The Republic Triumphant

As we write, the last embers of the fighting that broke out in many parts of Spain on Friday are burning out to inevitable extinction. The forces of democracy and the upholding of the constitution are everywhere supreme over those who sponsored a dictatorship of the Socialist Left and their Catalan allies. All the more important rebel leaders, including Don Lluís Companys ex-president of Cataluña and Sr. Azaña, ex-premier of Spain, are in custody.

Let us briefly recapitulate the events of the last few days. On Monday October the first, Sr. Samper's cabinet resigned under pressure from the Catholic parties of the Right. Sr. Samper adopted the bold but thoroughly constitutional course of asking a Republican minister of the Centre party, backed by a parliamentary majority in the Cortes, to form a government, well knowing that this would cause the hostility of the extreme left wing parties.

The task was entrusted to the veteran Sr. Lerroix, who, by the following Thursday night, had formed his cabinet. On Friday the general strike was proclaimed throughout Spain, and rifles had begun to crack in the Capital, while severe fighting commenced in Asturias. On Saturday the disorders came to a head with the attempt to set up the Catalan State of the Spanish Federal Republic at Barcelona, in opposition to the central Government in Madrid.

Till the last moment, the Madrid Government hoped that the Catalan separatists would hold their hand, and refrain from plunging the country into Civil War. But Sr. Companys deluded both himself and his friends into the belief that General Batet, commanding the troops in Cataluña, and himself a Catalan, would support the revolution against Madrid.

The Guns

But the general stood fast. Asked to come in with the new government, he requested an hour in which to think it over. Within two hours he had surrounded the Catalan Government Offices and the Town Hall. Sharp fighting broke out, but the revolutionaries were outfought and overpowered, and at dawn on Sunday the Catalan Government surrendered unconditionally.

There was intermittent firing in Barcelona on Sunday and Monday, and a certain amount of fighting in neighbouring Catalan towns. The attempt to effect a simultaneous rising in Madrid was put down with little loss of life, while there has been considerable fighting in Asturias, where a hungry and unemployed mining population had followed extremist counsels.

But everywhere the forces of the republic have triumphed. The Army the Navy and the Civil Guard stood firm, and all over Spain there has been an overwhelming gesture of patriotism and loyalty.

After a cabinet meeting in Madrid on Monday, a large crowd demanded with enthusiasm the appearance of ministers on a balcony. Even the young Marques d'Estella, whose father, better known as Primo de Rivera saved Spain from disorder, and who is himself the leader of the Fascist party, promised the government his enthusiastic support and co-operation, as did the leader of the Monarchists Sr. Calvo Sotelo.

The number of casualties is not yet known. Comparatively few losses were incurred in Madrid, where the rising was of a sporadic and unorganized nature, but in Barcelona and Asturias the number of dead and wounded is feared to be considerable. The behaviour of the Army, the Navy, and Civil Guard has been beyond praise, and there have been no acts of sabotage or unnecessary violence on the part of the properly constituted forces of the Republic.

Iron Hand in Velvet Glove

The new government, thus tried at the outset of its career, has shown itself able to maintain its authority with a strong, albeit a just hand. For the first time in its history, the Republic has a government with a majority in the Cortes, and we are justified in hoping that the government, though administering martial law with rigour but without cruelty, will not gratuitously provide the opposition with martyrs.

Clemency combined with a readiness for political compromise may easily give the people of Spain a more stable regime than any they have enjoyed since the foundation of the republic.

But there are bound to be difficulties ahead, between, for instance, the Popular Agrarians and the Radicals. The Fascist danger is grossly exaggerated.

What the President of the Republic and Sr. Lerroix have had to face was not the spontaneous uprising of an oppressed democracy but an attempt to overthrow a majority government in the interest of a dictatorship of the Left.

Spain remains, secure and united. Probably in a far stronger position than before.

REVIEW OF THE WEEK'S NEWS

All eyes have been turned on Spain during the past week. On another page we have endeavoured to give a fairly concise account of the tragic happenings. Meanwhile, order has been restored, except for a little desultory sniping by misguided bands of rebels, and the dislocation of traffic and business by strikes in various towns.

The Madrid Government has acted with exemplary promptitude and efficiency, and a wave of patriotism and loyalty has surged over Spain.

Señor Azaña, ex-socialist premier of the republic, has been captured in Barcelona. It is not yet certain what fate is in store for him and other leaders of the Separatist movement, but they can expect but short shrift at the hands of the guardians of law and order.

