On the Island

By ELIZABETH DRURY

The prospect of good tennis and the sun brought out the gayest and biggest crowd of extranjeros I have yet seen. I recognized many friends in the gathering and so I might as well tell you about them.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherry Magan of Genova were there among the spectators.

Mr. Mangan, you know, is the author of Cinderella Married, a story of what happened to the girl after she married her prince. The book made its appearance in The States only two weeks ago.

He has just completed a book of short stories portraying life in a small community. He calls the book Barclay Street.

Another new book of his is a volume of poems with a very intriguing name. He will publish both of them in the Fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Mangan plan to stay here until the last of April. From here they will go back to The States where Mr. Mangan plans to drop his writing for a year to study mathematics and physics under private tutors.

Another onlooker at the match was Mr. Woodner Silverman, the young artist who is spending part of the time allotted him by a Beaux Arts scholarship making sketches of the Island.

Mr. Silverman won the Paris Prize while studying architecture at Harvard, but since that time he has become as much a professional artist as an architect. Last year he had a very successful exhibit of his sketches at Paris.

Unfortunately for his many friends in Majorca, he must return to New York by June.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gavett, of El Terreno, were among the crowd, and they announced to their friends that they planned to leave on the Cruise Bot Oceana tonight. They are going to Genova on the boat, and then make brief a European tour before returning to Palma. The Gavetts have a villa at Dos de Mayo, 8.

Mr. Rudolf Kindermann a German writer and artist, was among the spectators. He is a permanent resident here and a member of the Deya group.

In Germany he is known for his satiric

50,000-dollar Lindbergh Baby Hoax Laid to Un-wed Mother, Accomplice

A diabolical hoax, aimed at extorting $50,000 from Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh in exchange for the return of a baby which was not their own, was uncovered by New York police late last night, according to radio reports.

At the same time it was revealed that friends of the Lindbergh family have been in touch secretly with the perpetrators of the alleged extortion plot in the belief that the infant son of the famous couple was about to be returned.

An un-wed mother and her friend, an under-world character of low repute, were behind the scheme. Both slipped through the fingers of police, who discovered of the plot only a few hours before the money was to have been paid. The plot was frustrated.

A search was reported under way for the pair, but since their identity is not definitely known to police it may be difficult to apprehend them. The friends of the Lindbergh family, whose names were not revealed, have intimated to police that they are not anxious to push prosecution of the pair, since by dealing through friends they spared the stricken parents of the missing child much unnecessary suffering.

It was stated that the woman was the mother of a child of about the same age as the Lindbergh boy. It was her anxiety for the safety of her own which caused the friends at the last minute to doubt the authenticity of the agreed exchange.

Strict Seclusion at Sacred Procession Observed by Devout

By MARY MUNRO

In quiet seclusion, the Holy Week Procession, stripped of all the brilliant pageantry of the past, took place in the patio of the Chapel of the Sangre, late yesterday afternoon.

In past years many visitors from all parts of the world have come to Palma expressly to witness the sacred rites.

To all inquiries during the week regarding the Procession, doubt was expressed that it would take place at all this year, but persevering onlookers had their searching rewarded with the discovery that the whole thing had been discreetly planned to take place in the obscure patio.

Wandering up the winding street that leads to the Civic Hospital, near the end of the old Rambla were quiet end of the old Rambla were quiet groups of people going toward the was crowded with black-clad men and women, only whispered prayers could be heard—and the clink of copper offerings as a long file passed before the half-robed Crucified Christ.

At a little after six more people came and lined the walls of the patio in readiness for the Procession, which soon emerged from the dark interior of the church.

A subdued chant preceded the priests who came in their plain white blouses over black cassocks, bearing a large Cross. The people followed, in ordinary street clothes. The Procession wound around the court just once and the ceremony was over.

It was all a sad contrast to the brilliancy and magnificence of the Processions of other years. There was no roll of muffled drums, no grand show of

English Ireland Break Nears

LONDON. — Friction between Ireland and England moved one step nearer an open break yesterday when Secretary James Thomas made a formal statement in Parliament of the position of His Majesty's Government on the recent communication that Irishmen would not take the oath of allegiance.

Secretary Thomas said in part, "It is manifest that the oath of allegiance is an integral part of the treaty made ten years ago between the two countries and hitherto honourably observed on both sides. We are addressing to His Majesty's Government in Irish Free State a communication which will make our standpoint clear beyond the possibility of doubt".

re The Army of Apes which pokes fun at German institutions. The work is being translated into English this year.

Of the matches themselves there were three which were of importance to the tournament. In the women's singles Miss Kathleen Spittal of England won the championship by defeating Miss Else Kusterko of Germany, 1-6, 6-3, 6-2. In the men's singles the semi-finals were played and the last extranjero was eliminated. Bartolomé Calafel beat Francisco Serverata, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, and Jaime Salas beat David Loth, 6-4, 7-5.

Captain and Mrs. W. H. Barley and Mrs. L. Barley of Hove England arrived in Palma for the day and night to do some shopping. They returned immediately to their villa in Puerto Pollensa, where they plan staying for some six months more.

214 KNOWN DEAD IN U. S. TORNADO

Fear Total Deaths May Reach 1,000; Planes Drop Supplies

NORTHPORT, Alabama — Pestilence and disease, following in the wake of the tornado which devastated a five hundred mile strip through three southern states yesterday hampered relief work and swelled the toll of death and suffering.

The known dead have reached the staggering total of 214 persons. More than 1,000 were injured and property damage ran high into the millions. Reports filtering in over crippled transportation systems indicated that the death toll may reach 1,000.

Rain continued to fall over most of the stricken area, hampering the work of relief agencies and increasing the rapidly mounting death lists.

