Crime Wave in Mallorca

Police Chief Suspects Strangers of Recent Robberies and Says Foreign Colony Can Assist in Cleaning up the Island

series of hotel robberies, hold-ups and petty thefts have brought home to the Mallorquin authorities that the life of a tourist resort is not all roses. For the police are satisfied that the popularity of Mallorca is responsible for the crimes and even that the criminals are from abroad.

Within the last few days three robberies, committed in three of the island's leading hotels, have further convinced the guardians of the law that an organized gang is behind all, or nearly all, the crimes.

The police have done a good deal more to check stealing than is apparent to the casual visitor, but Chief of Police Gonzalez declares that the foreign colony in Mallorca can be of great help in the prevention of crime here. Without such co-operation, he adds, it is of course difficult for his officers to deal with the criminals

Co-operation

Señor Gonzalez is in Palma because he is a man with a reputation in the Spanish police. It was he who «cleaned up» Málaga and Granada when those towns were suffering from the most virulent form of crime wave. His recent appointment to Palma was in itself significant.

One of the normal reactions, he has noted, is that the visitor is very much afraid of being involved in any police affair. This frequently prevents them from coming to the authorities with valuable information. Señor González asks all members of the foreign colony who may have any such information or suspicions or complaints about undesirables to come to him in confidence, and their confidence will be strictly observed.

The manner and the place of the crimes have combined to lead Señor Gonzalez to believe the robberies are the work of foreigners. For one thing, this sort of thieving is not typical of the Spanish criminal, who has quite a different if no better method of his own. As for the Mallorquin, he is so devoid of all scale in that theft was annually as devoid of all such instincts that theft was only a word to him until recently.

The fact that foreigners — most of them hotel residents — have been the losers by the crimes would mean little were it not for the fact that most of the robberies and even the hold-ups have evidenced a certain familiarity with the habits and possessions of the victims, if not a personal acquaintance. Señor Gonzalez points out that it is much easier for a foreigner than for a Spaniard to mingle with other foreigners in hotels. He thinks it significant, too, that passports have been taken along with jewels and other valuables.

In one respect the police task is made somewhat easier than it might be elsewhere. Mallorca is an island with singularly few means of leaving, so that the chance of getting either a thief or stolen goods out of the country is rather difficult. The police are always vigilant, both here and in Barcelona, to check up so far as possible on passengers.

This, of course, is much easier so far as the Spanish passengers are concerned, but foreigners are watched too.

A tourist boom proverbially attracts all sorts of people; the French Riviera was for years the haven for crooks of all nations, and no doubt some of these have read about Mallorca. Nevertheless it is certain that we will hear less of spectacular robberies than we used to from the Riviera, for already the police campaign has achieved results.

Arrests

On Friday, police agents working out of Palma made three arrests in Pollensa and Formentor, and the prisoners were brought into Palma yesterday (Saturday) for questioning. It is understood that the results were confirmation of the police chief's theory of the robberies. If so, the arrest of all those implicated in the thefts may be expected shortly.

The organization has done most of its jobs in exactly the same manner, slitting open with a knife just the bag which contained valuables.

While the police were concerned with this chase, the foreign colony was treated to a more refreshing display, this time of honesty. Someone left a bag containing 150 pesetas leaning against the gate of the English Tea Room in Terreno all night, and in the morning two Mallorquin boys, Juan Colomar and Cosme Tomás, who work in a bakeshop, saw the bag. They opened it, noticed the money and took it to Mr. F.G. Short, owner of the Tea Room, in Palma, and he returned it to the owner.

Mallorquín Sketches

By Fernando Esteban

In a narrow street which opens on the Plaza de Quadrado. I saw in the window of a small tienda, some trinkets, curious and primitive, that caught my eye. Inside, the little shop smelled of dampness and of cooking. Near the counter sat an old woman, warmly bundled up, with her feet on a small brazier. She was so busy reading an instalment novel that she did not seem to notice my approach.

«Good day,» I said to her in Spanish. «Will you sell me some of the things I see in the window?»

The woman looked at me with her small beady eyes and did not answer. Thinking that perhaps she had not understood me, I repeated my request in the Mallorquin that I use for important business.

«Oh, I understood you the first time,» she told me, smiling in a friendly way. «Yes, yes, I understood. I can speak Spanish too sabe. I have been to Madrid. I spent eight days there on my honeymoon. That was a long time back, but I remember it as if it had been yesterday, and I am sixty-three. But listen, I don't want you to be angry with me.»