Murder in Marseilles

We had hardly recovered from the news from the Spanish mainland when the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia and M. Barthou, French foreign minister, took place in Marseilles. The whole civilized world is horror stricken at this senseless political crime, and it is likely that troublous days are in store for Yugoslavia, whose new king is an eleven-year-old boy, thus necessitating the appointment of a Regency. Messages of sympathy from the heads of all European Governments have been sent to the Yugoslav Royal Family.

More Working in England

Since the National Government came into power in England, the number of unemployed has dropped by no fewer than 750,000. The actual number of unemployed in England is now just over two million, and more people are finding work every day, particularly in the fields of heavy industry and textiles.

This compares very favourably with the ten million workless in the United States, even making allowances for the difference in population. Sir Herbert Austin, head of the Austin Motor Co. is particularly optimistic.

Sport

The World's Series Baseball competition was won by the St. Louis Cardinals, who defeated the Detroit Tigers by three games to two.

British players won four titles in the Pacific Coast Lawn Tennis Championships, which have just been decided. Fred Perry won the men's singles, and Miss Katherine Stammers the women's singles, while the women's doubles were won by Miss Betty Nuthall and Miss Freda James. Two British pairs also divided the mixed event.

Safety

In order that every precaution may be taken to prevent a recurrence of a tragedy similar to that of the Morro Castle, the Federal Government of the United States is putting a ranking naval officer aboard each passenger ship that leaves one of its ports. These officers will make one trip each, and study while on the trip, all safety measures that are taken. They will inspect life boats, observe fire drills, etc. This should go a long way to reassure the public and help the steamship lines in a bad moment. A moment that they can ill afford at this time.

On The Spot

A well known resident of Mallorca has been holidaying with his family in the little Pyrenean town of Puigcerdà, quite close to the Spanish Frontier. The holiday was drawing to a close and he wanted to return to Palma. The general strike had been declared, pickets were patrolling the streets, and it was necessary to get a permit to proceed to Barcelona from the strike committee.

The permit was issued on Saturday afternoon. But that night, the Catalan State in the Federal Republic of Spain was declared, and the Communists took the opportunity to declare a Communist Republic also. Both parties staged processions, which regarded each other with suspicion.

Next day. Our friend rang up Barcelona, and was strongly advised not to try to get through, as shooting was going on. On Monday, he was told that Barcelona was fairly quiet but that fighting was in progress in various towns in the neighbourhood. A little later, telephone and telegraph communication ceased altogether.

He decided to cross the frontier into France. He was allowed to do this, but his car was commandeered and seized. However, with his family, he succeeded in reaching Perpignan.

Next day they went on to Marseilles, where they arrived an hour and a half after the assassination of King Alexander and M. Barthou. The streets teemed with police and troops making wholesale arrests, while in the hotel French generals sobbed with emotion.

Tickets to Palma were at first refused, but eventually through the good offices of the Spanish Consul they were obtained, and the party returned thankfully to the ever-peaceful Balears.

The Exchange

During the past week despite Spain's internal troubles the peseta remained firm. Many had expected it to fall and without doubt a number who had backed up their belief by selling the currency short, found themselves nicely caught. Spain's Federal obligations, both long and short time issues, even moved up, a striking evidence of faith in the new order of things. Below is the exchange from October 5th to the 12th. During the first of the week no quotations were received by the bank.

Once Again a King Dies

Like the fatal shooting in Serajevo 20 years ago, the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia on Monday in Marseilles has stunned Europe. Whether this assassination will ignite the military fires of Europe as did the other remains to be seen. He was shot down by a fanatic, a citizen of his own country and gives his life uselessly. A pitiful recompense to the cause of justice that the assassin was cut to pieces on the spot. What is it in the warped minds of these fanatics that prompts them to such acts? Is it the world old craving for the spotlight or do they really feel that by such an act they are promoting the cause of liberty?

King Alexander ascended to the throne of Yugoslavia in 1921 and had served his country well for thirteen years. At the time of his death he was but 46 years old. His wife, former Princess Marie of Roumania, was travelling by train to Paris having a dislike of the sea, and thus was spared the fate of her husband. Their son, the Prince Peter, was at school in England. He left at once for home and has been declared king. He is but eleven years old and the regency will be administered by his mother and uncle Paul.

The brother of the dead king, Prince Paul, is married to Princess Marina of Greece's elder sister. It is of course certain that the king's death will postpone the English royal marriage.

Considerable anxiety is felt in diplomatic circles. It is feared that the murder will precipitate a Croatian uprising, a situation which, if it should come to pass could well upset all of Europe, and be the cause of general mobilization orders.

