WHEELS WITHIN WHEELS

ITH the formal retirement from the House of Commons of Mr. Thomas and Sir Alfred Butt, the unfortunate situation surrounding the Budget disclosures is generally considered to be cleared up. Mr. Baldwin, more sensitive to the magnitude of the leakage than perhaps other members of the Government, in giving the two fallen angels a fond farewell, announced that «these doors are closed on them for ever.» And the matter is supposed to rest there. Apart from the personal feelings of Mr. Thomas (Sir Alfred seemed to take things more lightly), which were those of a man to whom a great injustice has been done, it is hard to understand how such an integral body as the British Lower Chamber could accept the findings of the Select Committee as final. Ostensibly a regrettable scandal has been prevented, leaving everything in the garden more beautiful than ever. Actually two men, both of whom proclaim their innocence, have been forced to behave as convicted persons and retire from Parliament. The paradoxical side to this question is that as the matter was not put before a judicial Tribunal, neither of them can appeal, or attempt to prove the innocence they both claim. Admitted that at the present moment a scandal of the smallest magnitude would be most unwelcome in England, nevertheless it seems a pity not to probe to the bottom of this affair and, by publishing a full and adequate report, ease the tension of the taxpayers. Viewing the whole affaire from a distance, without the corrosive guiding influence of the British press, it certainly looks as if the two scapegoats had been wildly chosen in the dark. Nobody nowadays expects to find irregularities completely absent from party politics, and this expression of injured dignity on the part of so many public men of Britain is hardly convincing. When one takes into account the activity in the City of London for providing a German loan and compares this with official statements, it is hard to believe that anything but financial gain really matters in a world where Mammon is king again. After all, if we think these things in our heads, why should we object to seeing them in print? That most people have been rudely disillusioned regarding political integrity dur-

KANSAS CANDIDATE

For the first time in the history of the country, if we are not mistaken, the candidate presented by one of the two great Americans parties for the Presidency is a Kansan. There have been a good many distinguished men who claimed the state of Kansas as their home, but Alfred Mossman Landon, when he was the only Republican governor to win re-election against the Roosevelt landslide of 1934, emerged suddenly into the higher ranks of favourite sons, from a comparative obscurity in which he was doing a quietly businesslike job.

There is little that is sensational about the nominee, although the platform adopted at Cleveland has a few planks that give opportunity for him to develop in that direction. He is fundamentally a solid citizen, with all which the term implies, an experienced and level headed man of business without eccentricities of the kind so unfortunately prevalent just now among prominent politicians everywhere. Kansas was one of the few states to balance her budget for 1935, and Governor Landon very practically told the world about it, over the radio, but he did not think it necessary to include in his speech anything smacking either of the jazz tempo of certain recent Congressional exploits, or of the sentimental crooning of the New Dealers.

Those who regret the passing of the gold standard are daring to smile and hope. Opponents of Washington extravagance dream of a curb on Congressional appropriations for all the letters of the alphabet in groups that suggest college fraternities. If the Republican party has any chance to oust the charming idealist who will undoubtedly be renominated with acclaim by the Democrats, they have chosen a standardbearer whose slogan may well be that of sound commonsense, and who will probably carry them further towards victory than could any other. «Alf» Landon has the dramatic appeal of the «dark horse,» but he lets most other forms of political drama severely alone. It remains to be seen whether the country is weary of Brain-Trusts and capital letters, and the next four months will be lived at a high tension in the United States, but we, at this distance, can at least feel that neither candidate is a «setup,» and that the campaign will be fought between opponents both of whom are of full calibre to fill the Presidential chair.