«Why should I be angry with you? How much are these?» I asked. «I don't imagine that they are expensive, but tell me what they cost and we will

«It isn't that. If you would not be cross, I would beg you to buy them in another shop. In the next street, on the corner of San Miguel, is another store that sells the same things... maybe better. Listen, I'm nice and warm, bundled up here beside the brazier, and I've just reached a place in the story terribly exciting, »

I lacked the courage to force business on her, and, followed by her smile of thanks, I left the shop.

I wanted to investigate personally the suburb of Palma known as Estados Unidos, feeling that it might serve as preparation for my future visit to North America. Walking along its narrow streets of low, one storied buildings, I found no other inhabitants than the stray cats that crossed the road indignantly at m approach. Turning the corner, I came upon a sord little wine shop. Here, above the door I observed: sign, crudely lettered by hand, which read:

Good Shipping News

Baquera, Kusche and Martin, S.A., agents for the German African Lines, have been informed that the Spanish Government has issued a decre which will now permit the liners calling here to take on and land second and intermediate class passengers as well as first class. This involved change in the law regarding tonnage dues.

The new regulations will undoubtedly add the attractions of Mallorca as a tourist centre, to the most pleasant way to come or go is by boat.

What Price Mallorca?

Under this title, without the question mark, Mr. Percy Waxman is this week publishing in America his travel book on the Balearics, mostly devoted to this island. Mr. Waxman makes pleasant fun of those who have spread the story that you can live like a king on 30 cents a day in these parts. He points out that the optimists do not say when this was or what king.

He himself, however, subtitles his work «Paradise at a Dollar a Day!» and in our experience the only paradise going at such a price is furnished like Omar Khayam's.

But that is quibbling, perhaps. Mr. Waxman seems to have put in five months here to good advantage, and has written a guide which makes up in readability what it lacks in the usual heavy, exhaustive diet of figures common to guides. Furthermore, Mr. Waxman is possessed of a style, and has achieved a volume which can be enjoyed by visitors to Mallorca, by those expecting to come and by those who do not care if they never see the place.

Most of Mr. Waxman's stay was spent in Pollensa, and what he thought of it is epitomized in the title of the chapter dealing with that port, «The

Jewel of Mallorca.»

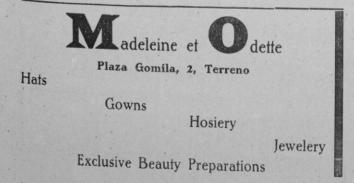

Included in this book is an excellent sketch of the Russian sculptor, Dimitri Tsapline, who is giving a show this week, and whose works have been acclaimed in Moscow and Paris.

A Passport Mistake

When Mrs. Marjorie Frances Chanter, who arrived on the Orama, went to retrieve her passport from the police station, she was given by mistake that belonging to Susan McVicker Smyth, also from the Orama. The confusion arose from the fact that one passport had the debarkation number 39 and the other 59. The police are anxious that Mrs. Chanter should call at the station so they can rectify the error.

Exchange of the Week

The peseta, which showed such strength the week before, continued to rise slightly last week, according to quotations furnished from the Madrid bourse by the Credito Balear. Sterling opened at 41.60 and declined to 41.25; the dollar went from 12 09 to 12.06 and 100 francs fell from 47.60 to 47.55.

The British Vice-Consul Says

The British Vice-Consul wishes to call the attention of all British subjects resident in Mallorca to the necessity of registration at the Vice-Consulate.

Registration is needed to establish a claim to the assistance of a British Consular Officer in case of emergency.

It is not possible to issue invitations for receptions on board H. M. Ships to residents of whose existence the Vice-Consul is ignorant.

A resident may be considered as anyone normally living, working or studying in Mallorca and may be taken to include visitors intending to stay upwards of six months.

There is no fee to be paid.

No scheme of Imperial taxation is in view in connection with this system of registration.

Registration must be renewed annually.

Many residents who imagine they are registered are not so in fact, and it is advisable for all who have not called at the Vice-Consulate within the last six months to do so at their earliest convenience. The hours of 11-12 are the most suitable to ensure immediate attention.

The Vice-Consular stamp for temporary visitors is not registration.

