

SPAIN, RESURGENT

Country, Once an Example of How the Mighty Fall, Is Now Rising Again to an Influential Place in the World.

LIFE in Spain for the permanent resident or for the casual visitor takes on an increasing interest by watching the gradual resurgence of this country into the ranks of important European powers. Slowly but none the less surely the nation is resuming a position from which it sank centuries ago.

During all this intervening time, Spain has been held up to the rest of the world as the horrible example of great power which has degenerated. From the mightiest nation on earth she descended to the third rate class, and why? Dozens of explanations were offered, designed to fit the moral the explainer wished to point.

The Rise

But while the moralists were elaborating their theses, Spain has unostentatiously risen in the world's scale. We no longer hear much about a third rate country. A power of the second rank is now the talk, and more respect is paid in international gatherings than for generations past to the views of Madrid.

Perhaps even more symptomatic of the change is the importance of Spain in other than political fields. Spanish literature, art and music, Spanish architecture, Spanish philosophy and scholarship are perhaps second to none. Spain's importance in the business world is rapidly increasing, and if she lags anywhere it is most pronounced in the world of science, and even this is rapidly improving.

The causes of the rise of Spain are to be found in the conditions of a post-war world. Touched less than the combatants by the devastation, the country was able to exert her energies to some purpose. These years have witnessed the modernization of the land, and in little more than a decade, the people have come abreast of modern thought.

In a civilization exhausted by war, armed force counted for less than usual. This was fortunate, for Spain is not and in the predictable future cannot be a great military power. In a period of peace, it is the peaceful arts that count, and this country was given an opportunity of showing her progress in this respect.

She developed so rapidly that, although almost completely ignored during the organization of the League of Nations, for example, her spokesmen are now nearly as influential as those of the great powers. In large part this is due to the eloquence and abilities of Don Salvador de Madriaga, one of the foremost diplomats living, who represents his Government in Paris and has headed the Spanish delegation at Geneva.

Not long ago anyone who expressed Spain's aspiration to share in the government of the world would have been considered an amusing visionary. But when Sr. de Madriaga recently declared that such participation was Spain's duty, it was deemed an obviously reasonable statement.

Furthermore, the Government is not slow to recognize the value of such work as the Ambassador has been doing. At its last session the Council of Ministers voted to bestow upon him the ribbon of the new Order of the Republic, and he will be the first diplomat to be so honored.

Industrially, it is obvious, Spain has further to travel than in international politics or cultural pursuits. But she is aware of that fact, and the growth of Barcelona is a plain indication of what can be expected in the future. Technical skill and organizing ability are generally lacking, perhaps, but the Spaniard is learning from his neighbors.

Leadership

It may be true that this country has neither the resources nor the size to play an important role economically. But there is nothing to prevent her from assuming, as she seems to have been doing of late years, the leadership of all Spanish speaking nations. When that time comes, we may expect to see Spain the head of a federation as powerful as her lost empire and more permanent.

Men who have lived for many years in the land are never tired of describing how times have changed since they were young and first visited this still slumbering nation. Of course all the other countries have changed a good deal, too, but in proportion Spain has kept up with them.

Her educational system, then almost exclusively in the hands of a church which did not aim at practical learning, has been organized on more secular and progressive lines.

The spirit of the people, once opposing a passive resistance to all innovations, is now extremely receptive. The majority of Spaniards are no longer afraid or indifferent or even scornful in the face of modernism.

The Ghastly Dew

Mr. Reginald Glossop, late of the 7th Dragoon Guards and now of Arenal, has brought to Mallorca his really amazing novel, The Ghastly Dew. Published by the author, the book is a study of the horrors that may attend the next war if science gets a free hand to develop instruments of death.

The book depicts the havoc wrought by Eastern hordes, and Mr. Glossop takes the complete destruction of all England (8 survivors) in his stride. It is a happy ending, however, for the eight include the hero, heroine and comic characters, and Canada rushes to the rescue to drive the invaders back.

Mr. Glossop does not use the polished rapier of literary faultlessness; rather he bludgeons the reader into accepting what now seems so fantastic. One terrific incident after another is told quite calmly; it is only in the love passages that Mr. Glossop waxes lyric. Yes, The Ghastly Dew is an amazing book.

Guild to Have General Meeting

A general meeting of the Palma Theatre Guild will be held at the Trocadero next Thursday, November 10th, at four o'clock. The aims and activities of that organization will be discussed and active, associate and prospective members are invited to attend.

In addition to an informal report of the producer which will tell of the progress of rehearsals now under way for the Guild's initial production of the season, The Maltese Falcon, Miss Lucile Luttrell will address the meeting. Miss Luttrell has been with the subscription department of the New York Theatre Guild since its early days and is now here on a vacation. During her stay she has become intensely interested in the local Guild which was started last Spring and has closely followed its activities and its vicissitudes.

The various officers will explain the work of the Guild to date, and plans for the future will be discussed, whereupon active members will be given an opportunity to exercise their voting privilege. Tea will be served.