THE PEOPLE'S OLYMPIAD

n July 22nd the inauguration will take place in Barcelona of the People's Olympiad, which athletes from all countries, and especially those barred from participation in the Berlin Games, have promised to attend. The organizing Committee admits that it has been surprised by the enormous number of entries received, and consequently a great deal of hard work must be done before arrangements will be perfect. An elaborate programme of events, which includes everything from swimming and rugby to the folk-dancing and singing, has been prepared. It is expected that there will be a very large influx of foreigners into Barcelona for the Olympiad and preparations are being made to accommodate them as well as possible. Thus has sport sadly become a victim of that it was intended to combat—ill-feeling and despotism—and Arnold of Rugby would probably tear his hair at the sight of the Barcelona and Berlin Games being turned into banners for Socialism and Fascism respectively. The least we can do is wish them all luck, that the best men may win and if sport is to be a victim of politics that with its dying breath it may instil into both competitors and organizers some vague idea of the brotherhood of man. The shadow of Piltdown is still too near to hope for more.

ing these last few years is a definite fact. An extensive investigation into the Budget and other less visible scandals seems to be the only course that fairplay dictates. Mr. Baldwin's position may have been strengthened by the prompt action taken in the matter of the Budget leakage, and by the results of this, but isn't it about time that personal positions were pushed into the background and that Britain endeavours to decide what she wants to do, and why? The list of vague, unanswerable questions despatched to the Nazi Government will not help, and is on a par with the ridiculous and painful position in which Sir Alfred Butt and Mr. J. Thomas have been obliged to find themselves. It is up to Mr. Baldwin to make, not his own position, but that of Britain clear to the many who will find in it an anchor and, perhaps, a hope.

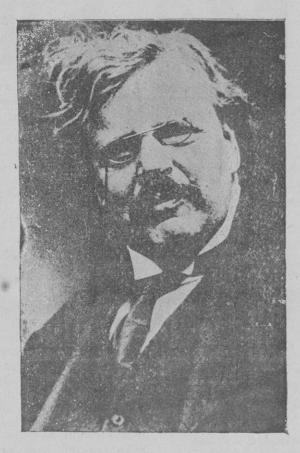

RAY BARBER

Mr. G. K. CHESTERTO

GILBERT Keith Chesterton, one of the chief figures in contemporary literature, in almost every species of which he had shown himself an adept, died last Sunday after a short illness at his home, Top Meadow, Beaconsfield, at the age of 62.

He had been writing steadily for the last 40 years, and his death is one of the greatest losses in the world of literature. From 1887 to 1892 Chesterton went to St. Paul's School; he left with the prize for English verse, and a reputation, not afterwards belied, for being a genius of an altogether higher order than most clever boys. Right up to the time of his marriage, and thanks to the devotion of his mother and the literary and artistic interests of his father, Chesterton's home life was such that he could indulge to the utmost his bent for witty talk, high argument and wide and serious reading. For a few months he studied art at the Slade School, and the drawings which he made for his friend Mr. E.C. Bentley's verses of potted biography must be familiar to many. His massive figure became the butt of the cartoonist, which he thoroughly enjoyed with complete good nature. His energy like a complete catalogue of his works would be next to impossible. One of his most outstandachieveing ments, written at the age of 30, was «Napoleon of Notting Hill.» As a journalist, he kept up for more than a generation a punctual weekly article in the Illustrated London News, and this side of him led him to publish a large number of volumes of essays —the last came out this month -under such and versatility

were amazing,

typical titles as «What's Wrong with the World?» «All I Survey,» «Tremendous Trifles.» He was an able playwright, and, in an age teeming with detectives, his detective Father Brown holds his own for his peculiarly Chestertonian methods and logic.

In his youth Chesterton knew the Bible better than most young men, but his home atmosphere suggested Liberalism and a suspension of theological belief rather than any form of ecclesiastical orthodoxy. A change, however, came over him in this respect when he was received in 1922 into the Church of Rome; and from that time onwards his point of view was regulated largely by that of the Church of his adoption. Politically-and he was always much interested in politics, being anything but a man of mere literature—it was often difficult to label him; but, broadly, he was on the side of the angels, in that he believed in personal liberty as against the mechanization of society.

Chesterton was a traveller who stoutly held to his conviction that travel narrowed the mind. He finished writing his autobiography only two months ago. He had worked on it for about six months, and as soon as it was completed he took his wife and secretary for a motor tour in France. Much sympathy will be felt for Mrs. Chesterton after 35 years of married companionship.