While the Boat Waits

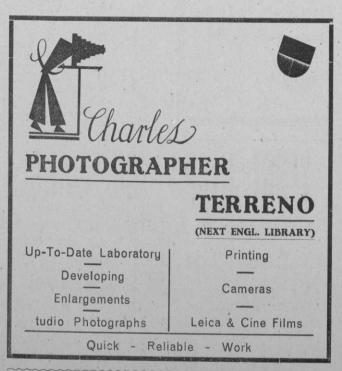

The American Export boat was held up for nearly half an hour yesterday while Mrs. Eugene Van Vechtan and Miss Bigelow, who had been stopping at the Hotel Victoria, were searched by plain clothes men at the Customs because of the recent robbery at their hotel. After the search they were permitted to proceed.

They had spent a week in Mallorca and had not liked it.

Earlier in the day two suspects had been brought in from Formentor. One is a German, and the police have not yet been able to locate the passport of the other.

It is understood some of the stolen goods have been recovered.

Menorcan English

The island of Menorca was considered a coveted possession by European powers during the 18th century, the English, French, Dutch and Spaniards having struggled for it on several occasions. The English occupied the place three times, holding it once for over fifty years. It is natural, therefore, that many traces of their presence should still exist, and the traveller who has the patience to delve into the dialect and customs of the Menorcans finds himself well rewarded.

There is an amusing tale told of General Kane, the most popular of the English Governors. Kane, an enthusiastic agriculturist, decided that the island would benefit by the importation of cattle of northern stock, and of fruit trees and vegetables from other parts of the world. The first winter the «tramontana» blew almost continuously and the cattle sickened and died. The majority of the fruit trees suffered a similar fate, but some which had been planted in secluded spots bore excellent fruit. This was especially true of a variety of large yellow plum, and when the first crop was gathered the Governor was proudly shown samples of this fruit. He was so impressed that he exclaimed, «I never saw plums like these!» Today, summer visitors will find in the little market of Mahon large baskets of succulent yellow plums, labelled Prunes Neversó.

Other commonly used household words that have come down from the English occupation are floor (which applied to the wooden variety current on the island), bottle and kettle.

The most popular boys' game in Menorca is marbles, called in the dialect, mairbels. During the game knuckle and please are used phonetically, and it is not uncommon to see one of the players retire with a rebuke in the shape of an ull blac or black eye.

The word plenty is used in its English sense, while the term boy occurs in the sentence indicating a poor attendance at a function, «there were only quatre jan y un boy (four for-

When showing a visitor around their pictures que town, so reminiscent of Cornwall, the Mahonese mention with pride the bevindos of the houses, as they point to the bay windows along the street.

as they point to the bay windows along the street.

Some of the oldest inhabitants of Mahon are given to crooning alleged English songs which have been handed down through the generations. Few of the words are intelligible, but the general impression is that they are the survivals of old army songs.

Perhaps the queerest relic of the occupation is the Scotch Dance which is performed at the Fiesta of Villacarlos (the old English Georgetown). A little group of children, each wearing a handkerchief pinned to the shoulder, black ribbons hanging down the back, and firmly clutching short sticks, execute a dance which resembles an eightsome reel. The music is supplied by an old man who plays a flute and beats on a small drum.

Even those not initiated in the dialect are struck by the very English atmosphere which pervades the life of the island, and are not surprised to hear the Menorcan peasant calling his team Ox as he drives homeward; and if the visitor looks in the direction of the voice he will probably see that the farmer's face is also very English.

The Weather

The theory, so often expressed with great fervor these chill days, that this is an exceptionally cold winter and that nothing like it has been seen in the clima ideal before, is upset by figures. Actually this winter was, if anything, a trifle warmer

That is what the thermometer says. Col. R.E. Molesworth of Son Españolet, who has kept a daily record of the maximum and minimum temperatures for the last four years, compared his chart for this winter with that of last and found that the days had been almost exactly the same while the nights were just a little warmer this year.

However, there is also no doubt that the winds were somewhat stronger during the present winter, and there has been more snow in the mountains than most people can remember. In Palma itself a freezing temperature has not been recorded this season.

In spite of the news that this is the usual weather for the time of year, it has felt cold, and there is cheer in Col. Molesworth's figures for March in previous years. In the early part of the

About Barcelona

The dance of the American Club at the Circulo Equestre attracted the entire American and many of the English colony. There were a great number of officers from the warships. Mr. Claude I. Dawson, American Consul General, received the guests. After supper the Virginia Reel was a colourful and harmonious show, owing to the pretty Colonial costumes and flawless performances. When at 4 a.m. the orchestra packed up to go home, there was such a general demand for more, that another half hour was granted. The success of the evening was largely due to Messrs. M.L. Glidewell, President of the Club, B. Stone and J. C. Jordain.