Story

The December issue of Story appeared during the week, to our mind one of the best numbers since it has been published in Palma, although none of the stories were written by authors now resident on the island. One, however, is by Charles Kendall O'Neill, who was until the end of the summer living in Alcudia.

One reason for our enjoyment of this issue is that it has not that preoccupation with children which has been evident in previous numbers. The stories maintain the style that has made this Edward O'Brien's favorite magazine. They are strong on character and the analysis of motive but weak in action and more plot than the exposition of the characters develops. In the main, they leave the reader with the impression that the world is not much of a place, and perhaps they are right.

Of the nine stories in this issue, perhaps the most interesting are Happy Jack, by William March, Fame Takes the J. Car, by George Albee, and Red Ball, by L.A.G. Strong.

Arts and Flowers

Behind gaily painted green doors with ancient knockers is a resplendent array of palms and cactus as well as the flowering plants of Mallorca, each set in an intriguing earthenware pot—the work of local craftsmen.

An antique patio lantern hangs from the raftered ceiling; a sixteenth century cabinet containing rare old candlesticks, jugs and hand blown glass vases will be part of the setting for the horticultural display in Mrs. Mina de Hart Middleton's flower shop in the Calle Gomila, Terreno.

Mrs. Middleton is in Barcelona this week arranging for a daily delivery of flowers from that city and she is also devoting some of her time selecting tags and tape and the other bouquet accessories which will be in keeping with her unusually artistic shop. She expects to open about the fifteenth of this month.

OF PERSONAL INTEREST

Society women have often acted as mannikins for sweet charity's sake, but society women as mannikins just for the fun of it is unusual anywhere. Mrs. Fulton Leser has enlisted four of her friends to display her frocks at the first showing of Anne's which will be held at The Little Club on Monday the 14th, at 5 o'clock. Mrs. Brookfield Van Rensselaer, the Baroness de Bucovich, Mrs. Pickford and Mrs. Goetz will act as models, and tea — or cocktails — will be available for those strong minded women who are able to give a fleeting thought to such mundane matters as refreshments during an exhibition of Paris creations.

It is almost a certainty that the accessories Anne has brought with her from Paris will be an irresistible temptation. No longer will there need be that unmatched look to the costume purchased here. She has hats, jewelry, bags, perfumes, and even bath salts.

The showing on the fourteenth will be by invitation, and the following day will mark the official opening of Anne's in the Calle 14 de Abril, Terreno.

For the convenience of Americans needing consular advice and services. Mr. Cecil M.P. Cross of the Consulate General in Barcelona will be at the Hotel Royal here for three or four days, beginning Nov. 15th, we are informed by Mr. Claude I. Dawson, Consul General.

The bridge rooms which are one of the features of the English Tea Room's winter season in Terreno opened officially last Monday, and there were several tables taken every afternoon throughout the week. A number of old residents were welcomed by their friends.

Mrs. Leonard Best left unexpectedly for England last Friday morning to consult a London specialist, it is understood. She sailed on the Dunluce Castle.

Monday night, Hallowe'en, a crowd of ghosts, goblins, skeletons and all types of phantoms gathered at the Allen-Rosselló School in Terreno. They appeared to mingle rather well, so much so that they played games, bit apples off strings and drank «pop» until all the Jack o' Lanterns had burned out. Among some twenty present were the Allis, Gramkow, Casasnovas and Wyndham children, and Mr. Donald Darling of Barcelona.

Mr. and Mrs. Agustin Pueyo Coll and daughter have returned to spend another winter in Mallorca. This year they will live in the Casa Buades, Calle José Villalonga, Terreno.

Mr. Peter Richards is coming over from Barcelona today to visit his parents, who have taken a house in Bonanova. Mr. Richards, senior, was formerly British consul in Chicago.

Miss Lucile Luttrell of the New York Theatre Guild is leaving Mallorca on the Exeter on Nov. 19th. She has been living at the Grand Hotel.

The Dunluce Castle of the Union-Castle Line was in Palma Friday bound for England and took a number of visitors to Mallorca back to their

Mrs. Karen Larsen left on the same boat for Gibraltar.

The Watussi arrived yesterday with eighty passengers for Palma, while sixty-seven more are expected Tuesday off the Llandaff Castle.

There was a farewell tea party at Ye Olde English Tea Rooms yesterday (Saturday). It was given by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Nordaby of the Hotel Mediterraneo and among their guests were Mr. and Mrs. Col. Root, Sr. and Sra. de Villar, Mr. and Mrs. J. Liddle, and Mrs. Edward May. Mr. and Mrs. Nordaby are leaving on Tuesday for Mentone where they will spend the winter.

Mrs. A. Greer and her niece, Miss G. Pierce, gave a farewell tea in Terreno on Friday. They have spent the summer in Mrs. Frederick Chamberlin's house, and leave tomorrow for a tour of Spain and Italy before returning to the United States. Miss M. Bradley, Mrs. Walter Saunders, and Mrs. G. Del Val were among their guests on Friday.