It is indeed fortunate that the assassin was a Croat, a Yugoslavian subject, and not an Italian. Had an Italian done the deed, nothing could have prevented war between Italy and Yugoslavia.

Another king has died, a martyr to the so-called march of civilization. A civilization which is based on greed, powder and the craze for power.

Diplomat Dies in Double Slaying

With the assassination of M. Louis Barthou at Marseilles dies one of the world's greatest diplomats. He was French Foreign Minister and at 72 had probably more diplomatic years to his credit than any other man of the present. The work upon which he was engaged recently was of immense importance to his fatherland and his loss to France is incalculable. As a boy in 1871 he saw Paris occupied by the Germans; his present aims were to see that this never occurred again. He was endeavouring to arrange sufficient alliances in France's favour to ensure her safety from invasion forever. To this end he wanted a seat in the League of Nations for Russia. To do this it was necessary to placate Poland, Portugal the Argentine and the Irish Free State. His work was well on the way when stopped by his sudden death.

M. Louis Barthou was born in 1862 of a poor family who gave all they had to educate their son. He proved worthy of their sacrifices and turned out to be a brilliant lawyer. He was shortly a member of the Chamber of Deputies, from there it was a short step to the Cabinet and in the year before the Great War was Premier. At this point he was responsible for legislation lengthening the military service required by France of her sons. Shortly after, this was to prove of benefit and he was hailed as one of the Saviors of France.

And now through the stupid bullet of an assassin he is lost to France and to the world. A gallant man.

The Green Island

By Catherine Hutter

We didn't buy a guide book on Ibiza because there was none to be had; we knew nothing about the place except that it was a Pityusic Island, akin to the Balears, and thus we sailed out from Palma Bay on a calm blue sea one Friday at noon. The Compañía Transmediterranea's steamers, which ply between the various islands and the mainland, are shiny white and look like seagulls gliding over the water. They say the Compañía makes seven million a year on postal service alone — so they can afford to have shiny white boats. The sea isn't always calm, but we're in luck. We travel cubierto (deck) for eight pesetas and sleep in the sunshine.

The entry into Ibiza harbour is fascinating. Hills and rocks jut out of the water in quaint conglomeration; the third rock on our left—yes—that one—just like a dinosaur! And in the distance Formentera is strung along the horizon like a hazy string of pearls. We skim in and out between the hills and slip into the harbour. Ibiza, built on a height, stares at us out of a hundred windows facing the sea. Tiers of whitewashed houses built on top of each other back up the hill, crowned by an ancient castle and cathedral. The same ruddy sandstone light pervades Ibiza as all the Balears, but the houses are whiter and the architecture more primitive than in Mallorca. The city presents one uniform block, with an intensely Moorish atmosphere.

Exploring

We daren't begin to explore; evening is drawing in and we make a dash for the country. A car transports us over miserable roads to a beach village, Santa Eulalia. The drive is entrancing. We thank the fates that gave us — before we left Mallorca — the chance of tea with an architect who had made a special study of Ibizan architecture. We look eagerly for the typical whitewashed fincas with their stern oblong structure, tiny windows with wooden shutters only, no glass, and their flat roofs thatched with seaweed. The walls of the rooms are built up some few inches higher than the ceiling so that the roof serves as a perfect plan of the house. And the ovens! Built onto the house, adjoining the kitchen, they jut squarely out and are covered, dome-like. We found it all, true to description.

The landscape was dotted with fincas of all sizes but conventional in shape and all white and gleaming however far away. And the greenness of Ibiza the island! After all, she boasts a river and Moorish irrigation still in use. Little narrow stone canals thread their way through the countryside, and ancient water wheels are turned by patient blindfolded mules. The hoods which cover their eyes are on sale in the town and look exactly like Egyptian breastplates.

Green Fields

Yes, the green of Ibiza is balm to the heat-worn Mallorcan eye. The fields are bursting with ripe corncobs, green vegetables, grass, and masses of blossoming oleander all along the coast and overflowing in the river bed. And this in mid-summer! The Ibizan peasants are out working hard until long after the sun sets. We are delighted to discover one old man to talk to and he, so proud of his French which is exquisite, is loth to let us go. Night falls and we sleep without mosquito nets once more.