Monday's reception on board the Lucia called a large part of the English colony and many members of Barcelona society to the ship. The chilly wind kicked up such a sea it was impossible to take launches to the Rodney, and visitors kept warm by dancing or drinking tea or having good whiskey at the improvised bar.

There was a gala performance of the Catalan opera, Nero, at the Liceo Tuesday night in honour of the fleet. President Maciá, the Vice President of the Catalan Parliament, Sr. Casanoves, Capt. Tovey and Mr. Norman King, the British Consul General, occupied the seats of honour.

When Sr. Maciá called on the captain of the Rodney on Friday he was received with a guard of honour and a salute of nineteen guns, appropriate to the first visit of a President of Cataluña to a ship of the Royal Navy.

The British Vice Consul, Mr. M.G.A. Meade, entertained about thirty-five guests, many of them officers from the warships, at a dinner dance at his home on Thursday.

The English Speaking Catholic Association gave a tea dance to members of the British Navy at the Regina Hotel on Sunday. If was attended by about 150 persons in addition to the sailors, some of whom sang towards the end.

Today at 10 a.m. Mgr. Irurita, Bishop of Barcelona, will celebrate mass for the English Speaking Catholics at the Crypt. At 6:30 p.m. there will be Benediction and Europeition of the Placed Spare. Benediction and Exposition of the Blessed Sacra-

Barcelona Captured by the English!

Having successfully achieved the conquest of Mallorca, the British Fleet has just taken Barcelona.

The cruiser Rodney would have entered the port had it not been for the violent resistance offered by the depth of same. However, the intrepid sailors came ashore in launches and made themselves masters of the city, immediately changing all the advertisements in the cafés so that everywhere announcements are to be seen to the effect that «Ham and fried eggs,» beer, «beefteak and chips» can be obtained within. The movies also announce films spoken in English.

The President of the Generalidad, the Mayor and the Governor have been made prisoners and and taken aboard. Luckily Sr. Rubi (chief of police) has been able to contrive their escape. Consequently the Rodney fired off nineteen shots in protest, which did not hit anything as the gunners had just come aboard from shore leave. Catalans in America consider this to be an act of aggression which can only be remedied by the firing of twentyone shots next time, as was done when the ex-king was still not ex. The League of Nations, it is understood will make a protest, though, as usual, this does not mean that anything will come of it.

Turo Club's Circus

The amateur circus of the Turó Tennis on Monday, coupled with the ball which took place at the Equestre on Sunday, was the most brilliant feature of the winter season. Four thousand people, all in evening dress, filled the Olympia to see the show, which was more of a revue than a circus. Except for the merry gang of clowns and the comic bullfight, only the equestrian turns were true circus

The acrobatic riding of Señores Rafael and Luna was a prelude to the high-school numbers in which Sr. Arsenio Abad, the director of the Picadero, demonstrated himself to be an extremely accomplished rider. When he ended by making his horse lie down and get up again under him he was overwhelmed by a storm of applause.

It was a most colourful scene, the magnificent horse, the rider in hunting costume, the attendants in yellow coats, black breeches and white stockings and near the wings, waiting his turn behind a motley group of clowns, a beautiful chestnut steed.

After the number of Eduardo Flaquer, elegant juggler, assisted by Dionisio de la Huerta and Noel Clarasso, as Chinese tricksters, Manuel Rodriguez Llauder, the «rhythm-man,» performed with great success at the piano. S.. Filalicio Flaquer succeeded in drawing a great deal from the fountain of fun provided by the wireless programme.

The dancing girls, directed by Sr. Roberto Vicente, were hailed enthusiastically, the star of this excellent number, Srta. María Victoria Udaeta, singing with great talent in the style of Sophie Tucker.

The actors and organizers are to be congratulated on the brilliant success of their amateur show, and no one deserves more credit than Sr. Eduardo Flaquer. The evening culminated in a ball at the

The only weak point, perhaps, was that there were the long delays which are inseparable from such performances.

Editor Returns to Face Sentence

Burns, Who Fled from Chain Gang to Win Success in Chicago, Hopes for Georgia Clemency

(Reprint from The New York Times)

Chicago, June 25, 1929 — Robert Elliott Burns, editor of the Greater Chicago Magazine, today laid aside his pencil, locked up his desk and figuratively hung a sign outside his office reading «Back in six to ten years - perhaps sooner.»