Mr. Frank Gramkow, of Englewood, New Jersey, has come with her two children to Palma to make her home here this season. She has moved into the lower floor of No. 75 Calle Bonanova.

The Little Club expects to get the returns of the American presidential election Tuesday night. A special receiving apparatus has been rigged up on the roof and the Club promises plenty of diversion before the reports come over the air. It looks as though both Republicans and Democrats will be well represented that night.

Martha Foley and Whit Burnett are making arrangements to leave Mallorca for the United States about the middle of this month, it is understood. The fate of their magazine, Story, the last three issues of which have been printed on the Island, has not yet been definitely learned but it is expected that the editors have plans for continuing the publication of their periodical.

Mr. Richard Henderson, recently of New York, and his mother have taken the second floor of No. 75 Calle Bonanova for the winter. They arrived in Palma about two weeks ago and have been living until now at the Grand Hotel.

Copeland-Capella Classica Concert

The first important event of the Mallorquin musical season is scheduled for Nov. 29 when George Copeland and the Capella Classica de Mallorca will appear on the same platform, the stage of the Principal Theatre.

It will be the first such public appearance of the Capella, which is one of the best such groups in the world, thanks to the training by Don Juan Thomas. Mr. Copeland is the most accomplished pianist we are likely to hear this or any other season.

The concert is under the auspices of the Asociación de Cultura Musical. Tickets will be eight and five pesetas. Foreign visitors who have been here more than two months may become members of the association for three months. Fifteen peseta memberships entitle them to orchestra seats, and 9 pesetas for gallery seats to the organization's concerts.

Salon Born Opening

Under the management of Mr. James L. Holbrook, formerly of Los Angeles, the Salon Born will open Armistice Night with a dinner dance, and the new manager promises Palma the best dance music they have ever heard here.

Fortifying Menorca

THAT Menorca should not attract the English visitors in greater numbers is curious, for the island is as closely bound up with British sea power as Gibraltar, although perhaps not so spectacularly. Three times an English possession, it was the base for England's command of the Mediterranean, which in turn led to British supremacy on all the seven seas.

More than 200 years ago, before England more than dreamed of rivalling the Dutch at sea, King William III made it part of his policy that Port Mahon should be a British naval base. Twenty years later, under his successor, the place became a British colony and enabled the English fleet to keep the French in check. In another century, Nelson found it indispensable and the house where he lived has become one of the show places of the island.

Now the Spanish Government, recognizing the importance of the Mediterranean in any possible struggles between maritime nations, is fortifying Menorca heavily and, curiously enough, with enormous guns manufactured in England. Admiral Cervera of the Spanish Navy has just arrived in a man-o'-war to inspect the naval base in the harbor and to study vulnerable spots of the Menorcan coast.

Perhaps the island, which has been forgotten during a long period of peace in the Mediterranean, will regain the importance it once held in naval histories. Meanwhile it will no doubt acquire reputation among the tourists who are coming in ever increasing numbers to the Balearic Islands.

Those who have visited the second largest of the group have admired Port Mahon. La Ciudad Blanca, the White City, presents a dazzlingly white front to the world, for the Menorcans seem to spend a good deal of their time whitewashing their buildings. The city is proud of its hotels, of its bars, of its taxicab service and of the Ateneo Científico, Literario y Artístico around which the cultural life of the island centres. In the halls of the Ateneo is a good natural history museum and a library which boasts a number of foreign magazines. The Biblioteca Pública, too, has some rare books very valuable to the student of Menorca.

The usual and best tour of the island takes in the town of Ciudadela and the drive along the southern coast, which presents some of the most charming scenery in the Balearics, alternating with the huge, prehistoric monuments built no one knows how or by whom of tremendous blocks of stone.

An Appeal

Since the unemployment situation in Germany has assumed tremendous proportions, many German lads, anxious for work, have been tramping over Europe looking for jobs. Many of them have found their way to Mallorca, where some are stranded and others have secured employment.

Nearly all are handicapped by arriving in such shabby clothing that an unfavorable impression is created on prospective employers. Mr. H. F. Beeton, an Englishman who has had a great deal to do with youth movements in England and Germany, is making an appeal to English and Americans to give their old but still serviceable clothing, particularly suits and shoes, to these boys in order to help them get work. Packages may be left for this cause at the office of THE MAJORCA SUN or with Mr. H. Maeyer, Plaza Libertad 11. Mr. Beeton, who is staying at the Hotel Balear, will reply to inquiries concerning the appeal.

It may be stressed that all of the youths whom this appeal is designed to assist are really desirous of working, and have left their own country only because there is no market for their labor. No idlers or professional beggars will be benefited.