ABOUT BARCELONA

The Gneisenau proved so popular on Monday, when she called in here, that she took with her to England Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Henderson, and daughter Marjorie; Mrs. Alec Gardner, Mrs. Alex-ander Miller; Mrs. Cotton; Mrs. Fern and her two children and, bound for Germany, Mrs. Behrens, mother-in-law of Mrs. Elsa Marx Behrens..... for New York, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Lewis and family left at short notice aboard the Manhattan, and for the same destination Mr. and Mrs. Joe Escuder flew to Madrid and Sevilla to embark on the Navemar.... all of which will leave a gap in the social whirl, so to speak... Arrivals present and immediate include Mme. Jeanne Compieigne, the French diseuse, who is arranging to stay chez Miss Bailey; and Mr. and Mrs. Copeland, of U.S.A., who will make their home in Barcelona for some time to come..... A virtually flying visit was paid to this city by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Latz, of New York.... travelling to Europe on the «Hindenburg» in forty-six hours, they then flew to London, Paris, Monte-Carlo, Barcelona, Madrid and Sevilla, taking the Rex from Gibraltar back to New York..... Mr. Latz was enthusiastic about the flying conditions on the Zeppelin, no vibration, no discomfort, «not a sound was heard, nor a funeral note,» as it were.....from Ibiza, Mrs. Yvonne Rogers arrived en route for Paris and New York, also.... a strange and unusual visitor was Mr. Narriman P. Mistri, Parsee globe-trotter who has been travelling for three years.... his Harley-Davidson has been butted by a rhinoceros, which ate the lighting fixtures, and by a tiger which tried to eat the driver, unsuccessfully..... undaunted, Mr. Mistri is now

Lancaster, late of Bilbao..... also in Bilbao, the Amateur Players gave a successful rendering of «A Little Bit of Fluff,» in aid of the Seamen's Institute... Entertaining, on the whole, has been general rather than private..... The Baseball Union gave a farewell dinner to Mr. Leslie Lewis.... the «Arbol de Noël» gave its promised verbena at the Font del Lleó, and in the floor-show Miss Dorothy Cinnamond distinguished herself as a tap-dancer, scoring a bull'seye with Cheek to Cheek.... the Barcelona Lawn Tennis Club gives its annual gala on Tuesday night, St. John's Eve. Nearly everybody is going, as usual..... The Turo Tennis Club gave an original verbena on Thursday, with two bands, and all the fun of the air the Treasure Hunt which Society is giving-postponed from last week—is to take place today and all the Bright Young Things are sick with excitement over it.... the American Women's Committee organized a recital at the Sala Mozart on Thursday, which was in the way of a farewell to Mrs. Jean Stockton Schaefer, who sang delightfully.... Mlle. Barulina danced attractively also... we should have given an advance announcement of this, had we been advised..... General notes include the Dog Show at Montjuich, the arrival of a dachshund by air from Palma for Mr. R. Surridge; the appearance of a young liner in port, called Warrior, carrying the American flag and passing as a yacht; and Mrs. Wurfel's brilliant graphological readings - she can read the writing on everybody's wall; the opening of a new Pension in Madrid, Calle Fernando el Santo, owner Mr. Powers, late of Villa Isabel, Bonanova; the inauguration of the Majorca Restaurant, at 15 Brewer St., Piccadilly, London—the Spanish owners have taken waiters from Barcelona's Oro del Rhin; Miss Sherwin's remarkable chutney which the colony is fighting for; the Patum de Berga, a fiesta attended by some tasteful colonyites; Col. Herrera's attempt to reach the stratosphere from Madrid; Miss Ethel Alderson's clever dancing at the Novedades this week, and a welter of other activities which space won't allow us to print. Finally, and specially, to congratulate Consul and Mrs. Daniel Braddock on their appointment to Caracas, Venezuela.. we shall miss them.

Dear Sir,

May I use your columns again, concerning my recent enquiry as to whether or not the Atlantic has ever been successfully flown from east to west, against the prevailing winds?

I am extremely grateful to your correspondents, Luella Davidson and John Dunn (I regret I do not know how to prefix their names), for the interesting information which they offer on the subject. However, I still find myself in search of definite chapter and verse, as it seems to me that the aviators your correspondents mention, although undoubtedly succeeding in their attempts to cross the Atlantic from east to west, still did not do so against the prevailing winds, as it appears they were forced considerably out of the direct route.