Next morning we discover that bathing in Santa Eulalia is not so good, rocks and stones and shallow water far out to sea, so we decide to walk to the famous beach of Cala Llonga, about four kilometres away. Our alpargatas shuffle through the red sand—under tremendous straw hats our faces are streaming. The dog trots ahead and stops under every shady tree to look appealingly back at us. Santa Eulalia rises up behind with its imposing Moorish church crowning the hill top. I wonder how many people know that the cathedral of Palma de Mallorca and the church of Santa Eulalia de Ibiza are two of the most unique buildings in the world. Santa Eulalia appeals perhaps even more than Palma because its oriental aspect is strange and new to us. Impressive entirely through the simple grandeur of its lines, it dominates the view for miles around.

- Ball Game (Pelota Vasca) — Fronton Novedades (Calle Caspe) and Principal Palace (Rambla Sta. Monica.) Games at 10.15. night and at 4 in the afternoon. This is an interesting game similar to our Fives played with a bat or a curved basket, which originated in the Basque Country. Betting is allowed on the games and is most exciting. A visit should be paid to one of these frontons while in Barcelona.
- Horse Racing—Every Sunday afternoon at Casa Antunez. First race at 4.15. Trotting and horseback racing. Betting allowed.
- Music Halls—These are mainly situated in the Paralelo and are generally of a daring nature. The better class cabarets are the Stambul, Ba-ta-clan, Bombay, Hollywood. Some Spanish dancing can often be seen there at these places and also at the Excelsior in the Ramblas. It is wiser not to tell your mummy you're going.

About Barcelona

Beginning with a general strike and attempted revolution and split in half by a fiesta, this week has been one of unusual excitement but little social activity as we know it.

Several parties that had been planned as season openers had to be postponed as a result of social disorders and general disorganization. Consul General Claude. I. Dawson's reception for Mr. and Mrs. Franklyn will take place at some future date. We understand that there is a long list of guests to this party.

The American Lunch Club was unable to meet as arranged on the 11th but will do so at some future date. We shall publish the date as soon as it has been definitely fixed.

Mrs. Mills gave a bridge on Tuesday afternoon to a small group of her friends at her home in Calle Muntaner. Among the guests were Mrs. Gagnon, Mrs. Hill, Miss Sauvalle and Miss Parsons. Mrs. Braddock, who has only just returned with her husband from their holiday in America, was also present.

We noticed Mr. and Mrs. Slade presiding at a small dinner party in the bohemian atmosphere of Las Caracoles on Tuesday night. Miss Davida Slade, who has now definitely left school days behind her, lent a touch of youth to the gathering.

The Reverend C.H.D. Grimes, who has been Barcelona's Chaplain for the last two and a half years, will leave us in early November to become Pastor at the Embassy Chapel in Vienna. He will preach for the month. All those who know Mr. Grimes wish him all the best of luck in his new parish.

Mr. and Mrs. Henderson Rider are once again back at their home in Tres Torres from their recent trip to England.

Mr. Lewis and family expect to leave on Wednesday for a three month's vacation in the United States.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lindsay have arrived in Barcelona and are at present staying at the Hotel Continental. Mr. Lindsay has come to take up a post with the Fox Film, Co. which has very ambitious plans for this year. This go-ahead company has taken over the programmes of the Actualidades and are filling the cinema daily with up to date news reels and culture films.

The Reverend Jones, of the Seamen's Institute, will leave Barcelona to-day for a holiday in England. He will probably spend most of his time in North Wales. Mrs. Jones will get away for her holiday tomorrow to Palma, where she expects to spend about a fortnight.

There is good news this week from these who have been ill. Mr. R. Nichols of the American Export Lines has now completely recovered from his attack of appendicitis. Mr. Burgoyne, who was taken ill with septic poisoning while on a climbing tour in the Swiss mountains is also quite well now.

Mrs. Arthur Witty and Mrs. Kendall Park were entertained on Wednesday to tea by Mrs. John Shields and Lady Rivett-Carnac. The last named ladies left for England on Thursday.

A very serious tragedy was narrowly averted on Monday when firing broke out in Plaza Cataluña. A stray bullet pierced the coat of arms of the United States Consulate General and would have entered the room where the Consul General was at work, if it had not been deflected to the corner of the balcony by coming in contact with an iron bar, just outside the window near Mr. Dawson's table.

The Seamen's Institute was riddled with rifle fire during the week end and many are the missiles that have found a temporary home above and around the billiard table. Rev. and Mrs. Jones were in the Institute at the time of the firing but were fortunately unhurt.

Many foreign tourists were held up as a result of the frontiers being closed at the beginning of the week. Mrs. Hutter who was travelling with her car, and Mrs. Johnson, staying at the Hotel Continental, were unable to continue their trip for several days.

Miss Soler, of Bonanova, has now returned to town. The well known philosopher and lawyer, Mr. Renter, demonstrated his good taste and even better fortune by securing Miss Soler as guest at lunch on Friday.