WONDER OF THE WORLD

The Week in Spain

MUCH importance is given to the short official visit of Premier Herriot to the Spanish capital. It is the first which has taken place since Spain became a republic in April, 1931. It seems that one of the most important items of his programme was to fix the status of French workers in the peninsula, and probably also to solve some knotty problems in connection with exportation and importation between the two countries.

On Wednesday the three following agreements in connection with French workers in Spain and Spanish workers in France were signed on behalf of both countries by Herriot and Señor Azaña:

The first consists of 17 articles which deal with the entrance and leaving of France by Spanish workers and the entrance and leaving of Spain by French workers; it guarantees French and Spanish workers similar conditions of living as the workers of the country into which they emigrate and provides for the application of out-of-work insurance, insurance against accidents, medical and old age assistance in both countries to the respective foreign citizens.

The second consists of 22 articles, and deals first with obligatory insurance in both countries. The employees and workers will be able to benefit by the incomes and pensions acquired in the respective country; that is, a Frenchman in Spain or a Spaniard in France, even though they have transferred their residence. They will have to submit to the regulations regarding insurance in force in the place where they work.

The third agreement provides for workers of either nationality who go to the other for a limited period, for the purpose of study or practice, commercial, professional etc., and are employed in industrial or commercial concerns.

During the signing of the documents, Señores de los Rios and Zulueta, the French Ambassador and the sub-secretaries of Trabajo, Estado and Presidencia were present.

M. Herriot made several excursions in the company of Sr. Azaña to various places outside Madrid and before he left he handed over to the Alcalde the sum of 10,000 francs to be used for charitable purposes. He also presented Sr. Tilly, a French subject 76 years old, who has been living forty years in Aranjuez, the medal of the Legion of Honour.

The various political parties of Cataluña are working feverishly preparing for the elections of the Generalidad, which take place on the 20th of this month. Those in touch with the politics of Cataluña are inclined to think that the Lliga Regionalista will have the majority. The Lliga is a very old party with a good constructive policy, whereas the work of the other parties was really done when the republic was established.

Census of Foreign Workers

Foreign workers are obliged to ask for a professional identity card, and applications may now be made to the Oficinas de Colocacion of the Barcelona Municipal Exchange. These offices are provisionally established on the first floor of the Casa de la Ciudad (Town Hall) Negociado de Politica Social. As from Monday, Nov. 7, the necessary forms will be supplied. Applicants must produce their work contracts. The hours will be from 8 to 1 each working day.

About Barcelona

The members of the London Club gave a concert in the Teatro Pantheon last week in English and Catalan. «Five birds in a cage», a play by Miss Gertrude Jennings, was well performed by Miss Maria Guardia, Miss Camille Reis, Mr. Antoni Viñals, Mr. Enric A. Fox, and Mr. Rafel Griera. Further concerts will be given during the season.

The following guests were present at a cocktail party given by Mr. Norman King, the British Consul General, last week: Mr. and Mrs. Bottomley, Mr. and Mrs. Boyce, Mrs. Braddock, Mr. Macanelly, Mr. Mead, Mr. and Mrs. Dawson, Miss Lavan, Colonel and Mrs. Tracy, Mr., Mrs. and Miss Loveday, Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan, The Rev. C.H.D. Grimes, Mr. and Mrs. Woodburn, Mr. and Mrs. Newbury, Mr. and Mrs. Schaeffer, Mr. and Mrs. Sauvalle, Mr. and Mrs. Witty, Mr. and Mrs. E. Witty, Major and Mrs. Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Webb, Mr. and Mrs. Nills, Mr. and Mrs. Jordain, Major Higman, Mr. and Mrs. Gagnon, Mr. Dennes, Mr. and Mrs. George Noble, Miss Noble, Mr. Roy Noble, Mrs. Dillion, Mr. Dillion, Junior, Mr. and Mrs. Kendall Park, and Miss Park.

The funeral of Miss M. Rider took place on Wednesday in the old cemetery. Miss Rider, a cousin of Mr. Henderson Rider, had lived in Barcelona all her life, and was well known to several generations of residents here. She played the organ in the church for several years, and took an active part in other church work.

Miss Lambert has returned to England. She has been visiting her niece, Mrs. Barrington.

A Harvest Festival will be held in the church on Sunday, Nov. 20, combined with a Thanksgiving Day Service, which it is hoped that many Americans will make an effort to attend.

A successful bridge afternoon was held at the Seamen's Institute on Thursday. Many members of the English and American colonies were present.

Mrs. C. Loveday has left Barcelona for England, where she will stay until Christmas holidays.

Colonel and Mrs. Tracy, of Dinard, are staying at the Ritz Hotel, Barcelona.

At the bridge tea given by Mrs. Ernest Witty were, among others, the following guests: Mrs. Arthur Witty, the Misses Witty, Mrs. Basil Evans, Mrs. Gagnon, Mrs. Whitmore, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Woodburn, Mrs. Newbury, Mrs. Long and Mrs. G. Williams.