Can anybody be good enough to give me further and conclusive data? I would be most grateful.

Yours, etc.

To:—The Editor:

Now that the bathing season is here again, I am writing to see if some small amount of propaganda cannot be started which might lead to making the bathing spots near Palma more agreeable for the woman bather. As it is at present, a woman alone cannot seat herself on the beach before being surrounded by a group of noisy and unpleasant youths. It is distinctly embarrassing and does, I am sure, keep many from enjoying the bathing in which Mallorca excells.

SPORT

POLO:

The American Side showed grand form in their trial matches and the results of the West-chester Cup so far are very encouraging for the future of the game. POLO is a matter of PONIES and the visitors are superbly mounted; PONIES and the visitors are superbly mounted; the home side mainly up on borrowed ponies gave an excellent account of themselves in the first match. Still, I think the Cup will remain on the other side of the Herring Pond until Great Britain gets ponies as well as players. The ancient Persians made other useful things besides carpets: it was the custom to play with the head of an enemy... with a little tent-pegging on the side

RACING:

Ascot... without Brown Jack? Well, we have Ascotish weather... weather. It seems that rain and favourites are in favour. The French Derby was yet another proof that horses are like Punch—an excellent thing on paper. Now there is the Leger to look forward to!

ATHLETICS:

The programme for the Peoples' Olympiad is nothing if not ambitious. There seems to be a little of everything except golf... naturally the shortage of time and the difficulties of transport are against the organizers. Berlin appears to be crystallizing out nicely. It is to be hoped that neither of these events will be used for political propaganda. An English team once came to play Rugby in Cork and the hooker complained his opposite number was biting him in the scrums; the referee, who was non-Aryan, listened very patiently and said, «Ven you came heah ze next time come on ze Friday!»

London Letter

London has never seen anything quite like it before, this International Sur-realist Exhibition which has just opened at the New Burlington Galleries. For one thing, London does not quite know how to take it. We should, really, be slightly bemused to have to admit it, but the fact remains that London, in a general sense, has never before had much conception of sur-realism except to know it as one of these new-fangled doodads in the world of art.

As things stand, with this exhibition on our doorstep, the town does not quite know whether it ought to be scornful, earnest, or superior. When you see a series of pastel dots and dashes which you find is entitled «Head of a Catalan Peasant» it is difficult to know just what to do about it except to mutter vaguely about it being interesting and then pass on to the next. Even our brightest newspaper writers have had to resort to rewriting some of the preface in the exhibition catalogue to get their story across, which accounts for those puzzling references you may have seen to Lewis Carroll and William Blake. Those names are at least comprehensible to most of our dear public.

Between ourselves, the exhibition is not quite what it ought to be. It is so very much a demonstration of what surrealism is not, which, perhaps, is another way of saying there is too much of it. Those queer objects which smack so dismally of a grim determination to be odd are, alas, only too thoroughly in evidence. Paris would have laughed at it, Vienna would never have had it, but at least it is something to have had it at all in London, oddities and all.

The good news was allowed to break at the end of the week that Anthony Eden is not to resign. Political soothsayers were hinting pretty broadly that the return to the cabinet of Sir Samuel («Pilgrim») Hoare, in addition to being the righting of one of Mr. Baldwin's most grievous blunderings, represented the adoption of an international policy contrary to that conceived by Mr. Eden.

The plain truth is that, while the beautiful idealism of sanctions is still cherished, their application is a matter of some reality, much of it pretty indigestible. Which explains the «midsummer madness» speech of Mr. Neville Chamberlain («an expression of personal opinion», but not rejected by the government), explains the blind eve turned to the presence here of the Emperor of Abyssinia, and explains official brooding over a Mediterranean naval pact. Who with? Why, our traditional friend and gallant ally, Italy, of course.

During the past couple of weeks something like 150,000 pairs of coloured spectacles, have been distributed to spectacles have been distributed to audiences at the Leicester Square Empire eager to sample the new threedimensional films which are called «audioscopicks.» It is rather like the stereoscopes through which we used to look at postcards in grandmother's parlour, but animated and audible. Inventor is Dr. Herbert E. Ives, who appears to have spent some years on research into this question of depth in films and photographs.