IN THE FRONT LINE

The divergencies of opinion and political tendency between the Catalan and Central Government reached their climax on Thursday evening when the constitution of the new Madrid Government became known in Barcelona. The fact that several members of right wing parties had been given important portfolios in this second Lerroux Government was received with protest by the Catalan people who saw their rights endangered. This movement was supported by the Catalan Government which was in the hands of the «Esquerra», the big left wing party, and which declared a legal general strike on Friday. Though in the rest of Spain the workers also protested in the same manner, the feature of the strike in Catalonia was its absolute peacefulness. While in other parts the movement was immediately fought by the legal forces, here they stood behind it, and therefore there was no reason for trouble.

In the early morning life in the City started normally, but with the day advancing, traffic, as well as commercial life, was stopped by members of the «Esquerra», while neither police nor troops interfered with their activity. The streets and particularly the Ramblas were crowded with disputing groups which in the later afternoon concentrated into a demonstration demanding the separation of liberal Cataluña from reactionary Spain.

An ultimatum of the Catalan Government, which threatened a coup d'état in case the Lerroux ministry was not withdrawn, was not heeded, in consequence of which President Luis Companys declared the «Catalan State inside the Spanish Federal Republic» on Friday evening at 8.15. When declaring this he apparently not only counted on the support of the entire Catalan people, but also on the police and military forces stationed in Catalonia. The semi-militarized left wing youth movement, called the «Escamots», was summoned to defend the new-born Catalan State and given arms to protect it against any possible attack.

The General Stood Firm

The enigma in the situation was the attitude which the commander of the troops in Catalonia would take. Would he, as a Catalan, stand behind the local movement, or would he remain loyal to the Central Government whatever its political tendency? Facts show that Sr. Companys had miscalculated General Batet's probable stand. Two hours after the declaration of Catalan independence the commander ordered the ban of martial law to be read in the streets and this was the sign for the hostilities to begin.

The «gros» of the Catalan forces — Guardias de Asalto, Mozos de Escuadra and «Escamots» — was distributed to defend three main positions, the Generalitat, the Town Hall and the Catalan Home Office. The neighbouring roofs were held by snipers who were to defend the approach to these buildings. The superiority of arms of the regular troops was soon found to be too much for the defenders, who originally had been intended as an auxiliary force to the troops who had been expected to come over on the local side. Although from the beginning it was obvious that the contest would be uneven, the rebels stubbornly kept up hostilities all through the night until in the morning, at six, the white flags outside the three government buildings indicated that the heavy canon fire had done its work effectively.

The next step was the arrest of President Companys with many of his Government who had, to avoid further useless bloodshed, ordered hostilities to cease. Some of the leaders escaped successfully, among them Dr. Dencas, the Catalan Minister of the Interior and Miguel Badia, until recently chief of police.

The Damage

Although this was the end of official resistance, the rebels still kept up isolated sniping from the roofs of houses in the old quarter, and the working class districts, and not till Monday afternoon did they cease hostilities.

The damage done must be seen to be appreciated. Apart from the already mentioned government buildings, those of several left wing party headquarters suffered considerably during the fight. The centre of the «Escamots», which is situated exactly opposite the Atarazanas barracks, shows the signs of canon shots on its facade and so does the building of the C.A.D.C.I. — the Employees Union — which is a little higher up in the Rambla Sta. Monica. The number of dead is not exactly known. Officially the number of forty has been published.

The town is now in the hands of the military and life has resumed its normal course. Only at the strategic points of the City, soldiers still keep a watch in case of any emergency. The prisoners, most of whom were taken to the ship Uruguay moored in the port, will be tried by Court Martial, among them Sr. Azaña who, with several members of his former Cabinet had come to Barcelona with a view of giving their personal adhesion to the movement in defence of the last stronghold of left wing tendencies in Spain.

A Few Details

A few interesting details have not or have hardly been mentioned by the press and have circulated among the people only in form of rumours. Just before the broadcasting station was taken by the troops, a voice was heard from the microphone which in extreme despair cried: «Catalans, Catalans Catalans, hear me.» When he had repeated this several times, the sound of a shot was heard which was followed by the groaning of a man as if he were dying. One of the canon shots which missed its destination came to rest on a cotton warehouse in the port which went up in flames and completely burnt down. The smoke could be seen for a long while standing out against the pale afternoon sky. The sniping which alarmed the lower parts of the town on Monday morning was caused, as eyewitnesses declare, by men probably anarchists, who in order to create alarm fired into the air from the roofs of their houses causing the soldiers to fire in reply at no visible target.