The Liceo

The Generalidad has withdrawn the grant to the Liceo because, said the President, neither Catalan music nor the Theatre's prestige were properly looked after. Señor Prieto remarked during the course of the discussion that as soon as the Liceo was the property of the people these matters would be duly settled. Meantime a way will be found to carry on the winter season.

Armistice Day

On Friday, Nov. 11, the ex-service men's Armistice Day dinner will be held at the Hotel Continental, Rambla Canaletas. The meeting will take place at 8 p.m. and dinner at 8.30 p.m.; dinner expenses, 16 pesetas.

An endeavour has been made to bring the register up to date, but if by mischance anybody has been overlooked, the committee sincerely wish to extend an invitation to all men who wore uniform in the late war.

At 10.45 a.m. a short service will be held in the church, when the two minutes' silence will be observed as in former years. Two ex-service men will read the lessons and place a wreath of Flanders poppies on the altar. The collection will be given to Earl Haig's Fund, and the services will be continued on the following Sunday.

CORSICA, THE SCENTED ISLE

(The following article was written by a well known member of Barcelona's British colony, who recently visited the scenes he describes.)

It is astonishing how few English people have paid a visit to Corsica, yet it is quite easy of access and is well worth a trip. My own curiosity to see it was aroused by a remark of a fellow voyager as I returned from Mallorca, that he thought the scenery of Corsica was far superior, more wild and rugged and varied.

Leaving Nice and mid-day, at 6:30 we were alongside the pier of Calvi. The whole population seemed to have turned out, together with a guard of honor, for on board was the President of the Chamber of Deputies and the General, on a tour of inspection.

The town of Calvi is dominated by an immense castle built on the rock overhanging the town by the Genoese who for six centuries were masters of the land. Against them the Corsicans were almost constantly in revolt. Finally the Genoese, whose power was already weakening, sold the island for two million pounds to the French in 1768. In 1794, the British on the invitation of Paoli, the great Corsican patriot, came to their help.

After six months of fighting, Corsica was annexed to the British Empire, but this did not last long and after two years Lord Nelson was sent with a convoy of ships to evacuate the garrison. Napoleon was sending troops to capture the island and the British Government could not spare the necessary forces to defend the place. It was at the siege of Calvi, while the British were taking possession, that Nelson lost his eye.

In Calvi, I saw for the first time in many years a town without street lamps, although the brilliantly lighted cafes do a great deal to make up for this. In Calvi, as elsewhere, we found three classes of hotel, the old local one from the days before tourists, the commercial hotel and the de luxe — with prices varying accordingly. Personally I preferred to sleep in the de luxe and feed in the native.

From Calvi a railway runs almost the length of the island, to Ajaccio, less than 100 miles but it takes from 9 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., through tunnels and over deep ravines. One may forgive the pace for the beauty of the scenery. One passes deserted houses and vineyards going to ruin, for young people are deserting the land to go to France or into the towns.

Then the train runs amid more magnificent mountains covered with pine woods, the felling of which is a government monopoly and employs a large number of people. Further on is a country better watered and therefore richer, but malarial.

Ajaccio itself is not a very beautiful town, but it is the birthplace of the great Napoleon. One is seldom allowed to forget this — the chief street is called Le Cours Napoleon, and everywhere are statues (not very good ones) of the great man, although neither Napoleon nor any of the brothers he ennobled did much for the land of their birth.

Not far from Ajaccio is the most famous of the natural beauties of Corsica, the Red Rocks of Calanche. The mountain slopes are covered with rocks of every shade of red, purple and orange strewn from the highest points down to the sea. The weather has converted each giant boulder and pinnacle into shapes so fantastic that the most imaginative gargoyles designed by man seem tame in comparison.

Corsica is often called the Scented Isle because of the number of scent plants — heather, broom, myrtle, juniper, rosemary.

One can never speak of Corsica for many minutes without a reference to bandits. The great drive the French instituted against them a year ago broke their power completely and the only bandits one hears of now are the honorable ones, men who carry on vendettas among themselves and leave strangers alone.

The export of the root of the white heather, from which briar pipes are made is one of the industries of the island. The olive is also a source of wealth.

The climate varies greatly from the coast to the mountains, and while one may be bathing at Ajaccio, the roads through the higher passes may be impassable because of the snow. The season is from March to May, but increasing numbers of people are spending their summer holidays there.

For the summer visitor there is good fishing in the rivers and the sea, and at present, no doubt, living is cheaper in Corsica than in France, and more primitive, which some of us enjoy.

THE LICEO OF BARCELONA

THOUGH not by any means the oldest theatre in Barcelona, the Liceo has for years past been considered as the most important and most popular. It is frequented not only by the wealthy classes, with unfailing regularity as a part of their social life during the season, but also by the humblest Barcelonians; for the Latins as a race are both connoisseurs and lovers of good music. The Liceo has been favoured from time to time by the best companies of Europe and the most famous artists in the world; Chaliapine has sung there; Pavlova has danced there. In giving a list of the famous artists who appeared before its foot-lights one could fill a whole page.