Burns, who escaped from a Georgia chain gang to which he had been sentenced for robbery, came to Chicago and in seven years made good as a business man only to be betrayed to the police. He started this morning for Georgia to finish out his sentence if the State authorities insist upon it. A month-long fight on behalf of the editor by his many influential friends failed to sway the Georgia authorities in their determination to have the fugiti-

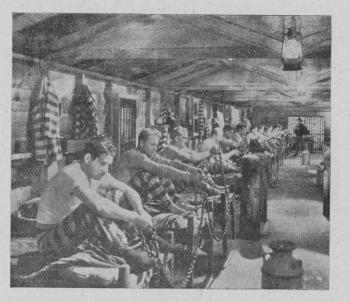

(This and other startling newspaper stories were published all over the world and led to writing of «I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang,» the true story of Burns' adventures. He twice escaped from the chain gang, and now Warner Bros, have made a picture, faithfully reproducing the story. It will be seen soon in Barcelona.)

The tremendous success of Shanghai Express, the adventure story whose scenes were laid in foreign lands, augurs well for the popularity of George Bancroft's newest Paramount picture, The World and the Flesh, opening at the Coliseum tomorrow.

The film was directed by John Cromwell, maker of the famous Street of Chance. Col. Alexis Davidoff, a direct descendant of David Bey, one of the conquerors of Russia in the twelfth century, served as a technical adviser.

The story of the swashbuckling sea captain who led his men in riotous assaults on the nobility during the Russian revolution of 1917 is packed with action — interiors and exteriors by land and sea. Very rapid tale of carnage and gunpowder, with a thread of romance intertwined with the gusty excitement of the piece.

Die Koffer des Herrn O. F., released at the Femina yesterday, is already known to a number of Barcelona cinema fans, since it appeared at special sessions of Studio Cinaes and proved such a success that it is now being given a wider showing. It is a German film directed by the Russian metteur en scene Granowsky.

It is enitrely different from the usual type of picture, and indicates new possibilities in the films. Those who cannot do without sex appeal and love scenes are warned that this is a picture which requires some thought to enjoy.

An Air Port for Barcelona or several years the question of a civilian airdrome for Barcelona has been discussed, and for a long time little advancement was made, but at last most of the difficulties, including that of selecting the site, have been overcome. The Municipal Air-Port Commission, headed by Don Joaquin Ventalló is able to announce that construction will begin in the able to announce that construction will begin in the near future. Plans for the hangars, illumination, buildings and apparatus have already been drawn.

The opinions of the experts in the matter of a site were so diverse, that this subject took much time to settle. Prat del Llobregat was suggested, and rejected as the ground was extremely clayey and too low, subject to the mists which rise from the river and would be a hindrance to flying. Hospitalet was considered, but the only available ground was too close to buildings and too expensive.

At last the southern part of the Llobregat plain, between Gavá and Viladecans, has been chosen. The ground is very sandy and needs no draining. The position is a convenient one, about eleven miles from Barcelona by the main road to Sitges and just over a quarter of an hour in the train (a station will be made at the entrance of the airdrome). When the extension of the Metro Transversal is made, it will be possible to get there in eight minutes from the Plaza Cataluña.

Among other advantages of this position, the Commission has pointed out that passengers arriving by air and coming into Barcelona will have poleasant first impressions of the city since their route will take them through the residential district of Pedralbes and along the Diagonal. In summer the thousands of bathers who flock to Castelldefels will be visiting the air port and take a greater interest in flying, excellent propaganda and effective in making the people generally more «air minded.»

The equipment of a modern air port is elaborate, and this city does not propose to be behind any other in this respect. The following is an extract from the Memorandum of the Air Commission, specifying what is necessary:

Landing ground, circular in shape with a diameter of 1 kilometer; buildings for the storage of fuel and water; buildings to contain transformer and wireless; electrical apparatus for the illumination of the ground, including an illuminated «T» sign to give landing directions; semaphore apparatus and searchlights; control tower; hangars; hotel and restaurant; garage. hospital, customs house and railway station.

There is also to be a landing field for airships, rectangular in shape, forming a tangent to the flying field. It will be 1,440 meters by 640, and it is hoped that by next May a tower will be erected to take the Graf Zeppelin, which is coming to Barcelona on the 6th of that month. The tower must be capable of withstanding a pull of 20 tons, and there must be a machine running on a circular track around it which can be attached to the dirigible's tail at its moorings so the position of the ship can be changed according to the prevailing wind. Later, a hangar and buildings for supplies will be erected.