It is hoped that the authorities will be generous in their victory and establish a rule which will create an atmosphere of peace.

Donald Newhall's Pictures

Editor's note. The following criticism of an exhibition of Mr. Donald Newhall's portraits recently held in Boston, has been sent us by a friend. We believe it to be taken from The Boston Transcript. We feel that it may be of interest to Mr. Newhall's many friends, some of whom, perhaps, do not know of his consummate art as a portrait painter.

Mr. and Mrs. Newhall are expected in Mallorca in November.

There is something very satisfying in the exhibition of portraits by Donald V. Newhall in the Robert C. Vose galleries, Copley sq.

It is the work of an artist comparatively unknown to Boston—an artist of whom it might be said: He is imbued with the best traditions of portrait painting in Boston.

His portraits possess those qualities which Boston has always admired from the days of Copley to the present which might be summed up in the word «satisfying».

These portraits are surely satisfying as likenesses—likenesses that are characteristic beyond the mere externals, which possess the elusive thing we call personality.

This is where the real portrait artist comes in. In the first place, he must be a consummate draftsman and in the second place must know how to paint. These are fundamental. Next comes the artistry necessary to rise above the mere craftsman. That is the creative part. It comes in the pose, in the lighting, in the general arrangement of the composition and in the color harmony by means of which all of the parts are related and unified.

Mr. Newhall fulfills all of these requirements—and something more. For there is distinction in his work—a personal note of refinement. He is a man of wide study. He is international in his training and associations. He was born in England of American parents; is a graduate of Oxford; studied painting under Pietro Saltini in Florence; at Julian's in Paris and at the Pennsylvania Academy under Emil Carlsen and Cecilia Beaux.

He served in the United States Army during the World War, after which he returned to New York and resumed painting. In 1932, after some study in Spain, he settled in the island of Mallorca in the Mediterranean. His portraits are nearly all of Americans. The exception is the fine portrait of Senor Telesforo Casanova—reminiscent of the robust style of Zuloaga.

One of the big portraits in the exhibition is that of Hon William E. Wyatt—a man of strong character and individuality, in an easy, seated pose with a pipe in the left hand. It is intense in facial expression, as if caught in the midst of an interesting conversation. It is splendidly painted.

Another is the portrait of Dr. George J. Hill. It is full of character; is fine in pose and has the quality of life in it.

The portrait of Mrs. George J. Hill is a beauty in more than one sense. The pose is dignified, the arrangement is perfect. This is true of the portrait of Miss Frances Goodwin, of Mrs. Richards Follet; of Miss Kathleen Stewart, and of Mrs. Jonathan Brown 3d. The portrait of Master Philip French is a gem, and equally so is that of Miss Merrill Payson.

The portrait of George Copeland, the pianist, is a notable achievement.

OF PERSONAL INTEREST

Several members of Palma's foreign colony were in Barcelona during the recent disturbances. Mrs. Catherine Hutter had an exciting time, and was actually in the Hotel Continental while soldiers were firing from the roof. Miss Camilla Somers succeeded in leaving Barcelona for Paris by air, after the trains had stopped running.

Visitors to town from Pollensa have been Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Lincoln and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Rose. Mr. Lincoln has now recovered from his recent illness. He and Mrs. Lincoln expect to leave for America some time in November, after a two year's residence on the island. Mr. and Mrs. Rose are hoping to come into Palma for the winter.

A new bar, the Lion d'Or opened yesterday with refreshments for its invited guests. The bar is on Calle Colon and is after the foreign trade as well as the Spanish of which it is assured. It is nicely decorated, has a good location and its prices are in line with other cafes run by Mallorquins. The proprietor is Sr. D. Juan Pomar.

That Jovial Caballero Colonel Riccard, is back again in Palma after a long stay in England. We hear that the bookies at the race course are coming out in new spats and derby hats to mark the occasion, and that many enticing looking bottles in the local thirst emporiums are in a flutter of excitement.

Mrs. Catherine Hutter left on the Llangibby Castle on Wednesday for Genoa, en route for Vienna, where she is taking her little boy to see a specialist. She expects to be back here for Christmas. Mrs. Hutter was in Barcelona during the recent excitement, and has lively memories of the ping of bullets in the Plaza Cataluña.

Herr Arthur Segal, the famous German artist, has given one of his pictures to Sr. D. Emilio Darder, Palma's Alcalde, to be sold for the benefit of the flood victims. Herr Segal held a one man exhibition at the Circulo Mallorquin last April.

