.

Mrs. Eric Studd, the daughter-in-law of the former Lord Mayor of London, has been here for a short visit. She will leave on Monday to join her husband who is on his way home from India. Mrs. Studd plans to return to Mallorca shortly.

Tennis Club Tournament.

The annual tournament for the championship of the Tennis Club of Mallorca will begin tomorrow (Monday) on the courts of the Club, Son Alegre. All members, whether temporary or permanent, are eligible, and cups will be given to the winners of men's singles and doubles, women's singles and doubles, and mixed doubles.

Last year the men's singles was won by Mr. M. Burrell of England. Mrs. Burrell was the winner of the cup for ladies, and Mr. and Mrs. Burrell took home the trophy for mixed doubles. They are not defending their titles this year as they are not in Mallorca.

The Tennis Club will soon begin work on a new clubhouse, a good deal bigger than the present building. Besides dressing rooms and showers, it is planned to have a lounge with a spacious dance floor and a bar.

The Republic's First Easter.

The Easter and Palm Sunday services in the Cathedral will this year be the most brilliant part of the celebrations of the Passion and the Resurrection of Christ, so far as has been decided at present. No one knows whether the famous Easter procession will be held this year or not.

The program as it stands now is, in its most important features, as follows:

On Palm Sunday, which is the 20th, mass will be celebrated from nine o'clock in the morning. The benediction of Palms will also take place at this time. At six o'clock in the evening the offices of the Church will be sung.

High Mass on Holy Thursday will be sung at nine thirty. At four o'clock in the afternoon will be held the traditional ceremony of washing the feet of twelve poor men, and this will be followed by a sermon.

On Good Friday, Mass at nine o'clock in the morning will precede a sacred procession within the Cathedral. In the afternoon at four a sermon on the Descent from the Cross will be delivered, and this will be followed by another procession.

Pontifical Mass will be celebrated on Easter Sunday at ten o'clock in the morning.

If it is decided to take the Easter procession through the city, Palma will be one of the very few places in Spain where such a pageant will be seen this year. In the present state of feeling, it is felt in most places that it will be too dangerous to attempt the processions. Seville, which of tradition has put on the streets the most elaborate of all Spanish pageantry, will be quiet this year. Thousands of visitors from all over the world crowded the city for the occasion, and hotels, restaurants, etc., prospered accordingly. This year Seville has no more than its share of tourists.

In Palma, too, the ceremony has been impressive and beautiful. As the long procession wound slowly through the city, the streets were illuminated with the lights of thousands of candles carried by the marchers. The robes, the floats representing scenes from the Passion and the masked figures passed slowly by and the pageantry gradually dwindled into the distance until it appeared to be no more than a parade to flickering stars moving up the street.

Converts in their robes of white attest the sincerity of their conversion. Invalids restored to health during the last year mark their gratitude to God by joining in the procession in His name. And at the end come the penitents who are fulfilling vows made for all sorts of reasons and in all sorts of queer ways.

This is, of course, the season of most devout observance. People who go to church at no other time will be at the Cathedral during these next two weeks, and even the most modish of señoritas will abandon her Paris model hats for the vastly more becoming comb and mantilla of traditional Spain.

LATEST NEWS.

London.—The sharp rise in the pound sterling during the last week has been observed with great excitement in the City. There has even been some talk of a return to the gold standard, but this is not considered probable or desirable by a large section of the business community. In some quarters the rise is interpreted as an expression of foreign confidence in the National Government. The Bank of England has lowered the discount rate from five to four per cent.

Paris.—The funeral of Aristide Briand, nine times Foreign Minister of France and the country's greatest worker for the peace of the world, was held Saturday. Scores of thousands of people waited for hours to pass before the body where it lay in state at the Foreign Office for several days. A national funeral was accorded M. Briand, and a group of Socialists plan to introduce a measure providing for his eventual burial in the Pantheon although the statesman left instructions that he be interred in the Cemetery of Cocherel.

New York.—The small son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has not yet been restored, although the aviator is in communication with the kidnapers for payment of the 50,000 dollars demanded. A number of well known gangsters and bootleggers have followed the example of Al Capone in offering their services for the recovery of the child.

Dublin.—The newly elected Dail met for the first time on Thursday and elected Eamon de Valera, the republican leader, as President of the Irish Free State. Mr. de Valera immediately formed his Cabinet, retaining for himself the portfolio of foreign affairs.