What this country needs, though, is a lot more than a mere 150,000 rosecoloured spectacles. Ask Mr. Baldwin, if you don't believe me.

HERE AND THERE

Midsummer madness has come without the heat. The other day we saw an intriguing motor van, painted bright yellow. On the sides it bore the words «Kiss-Me». We thought that was too much of a good thing, so we took a look in at the back to see what was the osculatory merchandise it carried. The back doors were open and all one could see were two life size plaster casts of kangaroos, gazing appallingly into the gathering dusk. The van was stationed in the Calle Provenza, in case anyone would like to check up on us.

We like the sound of Congressman Zioncheck. His name is a novel in itself, and smacks of pogroms and Mittel-Europa. We also like the idea of his being elected to Congress since he reflects the will, we suppose, of his constituency, which must be a jolly sort of section of the world. Mr. Zioncheck also has a very fine torso, and has given Georgetown a run for its voteless money.

We learn from the New Yorker that the Negus was not permitted to land in England, and that Barcelona celebrated her Musical Congress between revolutions. Britain seems to have fallen en masse for the story of the Bogey Man, and as for Barcelona, a bursting tyre might well have disturbed a self-conscious symphony, except that it would have been hard to hear above the calculated racket which took place at the Congress.

Sitting over our vermouth yesterday we saw a boy passing who carried a large octopus at arm's length. We shuddered and let him pass by on the other side. We watched how he went into the entrance of a cinema, tapped at the ticket window and waited. Soon an arm reached out, took the octopus, closed the shutter, and, presumably, remained alone with death. Another mystery of the silver screen.

PALMA

Earl de la Warr, Parliamentary under-secretary, War Office, from 1929—30, Parliamentary Secretary, Minister of Agriculture, Deputy Master of Fisheries since 1930, and Lord-in-waiting to His Late Majesty, King George V., has bought about 41,000 metres of land near Cala Monjo, with the intention of building a home there.

Another land buyer is Mr. Watson, Chairman of the Burma Oil Company. He has purchased 40 acres or so, near Camp de Mar, which he intends to present to his daughter.

Baron and Baroness Albert Sadoine did not to arrive yesterday, as expected, as due to strikes in Barcelona they could not ship their car with them.

At Traut's, on Wednesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Edwards gave a very gay cocktail party to several of their friends, including Señor Don Leopoldo Saro, Señor Don Rafael Mazarreno (one of the few private aeroplane owners in Mallorca), Major Charles Gilson, Mr. and Mrs. Morton, Mrs. Crockwell, whose husband is in the Foreign Office, Dr. Stirling and Mr. Laseur, one of Holland's foremost theatrical celebrities.

Mr. and Mrs. Talcott Camp had a group of friends in for a quiet game of poker last Saturday evening. A good time was had by all and no casualties were reported.

Mr. J. D. Rickard has taken Son Semola for the summer months. This is the delightful house in Bonanova formerly occupied by Lady Brentford and more recently by Miss MacNeill.

Mr. Peter Richards, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A.Richards of Bonanova, is here on a visit with his parents. He is on his way to the Far East on business and will be here only until the 26th.

Apply: Miss Flood, Calle Bonanova 72, Terreno, Palma de Mallorca. Healthy central location. Mrs. L. H. Clay with her daughterin-law, Mrs. Noble Clay, are leaving Tuesday for a month or so in the Pyrennees. From weather reports it may be a bit late for skating but there still should be some good ski-ing to be had.

GOWNS

Mr. Saunders, who has been here for more than a year making all kinds of measurements for the great new turbine which the local Gas and Electric Company is securing from America, is leaving in July, his labours completed. The first bit of the turbine arrived early in the week, weighing twenty-one tons, and was unloaded with great difficulty.

Mr. Peter Owen will be returning shortly from his holiday in England. Mrs. Owen is staying on until the fall.

Several cases of «Mallorquin tummy» have been reported. The best of all cures for this ailment is to take a few of the cachets prepared especially for this malady by D. Domingo Femenías, of the Pharmacy Femenías in Terreno. They are infallible.