The following are the actual and proposed routes which will include Barcelona:

Present Routes: 1. Toulouse-Barcelona-Alicante-Tangiers-Casablanca (daily).

2. Toulouse-Barcelona-Alicante-Tangiers-Casablanca-Natal-Rio de Janeiro-Buenos Aires-Santiago de Chile (weekly).

3. Marseilles-Barcelona (daily).

4. Stuttgart-Geneva-Marseilles-Barcelona (daily in summer; three times a week in winter).

5. Madrid-Barcelona (daily).

6. Barcelona-Marseilles-Genoa-Rome (weekly). Proposed Routes: 7. Paris-Barcelona-Alicante Tangiers-Casablanca (Paris to Barcelona in 3½ hours flying).

8. Paris-Barcelona-Casablanca-Dakar-Natal-Rio de Janeiro-Buenos Aires-Santiago de Chile.

9. Marseilles-Barcelona-Palma-Algiers (in conjunction with 7 will make possible a trip from London to Mallorca in 7 hours.)

10. Barcelona-Cartagena-Gibraltar.

11. Zurich-Barcelona.

12. Berlin-Barcelona-Cádiz.

13. Berlin-Barcelona (special quick service).

14. Brussels-Barcelona-Belgian Congo.
In addition there will be several other special fast routes between Barcelona and the principal Spanish towns, including a Palma-Barcelona service.

Next May, if the mooring mast is ready, there will be a regular Friedrichshafen-Barcelona-Rio de Janeiro airship line. Looking further ahead, it may be gathered from what Dr. Hugo Eckener has said that a New York-Barcelona-Egypt-British India route will be established.

Unsuspected Spain

By Elizabeth O. Deeble

Not sixty miles from Barcelona, over excellent roads for the most part, we made an excursion the other day to one of the natural wonders of the world. Known to ancient Greek and Roman travellers through Strabo's Geography, the salt mountain of Cardona is all but unheard of by the eager tourist of today. We four awe-struck visitors signed the guest book, and noted no foreign names but our own, no date more recent than the preceding month. We had visited, with the courteous permission of the owners, a mountain of solid salt, a mass sufficient in itself to prevent the whole world's soup from tasting flat for at least eight hundred years to come, and had found it not only most interesting, but startlingly beautiful.

The statistics about it are impressive, dull though statistics usually are. They come down to this: although the salt has been worked for more than two thousand years, only the faintest dent has been made on the mass. Less than the twentieth part of the known deposit has been removed, and natural salt springs have renewed at least a portion of the loss. Added to this is the extraordinary colouring of the salt, literally a rainbow made solid. Alone among the mines of the world, it is clean and beautiful within and without. Its surface glitters in the sun; its pits and tunnels sparkle in torchlight. It is a serious industry that is indestructibly beautiful.

The road of approach is worthy of the place. A mild turquoise river winds along flat land, and on either side gentle slopes of semi-barren foothills rise from the roadway. Everything is subdued in size, colour and degree. The slopes are gradual, the vegetation is sparse, the colouring is soft. Then suddenly Cardona rises before you, a hill-town the most picturesque (and regrettably the most malodourous) that it is possible to imagine. An ancient fortress, tier upon tier of walls and towers, and the crown of it all an architecturally excellent and strategically practical building, which is the church, stands upon the highest point. Crowded on the slightly lower saddle connecting it with the actual mountain of salt is the town. The narrow streets crawl in and out, up and down, under arches and through courtyards, become staircases at the most unexpected moments. and broaden suddenly out into plazas at spots where it seems impossible to find an inch of level ground. Any invention of modern science which could dull the sense of smell and sharpen that of sight would be welcomed by the civilized visitor.

It is perhaps too much to hope that Cardona might be cleansed by the present government, but surely the Patronato Nacional de Turismo may some day realize that national monuments of such great interest as this fortress and church should be made accessible. A simple signboard would do the trick. Just now, one takes a car as far up as possible, then climbs the old road that winds around the walls ... to a closed door. Here, if one is lucky enough to be able to communicate with the inhabitants, one learns that there is a guardian who lives in the town below and keeps a key. The weary way is all to be retraced, and the road climbed again with this worthy. For those whose taste is wide enough to enjoy the miracles of nature as well as those of man, the marvels of the present and those of the past together, Cardona is well supplied with satisfactions.