Mr. Martin-Jones that elastic youth from Sóller, Cala Ratjada and other distant points left Tuesday night for Barcelona on the first leg of his trip to Budapest. He sold, during the week his Rolls, but despite this hopes that he may return next summer. Just what he is to do in Hungary is a little doubtful, something to do with translations but from what to what he is not quite sure, and as he speaks no Hungarian we wouldn't know either.

ALONG THE WATERFRONT

On Tuesday, yet another ship poked its stern up to the mole in the midst of the yacht colony. She is the good ship Gin and Angostura, flying the flag of the Royal Gibraltar Yacht Club, and her owners, Major Grant-Smith and his wife are on board. The Gin and Angostura is a 60 ft. schooner with a broad beam and is immensely comfortable. The owners plan on living aboard her here for the winter. The Major is late of the 4th Bombay Rifles, and so was not unduly disturbed Saturday night last when they lay in Barcelona near the Naval Air Station and heard shots singing overhead. We suspect that Major Grant-Smith will push Admiral Cumberlege for the post as best raconteur of the fleet.

The yachts are so many now and in such a small place that the owners are appealing to the authorities to shift some of the local boats that are tied up there, for storage only. Due to the way in which they are packed in, should bad weather come, considerable damage might result.

Mr. Gordon Pyle, owner of the L'Insoumise is leading the life of a bachelor while Mrs. Pyle is on her way to the United States. He is considering making a trip to Gibraltar, by way of Ibiza and Málaga. The interior of the L'Insoumise is a revelation to those who are used to the more severe fittings of smaller boats. The main cabin is panelled in old walnut, the actual panelling having been taken from a Mediaeval castle in France. Adjoining the main cabin is a smaller writing room done in quartered oak, complete with fireplace, bookshelves and lounges. On the walls are some rare old paintings by Dutch masters.

The small yacht Zenita II of New Bedford, Mass. will put to sea shortly bound for Marseilles. Mr. Short received a telegram from her owner, Mr. Sherman Fitch to send her along and this he will do. On the trip she will be under the command of that hardy mariner Capt. J.V. Cook, M.C.

Many tickets have been sold for the lecture this afternoon by Colonel C. H. Gurney at the Mallorca Junior Club. The Colonel will talk on «The Mediterranean and Syria» and it should prove well worth hearing as he is a man who has had an intensely interesting life and has also the ability to talk clearly and well. The proceeds of the lecture will go toward the Flood Relief Fund and is sponsored by the Mallorca Society of Arts and the British Association as well as the Mallorca Junior Club. Tea will be served.

Much to her many friends' regret, Lady Mercer has decided not to return to Palma this winter.. Mrs. John Lowry and her children have gone to Camp de Mar for a month before settling down here again for the winter...

The Jane, Captain Clement Flower commanding, has reached Ibiza. Reports have also been slow in coming in, owners as well as crew being loth to give out details of the long trip from Andraitx. We have discounted the rumour that the Jane was taken round the Horn on her voyage.

Commander and Mrs. Alan Hillgarth are back on the island after their holiday on the mainland, minus their car, which is somewhere near the Spanish frontier.

Miss Jean Rivers and Mr. Sidney Salt have returned to Palma, after a two months stay in Deya.

Don't miss the pictures at the Galerías Costa this week.

Staying in the peace and quiet of Mr. Street's Pension in Son Serra are: Miss Ida Durand, Mrs. E.A. Kershaw, Mrs. C.I. Palliser Mr. and Mrs. W. Pirrie Hughes, Mr. John Brodigan, Miss M.H. Adams, Miss C.V. Hanby, Mr. G. Kettle and Mrs. and Miss Pemberton Wooler.

Herr Fritz Wiegmann, German painter of note will show his work at the Galerías Costa during the next two weeks. He has exhibited in New York and Chicago where his work was very well received.

Mr. and Mrs. Seltz gave a party at their flat in Calle Olmos on Monday night. We are told that the gaiety was hectic. Several casualties are reported. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Jacobsen, Cap. Evan Freer, Miss Nita Dryberg; Mrs. Grubb and Mr. Harry Firbanks. Several of these are believed to be suffering from shell-shock.

Taking advantage of the beautiful weather and the fact that it was a holiday, Captain Noble Clay put to sea in his ship, Miss Virginia. With him on board were Sr. Rafael de Lacey, Sr. Jose Sillest, Mr. George Wilkins and a sprinkling of small children. The ladies in the party went by car and all joined up on the beach at Son Caliu. Mr. Clay lost a hat; «Pepe» Sillest fell overboard; there was a moment of indecision when it was apparent that both could not be saved. A hurried vote was taken, and almost unanimously it was decided to save the human life. Who voted against this is not known.