At the Royal is Mr. Alfred Neale, who is the London representative of the large Parisian wool house of Vens.

Mrs. Lindemann leaves today for Marseilles with her small daughter, who will spend the summer in a camp in southern France.

Mrs. Young, wife of Mr. Young of the real estate development at Paguera, arrived during the week to spend a holiday here.

The French yacht, Robur II, arrived last week from Formentor. During the three days here the owner, Count Hubert de Rouvre, gave a cocktail party for Baron and Baroness de Heckeren and Mr. and Mrs. Selz.

Miss Judith May Horn, who writes for several English and American papers, left for Barcelona after having secured material for a series of articles on the Balearic Islands.

Mrs. Barlow was hostess at a tea party at Ca Vostra for Mr. and Mrs. Selz and Princess Narischkine. Princess Narischkine was recently in a serious accident with her car, and, though she escaped unburt, the car is so badly damaged that she and Mrs. Barlow are staying over for another six weeks pending its repair.

Miss Florence N. Steffy is staying at the Grand Hotel... At Ca Vostra are Miss Eva Niedermayer of Vienna, Sr. Conrado Climent of Madrid, Miss McLachlan and Miss Henshaw from London and Miss C.M. Dixon.

It is with deep regret that we announce the death, in Palma after an operation, of Don Felipe Bellini, of Puerto de Pollensa. Señor Bellini was extremely popular with all the residents of the puerto, who offer sincere condolences to his widow.

Mrs. Massey left for England on the Gneisenau on Tuesday morning. She will spend the summer in England, and may return to this Island in the fall.... Major and Mrs. Chanter arrived back on Tuesday after spending four months in England... Mr. and Mrs. Bowen-Rowlands, with the latter's sister, Miss Winter, and her niece, Miss Athey, left for England by the Nederland boat yesterday... Mrs. Grubbs, one of the first foreign residents in the puerto, has returned after more than a year's visit to the United States... Señor de Creft, the Spanish sculptor who is well known both in Spain and America, is another arrival from the States. His wife and two small children spent the winter in La Huerta....

There Ought To Be a Law-

We're tired of writing social gossip and then reading it slightly changed around in other sheets, so it was a treat to read some real social news from a small midwestern paper that a friend sent us from the States. From the «Swamp Center Bugle and Advertiser» we culled the following bits of human interest:—

«Lew Hawkins and the Mrs. drove into town from their place on Friday. They did some shopping and had dinner at the Commercial House. She had the old halter on Lew and we hear that he didn't get away for a single drink. Better come alone next time, Lew.»

«We hear Ed Doolittle ain't too satisfied with the police dog he bought and was going to make a bird dog out of. The bird part is all right, says Ed, but he hasn't no discrimination. So far he hasn't missed a chicken yet.»

«There's a new baby out at Joel Renter's place. A girl, Joel's fourth. Tough luck, Joel. Keep atrying.»

«Number 5 from the East was half an hour late on Wednesday but left off a passenger for here just the same. It was Mr. J.C. Spregg from New York City, hardware, farm tools and wire fence. Welcome to Swamp Center, Mr. Spregg, come again.»

«The Sears Roebuck catalogues arrived at last. They was nearly two weeks late this year and there was pretty near a crisis.»

«The Tuesday Afternoon Ladies' Club will meet next Wednesday at Mrs. Sloat's house. Mrs. Henry Swilf will read an article on the War in Abysinnia. Her cousin in New York City knows somebody that was over there a few years ago. Mrs. Sloat will have tea ready and like always the ladies will bring their own sandwiches because it's the hired girl's afternoon out.»

«There's going to be a dance at the Odd Fellow's Hall next Saturday night. Ladies admitted free and it will cost each gent two bits. The town band has been practicing all last week and is all set to give us some of the latest tunes. Dancing 8-12. Everybody has got to wear a coat and the constable's got orders to put anybody out that don't behave. Adv.»

«'Pop' Nichols says that he is going to run for Sheriff again this fall on an independent ticket. Well, good luck, Pop, you've got our vote.»