Its origin, though, was an humble one. In the year 1835 when the then government took over the monastery of Montesión near the Plaza Santa Ana and made it a barrack for the fourteenth battalion of the National Militia, the officers found life very monotonous and agreed to establish a place of amusement on the site of another burnt down monastery on the other side of the Ramblas a little farther down.

A company was formed with a capital of 6,250 pesetas divided into fifty shares of 125 pesetas each, and in August of the same year the theatre was inaugurated. Some time after, the National Militia was disbanded, but the theatre became firmly established under the name of the Sociedad Filodramática de Montesión. In 1838 the rules of the society were changed, and a new name, «Liceo Filarmónico Dramático Barcelonés» was given to it. A solemn re-inauguration took place in April and there were celebrations in the salon de ciento when the celebrated masters of music and declamation, Obiols and Mata, were elected professors.

Early in 1845, the president, Don Joaquin de Gisbert, obtained from the Governor the concession of the ground occupied by the present Liceo. It then contained the ruins of a monastery built in 1639 by the «frailes trinitarios descalzos de Nuestra Señora de la Bonanova», used by the French troops as a military storehouse from 1808 till 1814 during the Napoleonic occupation of Spain and as a political club from 1820 till 1823. In this year the friars returned, but on July 25th, 1835, they had to leave when their convent and church met the fate of many others in Spain and was burnt to the ground. On April 11th, 1845, the first stone of the new theatre was laid, and on April 4th, 1847, it was inaugurated with the representation of the drama Don Fernando de Antequera by Ventura de la Vega.

On April 9th, 1861, just before a function was about to take place, a fire broke out and before anything could be done to check the flames only the skeleton of the building remained. The rebuilding commenced immediately and in a year it was again open to the public.

The Liceo is considered as one of the largest theatres in Europe, for it seats about 3,600 spectators. Its interior is everything in the way of comfort and decoration which one would expect in a great theatre, but unfortunately its exterior is not in keeping. Its façade is comparatively plain and it is surrounded by houses of very mean appearance. It has five floors running round in horse-shoe shape and as there are no pillars one has an excellent view of the stage from any part of the building. Attached to the theatre is a «Conservatorio de Música y Declamación» which was founded by Isabella II.

As in the time of its origin, this theatre is administered by a committee of its proprietors who hire out the boxes to families and public bodies for the season; and these again very often sublet them on days when they cannot be present at a function.

In the days of the Monarchy, attendance at the Liceo during the opera season was considered most important among the aristocratic and rich classes of Barcelona, and particularly on «Gala night» crowds would wait outside the theatre to see the richly dressed ladies enter, while the traffic police in their gala uniforms with flowing white plumes in their helmets made themselves conspicuous on all sides. Inside during a performance, especially when the main theatre lights were turned out and the figures in the various boxes could just be deserved, myriads of points of light, like stars, glittered and sparkled as the ladies' jewels reflected the faint glimmer cast into the body of the vast theatre by the lights on the stage.

Since the inception of the republic, though attendance at the Liceo is still an important social function for many, its brilliance is not what it used to be; many of the aristocratic and wealthy families have refrained from taking boxes for the season, or have not wished to appear before the public at social functions. The result is that the Liceo has been in financial straits, so that last year the Generalidad offered to subsidise it. This year the subsidy may still be needed, but it is feared that through want of agreement between the proprietors and other musical bodies in Barcelona this subsidy may not be given,

Lesson Thirteen -- Part II

To hope (verb) corresponds approximately with the Spanish verbs confiar, desear, though it really has a meaning all its own which is entirely English and can only be come at by practice. They hope for better times. I do hope you are feeling well. When do you hope to be able to come? I hoped against hope that nothing had happened to you.

Hope (noun) While there is life there is hope. I have no hope now that it is so late. I am living on hope. There is little hope for him now. What are your hopes regarding the exchange.

Hope (adjective) I am hopeful of success. They are very hopeful regarding the rise of price the peseta. The case is now hopeless. You are a hopeless case.

Hope (adverb) He is hopelessly drunk. That typewriter is hopelessly useless.

I am hopelessly at a loss what to do.

Hope (noun) The hopelessness of your case makes me nearly cry. In the face of such hopelessness it is useless to do anything.

Wait (verb) It is hopeless to wait for him any longer. All things come to him who waits. We hoped you would wait a little longer. He awaited death with calm. Never wait for opportunities; look for them.

Expect (verb) I have been expecting you all the evening. I expect the doctor any minute now. If you expect me to wait for you outside in the cold you are mistaken. I expect to enjoy myself very much this evening.

Expect (adjective) He is the expectant heir to the property. She is too expectant.

Expect (adverb) They waited most expectantly at the door.

Expect (adverb) He looked at me most expectingly for nearly a minute. Expectingly does not express the manner in which he asked for it.

Expect (noun) expectance, expectation, expectancy are three nouns derived from the verb to expect. My expectation was deceived. It is beyond my expectation. His expectancy annoys me.