Old Catalán Customs

- III. Ash Wednesday

Few will be the true believers who on Ash Wednesday go to church, receiving on their foreheads the ashes which give the day its name and listening to the priest pronounce the eternal truth: Pulvis eras, pulvis eris.

The greater part of Barcelona's population find it hard to say good bye to Carnival. A prefext is, therefore, found to revive the flame of fun and even let it burn more brightly, though really fasting ought to begin on this day. The prefext is the burial of the sardine.

Last week we accompanied the boy Carnival to his grave and took it for granted that with his solemn funeral the gay feast had found an end. Another funeral is awaiting the mourners. After a few hours' rest, during which the town remains desolate and quiet but for the snores of those who deserve a good sleep after a restless week, Barcelona awakes to another day of frantic gayety, definitely the last.

Towards the later hours of the morning the people will be making by car and tram and bus for the hills, there to dance and sing and, most important, eat. They carry picnic baskets, frying pans, ruck-sacks and bottles and, of course, the sardine which is going to be buried under the pines, to lie in the cool ground for a year. Only a year, for its resting place will be remembered, and it will be dug up and a new tenant provided by the gay undertakers next Ash Wednesday.

Formality is not the order of the day. Table manners are left at home on principle. There will be no spoons for the soup, no forks for the rice, no knives for the meat, no glasses for the wine. Even the perfumed drawing room lions and those dandies who sleep in top hat and gloves, will eat with their fingers and drink from the purrón. Barcelona is left quiet, but the hills are resonanat with gay laughter, song and the rhythmic sound of castanets. The day is vowed to bodily pleasure, mostly that of the stomach. Even the wealthy indulge in gastronomical orgies in their country houses, taking the day as a signal to remove from town until the social season begins again in the autumn.

Carnival will be stone dead for another year.

The first big bull-fight of the season is taking place in Málaga on March 5. Bienvenida, Lalanda and Domingo Ortega are the three best bull fighters in Spain at present and they are seen together only at two or three occasions every year. It is very seldom that foreigners get a chance to see a thoroughly first class bull fight, where all the performers are of the highest possible standard.

The try was well converted by Witty During this half the «Colony» team played much better, having apparently got their second wind. Madrid Report on the current news from our correspondent in the Capital.

THE political situation at the moment is full of interest, and the week in the est, and the week in the Cortes was enlivened with exciting debates, especially on the report of the Commission of Deputies who visited Casas Viejas, the Government stoutly maintaining its stand in the face of strong attacks. The Radicals continued their policy of obstruction with considerable success, but on Friday the Azaña Ministry obtained a vote of confidence, 173 to 130.

Further interesting debates, and possible danger to the Government's support, will come in discussion of the law prohibiting religious instruction, against which thousands of protests are being presented from all parts of Spain.

Extremely cold weather has again set in all over the country. In Madrid the low temperature accompanied with a biting North East wind makes many people afraid to venture out, and the victims of influenza have rapidly increased in number. Four express trains from the north of Spain were snowed up on the hills near Avila, and the mails are all late, no papers arriving on Monday from France or

B.A. Nursing Home, Madrid

Our attention has been drawn to a sentence in an article on the Barcelona Hospital in the issue of Jan. 29th which has been taken as implying a comparison derogatory to the British American Nursing Home in Madrid. This said that the fees of the Barcelona institution were modest «compared with what it would cost to be, say, at the British American Hospital in Madrid.»

The editors fully realize that the conditions of the two nursing homes may be entirely different and that, really, no comparison is possible. We regret that this should have given any offense, especially to an institution which we have never heard mentioned except with words of praise.

PERSONAL INTEREST

An exhibition of interesting and remarkably promising paintings was given by Miss Ruth Elizabeth Van Sant last Monday at Santa Eulalia, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eyre Pinckard. Miss Van Sant shows excellent drawing and surprising (to us) skill in handling colors. She and her mother, Mrs. R. H. Van Sant, left on Friday for a tour of Europe, and the daughter will pursue her studies in Germany.

Mr. George Copeland, the pianist, who has been on a concert tour in the United States, is sailing from New York on March 11th to return to Mallorca. He may, however, make a short concert tour of the principal Spanish cities before settling down in Son Batlé.

Mr. Bernard Weguelin returned last Thursday to his home in Paguerra, after a sojourn in England.

The dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. McCune Thursday evening was a joint celebration of the hostess's and George Washington's birthdays.