Berlin.—The Presidential election campaign is sweeping to its close amidst tremendous excitement and all the indications point to an unusually heavy vote. It is believed certain that President von Hindenburg will be re-elected with Adolf Hitler, Nationalist candidate, second and Thaelmann, the communist, third. However, all parties are campaigning with unprecedented vigor and expressing complete confidence.

Sidney, Australia.—Three hundred thousand signatures have been obtained to a petition to the King for the dissolution of the Labor Government in New South Wales headed by Premier Lang.

Eastern Peace Possibilities

Shanghai.—Since the cessation of active hostilities on a large scale last week, there is some hope that the Japanese and Chinese representatives, now negotiating for restoration of the peace which has never officially been broken, will reach an accord on the disputed points.

However, the Chinese are still maintaining that there can be no definite settlement as long as Japanese troops remain on Chinese soil.

The Hague.—The Japanese Consulate here was attacked Friday night by a band of communists shouting "Down with the Japanese Government." Some damage was done to the building before the police dispersed the crowd.

Toledo.—The strikes which had been tying up industry in this city have ended. All classes of workers have gone back to their jobs and the city is entirely tranquil after the excitement.

Granada.—It has been decided to abandon the traditional Easter procession for this year, and the colorful spectacle will be replaced by ceremonies within the Cathedral.

La Feria de Ramos--The Mallorquin Fair.

ALONG the Avenida de Alejandro Rosselló, from the railway station to the sea front, wooden and canvas booths, merry-go-rounds, miniature scenic railways and all the other mechanical devices that are the attractions of a County Fair were erected last week for the Feria de Ramos which begins tomorrow (Monday).

It takes its name from Palm Sunday, which is called Domingo de Ramos in Spanish, and is the first of the local Easter celebrations. It continues for eight days when activities cease until Easter Saturday, and then are resumed for another eight days. This way of bringing the Lenten season to a close is distinctly Mallorquin and is one of the oldest and most closely observed customs among the people on the island.

A Camp of Peasants

For days the country roads leading into Palma are crowded with vehicles of every description carrying household effects and families on their annual pilgrimage to the Fair. There are old men and women from the hills who cannot remember having ever missed the Easter festival in the city, and they bring with them their children and grandchildren, to whom the trip is a tradition. Many of them live in their carts gipsy fashion, in the vicinity of the Fair, and they make a colorful picture in their peasant costumes as they wander along the broad avenue between the booths. Up to this year the Fair has always been held along the Rambla, but the protests of the shopkeepers on that avenue has at last become effective. For years they complained that these festivities interfered with their business, but the Avenida Alejandro Rosselló is given over to warehouses, motor car agencies, etc., which cannot be affected.

There will be an elaborate display of fireworks, including such attractions as a castle of fire, and a military band will give popular concerts daily in the Plaza Eusebio Estada. You can test your strength with a weight thrower, shoot clay ducks with a pop gun, have your fortune told by a dusky eyed maid from Valencia, or content yourself simply with a lucky draw. The booths are colorfully decorated with flags and streamers, and tempt the passersby with everything from local sweets to Oriental works of art. Young and old try their luck at mechanical horse racing and grab bags, and the gaiety continues from noon till midnight while the aristocracy and peasants share the thrill of a roller coaster or a tobaggan slide.

Some of the booths are operated for the benefit of local charities by young women who otherwise lead the usual cloistered life in homes where the old Spanish traditions are still obeyed. Others are run as a business proposition and for this a great number of people come each year from Valencia. They also live on the grounds of the Fair, generally keeping house in back of their own particular booth. In their part of Spain the approach of Easter is celebrated in the form of a procession of elaborate floats. These are constructed of cardboard and paper, sometimes on a framework of light wood, and are expensively decorated. Some of them cost as much as several thousand pesetas to make. After being paraded through the streets, they are burned in one huge bonfire.

A Signal for Rejoicing

In Palma when the morning services are over on Easter Saturday, N'Eloy, the big bell in the Cathedral, gives its signal for rejoicing for the Resurrection. This enormous bronze is so heavy that it takes ten men to ring it, and it must be tolled slowly so that the vibrations of its sonorous tones will not shatter the windows in the neighborhood, as has occasionally happened in the past when this precaution has not been observed. The bells in all the churches on the island ring furiously and in every home some kind of music can be heard. Motor cars blow their horns, children sing out gaily in the streets, and only N'Eloy could drown the noise.

It is in keeping with an old Mallorquin custom that in every home that can afford it, a lamb is killed at this time and the occasion is further celebrated by the serving of Panades—a small meat pie filled with lamb. Every Mallorquin girl is taught to make this delicacy and on the morning of Easter Saturday they are exchanged between neighbors as a token of friendship. When the booths open on that day, they have these pastries for sale.