GOLF NOTES

By MacGregor

The majority of Golf enthusiasts before making a stroke give attention to the way in which they hold the club, for they instinctively realize that the least change in the position of either hand gives them a feeling that they have not the club under control; yet beginners when actually striking the ball are liable to forget everything except letting the club fly from their hands.

Their first care should be to learn, and practice the «golfing» grip of their clubs, until it comes automatically to them. It is not sufficient just to hold the club as one would hold any stick; it must be gripped in the proper manner, and the manner of gripping must not be changed during the stroke. Secondly, though the club must be held firmly, it must not be with the grip of «the drowning man»; neither must it be held in such a way that it may turn in one's hands. The best grip for the beginner to adopt is the «overlapping» one; the right hand holding the thumb of the left which is on top.

Next there is the right elbow to look to. Beginners are most liable, when making a stroke to raise the right elbow, instead of keeping it close to the side, for the purpose of giving more flexibility; in doing so they instinctively loosen the right hand grip, fail to give the club the direction they intended and either miss the ball or dig into the turf.

A beginner should be careful first to adopt the proper grip and next not to loosen the right hand hold, and then there will be less probability for the elbow to rise.

The next point to give attention to is the position of the head and shoulders; beginners are liable to bend low, or to bend back in the act of striking the ball. Once the position is obtained, with the eyes on the ball the head and shoulders should neither dip nor raise till the stroke is complete.

Madrid Report on the current news from our correspondent in the Capital.

The visit of the French Premier, M. Herriot, to Madrid did not disturb the ordinary peaceful life of the capital, and, in fact, only by reading the papers or by chance conversation would his visit be known to many of the inhabitants of Madrid. The city appears to be sleeping in the lovely autumn sunshine, and revelling in the most gorgeous weather, though we cannot help feeling that some flags and bunting might add a touch of gaiety to this unofficial visit.

Some of us were hoping that All Souls Day, Nov. 1, would have been declared an official holiday, instead of being only a half-holiday, especially, as in Madrid at any rate, the number of general holidays in the year is now quite a small one, but unfortunately such has not been the case.

We are glad to welcome back to Madrid the American Consul and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Jordan, who have spent a very agreeable holiday in Morocco, returning through Portugal and Galicia.

Miss Cyr of the American Consulate, who recently underwent a very dangerous operation, is now making very good progress.

A Dance will be held at the Ritz Hotel on Saturday, Nov. 12, in aid of the British American Nursing Home. The price of the tickets for the Dinner and Dance will be P. 40. (including wines, champagne, coffee and tips.) The dance will commence at 11 p.m., and a Buffet will be served at 12.30. The tickets for the Dance and Buffet will be P. 15. Chrysanthemum Show

On Sunday (today) in the Rambla de las Flores there will be an exhibition of chrysanthemums. The flower sellers will compete and cash prizes won by the stands which present the best flowers in the most artistic and abundant manner. Other decoration than that of the blooms themselves will not be considered.

The judges will visit the stands at 10 a.m. and give their verdict then and there. At 11, accompanied by a number of invited guests, they will present the prizes. Those in charge of the competition invite the general public to attend.

There will also be today an exhibition of plants, fruits and autumn flowers in the Palacio de las Artes Decorativas on Montjuich. It is organized by the Fomento de la Horticultura and the Union de Sindicatos Agrícolas of Cataluña and under the patronage of the Generalidad and the Ayuntamiento. Fruit, flowers and plants from various parts of Cataluña will be exhibited. Among the places represented will be San Feliu de Llobregat, Molins de Rey, San Juan Despí, Viladecans, San Climent, San Vicens dels Horts.

Tourism Propaganda Competition

The Generalidad and the Patronato Nacional de Turismo have established and are establishing many new tourist offices both here and in foreign countries, but they find that their propaganda material is scanty and deficient. For the purpose of increasing their propaganda material, the Federación de Turismo of Cataluña and the Baleares are organizing a competition for publicity placards, depicting the beauties, and places of interest in Cataluña and the Baleares. Substantial cash prizes will be given.

When the basis of the competition has been established the various Ayuntamientos, Tourist Syndicates and other bodies devoted to tourism will be approached for the purpose of arranging about the prizes. The Asociación de Hoteleros y Similiares of Cataluña have given 4,000 pesetas towards the prizes.

The competition is an indication of Spain's attraction for the tourist of today.

«Mr. Motter is an able speaker and we are very fortunate in securing his services. Later in the season, at least one of Mr. Motter's lectures will deal with American-British relations with particular emphasis on the results of the Ottawa conference. Another lecture, which we hope will be illustrated, will be on the World Fair in Chicago in 1933.»

Mr. Motter has had a good deal of lecture experience and has acquired the poise of the platform artist. He began as far back as 1917 when he was a four minute speaker, and since then he has been in advertising, newspaper work and has written several books and many articles and short stories. The Week

The American presidential campaign has come to a close, and both candidates ought to be exhausted after their efforts. Governor Roosevelt, the Democratic nominee, is a three to one favorite to defeat President Hoover.