IBIZAN INTERLUDES

In spite of the recent troubles in many parts of Spain, our Island here has kept its accustomed quiet and peaceful atmosphere. Here one enjoys life to its fullest. At this time of year nature is at its best and the colours at sunset are beyond description. A bathe in the hot sun of mid-morning and a walk in the cool of the evening make one wish to live here forever. On another page a better pen than mine attempts to describe some of the beauty of this tranquil place. I can but put down a tiny part of what I feel.

Dr. and Mrs. Heymann who have been residents here for a considerable time are to be found once or twice each week with guests in for bridge.

Herr Hans Fritz is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Hassolds at Cala Gracio. Herr Fritz but recently arrived from India where he was often the guest of the Viceroy and Lady Willingdon. His work was greatly admired when he exhibited in Delhi.

Mr. B. Merryck left for Palma, as did Captain and Mrs. Pring Mill and their young son... Among the newer arrivals here are: Miss Alastair Graham, Mr. and Mrs. E. St. Aubyn, Mr. William Gulring and Miss Kate Arendt.

One to return from the outposts is Mrs. M. Muller, mother of Renate Muller the cinema star. Mrs. Muller has been on Formentera for a few days. With her was Miss Marguerite Schimmelpfenning. We hear that Mrs. Muller expects to leave shortly.

One of the most entertaining of Ibiza's simple attractions is the daily walk with Frau Lucius to the beach. Walking and physical culture are her two doctrines, and if you go with her you are in for plenty of both.

In Puerto Pollensa

Miss Audrey Freese left the Mar-i-Cel last week expecting to travel from Barcelona to Genoa by air and then on to Merano to join her family there. Advised in Palma that she would not be permitted to leave Spain she has returned to us once more. An ancestor of Miss Freese's, Mr. Henry Freese, botanist and savant gave his name to the flowering plant known as «Freesia». Her sister, Countess du Coudray, hopes to return with her husband to the Port shortly.

Mrs. Steichen has been confined to her house for the past fortnight with a poisoned foot... Mrs. and Miss Flanagan have taken a charming flat on the «Gold Coast»...Recent departures: Sr. and Sra. Rossendo Klein and their two pretty daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Jacobsen who have returned with «Pepe» to Palma. They returned, unfortunately without their German Boxer which they suspect of having been stolen.

Among the new arrivals at the Mar-i-Cel are: Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton, Mr. Linton and his daughter.

er. Mrs. Alteren, Herr Haas, Mrs. Clark and Mr. and Mrs. Lorimer, who were delayed in Barcelona three days but are now safely arrived.

The sleek looking schooner yacht which made its appearance in our port on Tuesday has turned out to be the Danish ship Dorian. On her foremast she flies the colorful flag of the Kongelig Dansk Yacht Club. She is an auxiliary schooner of 100 ft. and her owner is Mr. Vett.

The Port has had one of the best summers for some years, although it was a pity that the sailing club could not hold more races. Perhaps they felt it would be unfair to take any attention away from the races for the America's Cup! We have been honoured by the visit of the Prince of Wales, as well as two famous actresses, Miss Gertrude Lawrence and Miss Katherine Cornell. Traut's Bar has been full for dancing every night, and everyone has enjoyed Mr. Palmer's amusing decorations as well as the music supplied by Mr. Duane and Mr. Land.

Terreno's New Rendezvous

Last night was opened Terreno's latest haunt for dancing, drinks and all that goes with them. It is called Chez Maxim's, and people who were here last winter will hardly recognize a transformed and enlarged Turkey Bar. The proprietors, Messrs. Schlatter and Schanz, have spared no expense to provide a really comfortable and intimate locale for their many friends and clients who found the Beller Terrace so enjoyable during the summer.

The new Bar, beautifully appointed, is placed just to the right of the entrance, and the old Turkey Bar has been thrown into one with the old bridge room, giving much more room for dancing. At the same time the new indirect lighting gives the place a discreet and intimate air.

The management have engaged Harry Bowmann the well-known bar-pianist from the Femina of Berlin, and Charly d'Argovie, the eccentric dancer from the Casino de Paris. The entertainment side of things will be in the hands of these two popular artistes. Behind the bar one of the proprietors is always to be found, as well as Otto, most sympathetic of barmen.

We feel sure that Chez Maxim's is certain of a great welcome and that a prosperous season lies ahead of it.