Mallorquin Dancing.

During the winter and spring, when most of the visitors are in Mallorca, the dances typical of the countryside are rarely to be seen. Most of the fiestas of which the dances form a principal part are held in the summer.

However, some of the best performers on the island are available all the year round and four of them, the "Boleros Mallorquines" will be at Victor's Snack Bar on next Thursday, St. Patrick's Day. The dancers, two of whom are shown in the accompanying illustration, are of course dressed in their local costumes. They are attended by an orchestra of three — one man playing a miniature bagpipe, another operating a small horn and a drum simultaneously, and the third making great play with the castanets.

The Boleras Mallorquinas have also served as models for paintings which Mrs. Power has done of Mallorquin dancers and which she will exhibit in New York.

Letters from Readers.

To the Editor,

This is my first visit to the lovely island of Mallorca. But one's pleasure is marred by the treatment one sees accorded to birds and animals. It is on their behalf that I am sending this letter to the press in the hope that something may be done to mitigate their sufferings. Since I came here I have noticed birds, especially partridges, confined in cages in which they could hardly move. The cages also kept in a foul condition. Mules and horses worked with galls and sores on them and otherwise decrepit. Carts very much overloaded, and if the poor animal refuses to move it he is unmercifully beaten. Our ideas as to the treatment of animals have improved very much all over the world in the last few years, so why should Mallorca be backward in this respect? Animals and birds have just as much right to this world as we have, so why inflict pain and make their lives miserable? Animals and birds respond very much if kindness is shown to them.

I understand that there is a large English and American Colony in Palma. It would not be a difficult matter to form a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals with the help of the Government and influential Spanish ladies and gentlemen. I would also suggest that children in schools and in their homes should be taught that they are to be kind to animals. The carters who unmercifully beat and overload their animals forget that these animals earn their bread for them.

I sincerely trust that some steps will be taken to remedy this evil.

Packing for Paradise.

The hardships and sacrifices of exploration parties in jungle and on desert never fail to thrill—when experienced between the covers of a well written book. To be sure, the thrill would increase tenfold to some of the more adventurous spirits were the experience to be an actual one. But the average person prefers to explore in comparative comfort. And why not?

When you set out on the glorious adventure of a trip—across unknown seas where people and customs are strange, or just to the next town some fifteen miles away—the success and pleasure of the journey depends largely on whether or not you have traveled in comfort. And in this, the importance of the right kind of luggage cannot be overlooked.

Not so many years ago the least pleasant part of a holiday was the bother of packing. Since traveling has become more universal, luggage manufacturers have left no stone unturned to make that phase of the trip less of a trial. It may be a de luxe tour or a freighter for experience—shops in nearly all parts of the world offer receptacles for everything from a bath sponge to riding boots.

The wardrobe trunk is generally considered an absolute necessity but there's the traveler who tours the Continent for a year with only a couple of bags. Around the world in ninety days is much less of a feat to some people than packing in a limited space the necessary habiliments for such a trip. Part of the secret lies in the selection of the luggage that is to hold the numberless accessories—these vary with the individual—that vagaries of climate and fashion compel one to carry with them. Before leaving New York for Lake Paradise, and experienced world traveler packed in her trunk, to the amusement of those who think of Central Africa in terms of sun helmets and shorts, a couple of evening gowns and a pair of long white kid gloves as well as flannel shirts, breeches and field boots. Past experience had taught her that she would need them all.

Bags long enough to hold the extra suit or the latest Paris creation when folded in half, thus avoiding unsightly creases at the end of the journey are a great asset. And a smaller one for bottles and other breakables that can be carried in the hand while the heavier luggage is left to the tender mercies a porter, often relieves the nervous strain.

Lentejas

The lowly lentil can be made to tempt the most jaded palate if served as it is in Spain. Madrid claims it as her specialty, but lentils are among the lowest priced foods all over the world and very little culinary ability is needed if these directions are followed:

Fry together:

- 1 tablespoon of oil (or butter).
- 1 sliced onion.
- A bit of garlic.

Add 5 small tomatoes, a pinch of red pepper and enough vinegar to make a thick sauce.

Pour over the cooked lentils and let simmer over a slow fire for about 5 minutes.

This makes a satisfying dish for four hearty eaters, and when ketchup or tomato sauce is served with them, they are an excellent substitute for the well known Boston baked bean.