The tumult of election day and the shouting of victory alone remain and the country can settle back to thinking about its real troubles. Realists predict that no matter who wins, the general situation is bound to improve because there is really little to choose between parties and to have the atmosphere cleared is bound to be a benefit.

It will not, however, help Mrs. Hoover's chances that the Treasury is still running up a deficit despite the increased taxes voted by Congress.

A New Quarrel

The nationally inclined government of Von Papen in Germany and the Socialist Ministry of Prussia are engaged in a new argument. The Chancellor has for the second time suspended the executive administration in Prussia and named a commission to take its place except in the legislative branch.

This time the other German states are aroused, not so much from sympathy with Prussia as because it is felt that the federal principle on which the German constitution is based is in danger if the central government can take such high handed action. The matter will be argued promptly in the supreme court.

It is all much more interesting than the fact that today the German electorate is electing the fifth Reichstag in eight months.

Trocadero Bridge Club

A bridge club will be formed at the Trocadero, Palma's new amusement salon, if the demand proves sufficient to warrant it. The management proposes to set aside one of its rooms for the club on certain afternoons of the week.

There will also be a special gala at the Trocadero on Armistice Night, and the reservations for tables have already been quite numerous.

Tennis Victors

In the final of the Mixed Doubles Handicap Tournament held at the Terreno Lawn Tennis Club Gamarra and Crolus at scratch, beat La Bruyere and Leader owe forty, 6-3, 3-6, 6-2, thus winning the two racquets presented by Sr. Gabriel Esteva. The runners up win the consolation prize of a dozen tennis balls, given by Mr. Otto Schaeffer.

Russian Opera Coming

Early in December the Russian Grand Opera Company of Paris will give a series of performances at the Teatro Lirico. The company will be here for three or four days before proceeding to engagements in Barcelona and Madrid. Those who heard the company here two years ago still remember the occasion as the finest musical entertainment of its kind Palma had heard.

Telegraph Head Visits Palma

Señor Miguel Sastre Picatoste, General Director of Telegraphs in Spain, arrives at the Hotel Mediterráneo this morning. He has come for the official inauguration of the new telegraphic premises in the Calle San Felio. After the opening, there will be a breakfast for the officials, and Señor Sastre is giving a luncheon party to his friends and business colleagues.

On Thursday Señor Sastre will be the guest of honor at a luncheon given for him by the officials of the local Telegraph Company. He will remain in Mallorca for a few days only.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carpenter left for Tenerife on Saturday (yesterday). They have been visiting Mr. Carpenter's mother, Mrs. Charlotte Carpenter, at the Mediterráneo.

Miss Alice Gaster, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moseley and Mr. Brener Griffith are among the new guests at the Hotel this week.

Captain W. Walford of this Hotel spent the week end on a yachting expedition to Cabrera. Two yachts took part in this excursion, the Isabel, belonging to Mr. Bernard Cinnamond, and the Mare Nostro, Mr. Pedro Medini's boat. Sr. Honorato Noguera was another member of the party.

Visitors at Camp de Mar

Among the latest arrivals at the Hotel Camp de Mar is the Hon. Mrs. Bethell, who came with her car from Paris. She proposes to stay until the new year, and possibly longer.

There also arrived a sailboat with auxiliary motor, the property of the hotel, which was sailed around from Puerto Pollensa. She will make excursions, captained by a local sailor who knows this section of the coast well.

Mrs. Adalga Foster has returned to Terreno from her third visit to the Hotel since it opened in July.

Mallorca early in September, have found in Palma their ideal home. They have decided to make a long stay here now that modern educational facilities are obtainable for their twelve year old son. This, as far as they could see, would have been the only reason for curtailing their residence on the Island. With the opening of the "Ecole Internationale de Balears" this difficulty has been swept away, and Mr. Bowden looks forward to a peaceful rest after his recent research work in América and on the Continent.

Friends of Spain

Thursday night marked the first reunion of the Palma branch of the International Language Club, Los Amigos de España. A social evening and dance was held in at the Trocadero. There were about a hundred prospective amigos present. Dutch, Spanish, German, English, Italian, and French were talked by little groups gathered around their respective flags. The consular body was well represented.

Among those present were Commander and Mrs. H. Worsley and daughter, Mr. P. Owen, Mr. and Mrs. Dobson, Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Wolf, Mr. Charles Colman, Sr. Fernando Truysols, Mlle. Helene de Marguerie, Mrs. and Miss Molesworth, Captain Juan Fuster and his brother Pepe, who created a diversion by producing his pet snake which travels everywhere with him in a tobacco tin.

A vote of thanks was passed for the organizer, Miss Elsa Kuterko, and it was announced that the weekly meetings of the club would begin next Tuesday at the Trocadero from 4.30.