Miss Katharine McCormick will show a group of pastel sketches and drawings at the English Tea Room, Terreno, from March 1 to 10. All were made in the vicinity of Palma, mostly Terreno and Bonanova.

The new tea rooms, Over the Way, in Terreno are managed entirely by Miss Tryce Percy. Her friend, Miss Emily Camp, who was described as part owner in these columns last week, has no other than a friendly interest in the enterprise.

The Baroness Gabrielle Michaelofski of Vienna and Miss Ada Rosenthal left Mallorca on Thursday after a visit which they enjoyed so much that they have decided to return next year. Profiting by what they have learned of the difficulty of securing accomodations at the height of the season, they

The Little Club held a «depression party» last evening and while the costumes were in keeping with the times, the spirit of the dancers belied the name. Old clothes were resurrected and those which did not show sufficient wear and tear were effectively altered for the occasion. Probably the most striking example of hard times, and all it may mean, was the impersonation of the old beggar who takes his stand daily outside of the Little Club.

There were fourteen present at the Washington Birthday dinner which Mrs. Morris gave at the Hotel Victoria the other night. The table decoration was an originally arranged centerpiece of red, white and blue carnations which came from The Flower Shop in Terreno. Fresh white carnations had been dipped in a mixture of blue paint and melted wax to produce the field color of the American flag.

The International Language Club is giving a Carnival masked ball tomorrow night, one of the largest and probably one of the brightest with which foreigners assist the week's festivities. There is to be an obligatory cover charge of 3 pesetas.

After a tedious journey from Paris, Mr. C.H. Marfield arrived in Palma yesterday morning and registered at the Hotel Mediterraneo. He immediately set out on a tour of inspection, accompanied by a couple of friends who have recently been recruited to the increasing ranks of American residents. Mr. Marfield's impressions of the place, as he was given a glimpse of the more intimate life of the foreign colony, will probably result in still another addition to the English speaking group on the Island.

An exhibition of the sculptures of Mr. Dimitri Tsapline is opening on Wednesday afternoon at the Casa Singala, Puerto Pollensa, Mr. Tsapline is one of those whose residence and work are gaining the Puerto reputation as an artists' colony, and a number of the models he is showing were executed during his stay here.

Earlier in the day Mrs. Eugene Van Vechtan and Miss Caroline Bigelow lunched with Mrs. Middleton at her home in Corp Mari and it was a sort of Old Home Week for the hostess and her guests. They were residents of Elizabeth, New Jersey, before their advent in Mallorca and have a number of mutual friends in that part of the States.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Jordan have rented Son Quint in Esporlas for several months. They original nally came to Mallorca to visit their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Dorr Newton.

Mr. Richard Jackson is returning to Chicago via Paris and London. He left on the Barcelona boat last Thursday night.

The Alfonso becomes increasingly popular with the owners of dogs. There are three canine guests at the hotel this week and the management has been approached on the matter of constructing kennels for the pets on one of the lower terraces. However, building operations in that vicinity will probably come to an end, for the time being, with the completion of the new wing which is to be opened today (Sunday)

The kitchen and dining room staff are busy today (Sunday) for a formal luncheon party which Don Francisco Miret is giving to fourteen guests, and if the weather permits the scene of that great international pastime, afternoon tea, will be transferred to the sun balcony of the Alfonso.

The Hotel Royal greeted the influx of tourists these last couple of days with mixed emotions. Rooms which been engaged by letter weeks ago had not been vacated according to schedule and the management were put to it to see that the strangers were given temporary shelter. Rooms in pensions and even private homes in the neighborhood were requisitioned, and the dining room has many more than its quota at each meal.

Mr. Daniel McCoy Braddock of the American Consulate General in Barcelona arrived on Friday morning's boat and was hard at it stamping passports and attending to other personal matters for the Americans almost as soon as he was registered at the Hotel. He will stay for several days.

Miss Mary Ellen Alderson is a young English journalist who has come to Mallorca for the purpose of singing the praises of the Island, its romance and history, through the medium of the British press.

Thomas W. Stevens, an artist from the United States, is one of those who registered at the Royal last week, and Mr. and Mrs. Adams and their daughter, Miss Shaw and Miss Dickinson, Mr. and Mrs. Birley and Mr. and Mrs. Lord and a party of four arrived on the Orama Thursday.

Having left for Barcelona to attend to business last week, Mr. Archie Campbell writes that he is returning to Mallorca, and the Royal Hotel, as soon as possible. He says that the weather on the mainland has been even less pleasant than on the Island.