Many of the smaller villages in the interior of Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky remain isolated. It is in these sections that pestilence is taking its greatest harvest of human lives.

Airplanes flew over several small towns, dropping food and first aid equipment. This form of relief could not be carried out on a large scale, however, due to the unfavorable climatic conditions which persisted.

In Alabama alone, 131 dead have been accounted for. In Tennessee and Kentucky there remain numerous unreported sections.

Tales of great heroism interspersed the news reports. One told of a young mother, mortally injured, who fought her way through the tearing winds with her two babies clutched in her arms to the safety of a storm cellar. The body of the woman was found several hundred yards away, but the infants were rescued.

From all sections of the country donations poured into Northport. Most of those received were in the form of telegraphic gifts, but farmers in the middle west were reported to be considering sending several carloads of grain and supplies to help relieve the suffering from damaged crops and food shortage.

lighted tapers, priests, soldiers, cone-shaped hoods, bare feet, flowing robes of all colours and bright hued banners. Formerly the streets to the Cathedral were lined with kneeling onlookers while the Holy Image and the Dolosossa were carried high above the heads of the penitent.

At the Cathedral, on Good Friday, the washing of the feet of the poor by the Bishop of Palma, will take place at 3 or 3:30 P. M. For this ceremony twelve poor men and women are chosen each year. At 6 P. M., the Way of the Cross will be made, and the burial of the Lord will be enacted. The Cathedral is usually filled to overflowing with worshippers on this most holy of holy days.

Today and tomorrow, banks will be open only from 10 to 11 A. M. Cinemas and theaters will be closed both days, and theaters will be closed both days, this afternoon.

The Spirit That is Spain

...This is the second and concluding part of an article on Spain written especially for THE PALMA POST. — The Editor.

By ETHEL GILLESPIE

In the midst of these relics of an older civilization rises the Cathedral. Architecturally a triumph, it was begun in the thirteenth century. With the grand solidity of the Renaissance, there is a lavish wealth of most delicate ornament. The dignity and the grandeur of the whole is incomparable.

Pilgrims of beauty pause for a moment in sheer ecstasy when they enter the Cathedral for the first time. My first impression was one of great solemnity. Light filtering through windows of richly stained glass cast a beautiful luminous glow over the interior. As my eyes became accustomed to the soft ethereal radiance I gradually distinguished the slender columns, the unadorned strength of the massive piles and arches. There is a very fine rose window in each transept and a great traceried circular window in the south end which is particularly interesting.

In this vast structure the church has made use of all that is beautiful and inspiring in human art, making this edifice a fitting shrine to honor the God who is eternal beauty. While I lingered, worshipers streamed from the transepts, naves and chapels. Worshipers, yes, with rapt, intense expressions on their joyous, happy faces. They gathered in little groups on the hospitable, broad steps of the facade and the terrace, jostled each other as they left the sanctuary on their homeward way.

Here are to be seen old and young, rich and poor. Sunbaked peasants, their swarthy countenances wrinkled like whelks, march shoulder to shoulder with elegantly attired landowners and aristocrats, carrying fans and prayer books. Here are gay toreador jackets and gaucho sashes worn by men carrying towering broad-brimmed sombreros. There is a rich sprinkling of humble Majorcan peasants in native costume with the great comb or peineta in their dusky hair and the dark folds of the lace mantilla draping their foreheads and shoulders and falling gracefully over many-colored bodices.

Spain is still Spain, whether King or President rules the land. Monarchy, dictatorship, republic, have followed one another in bewildering succession; yet, having lately come from a visit to Russia, where the sad faces of the hungry people—spiritually as well as physically hungry—contradict the boasted triumph of the Godless government; having just come from Russia, I say,

I am the more impressed by the happy faces I see in Spain.

Is it not the abiding faith, the deep religious feeling of the Spanish people that has preserved them, even in revolution, from the bloodshed and crime that have marked the fall of governments in so many other countries?

I left the group and wandered again into the Cathedral. There is the throb of organ, while from on high an invisible choir lift their voices in a wonderful succession of exquisite melodies and sonorous chants. There is the aroma of incense, and in the dimlit, almost startling spaces the sorcery of a thousand candles. The very air breathes the solemn grandeur of the past.

Refracted by the brilliantly colored glass, rays of sunlight fell in opalescent hues upon gray pillar and marble. I lingered. Time did not exist. I had moments of partial awakening then sank deeply into the dream again... There was the sound of distant harmonies, the woe of the Miserere, the plaintive majesty of the Lamentations and Reproaches. And into my soul crept the music of that harmony and I found peace.

Eucharistic Congress To Open June 19

DUBLIN.—Dates for the International Eucharistic Congress to be held here were definitely set yesterday as June 19 to 26 of this year.

Already extensive preparations are under way for the great religious celebration of the Catholic Church, which will draw upwards of 1,000,000 persons.

Eleven cardinals, 400 to 500 arch-bishops, 4,000 to 6,000 priests are expected to attend. Many American visitors in Europe are expected to remain for the sacred rites which will be culminated in a solemn high mass to be read by the Papal Nuncio.

The mass will be celebrated June 26 at Phoenix Park.

Of the visitors, 200,000 are expected from parts of the world remote from Ireland. Twenty-four large ocean-going liners have been especially chartered to bring the worshipers and spectators. A city of tents will be erected on the outskirts of the city to house the great flow of persons. The weather usually is mild enough at that time of year to make for no hardships in the makeshift city.

LONDON. — Answering queries raised by the United States concerning entrance into the British Isles of concert artists and entertainers, Parliamentary Secretary for Labor Hudson said applications for concert artists only would be more closely scrutinized, but that otherwise the policy had not been changed.

NEW YORK.—A small riot tied up traffic on Fifth Avenue when police attempted to disperse a parade of Communist demonstrators. The demonstrators were calm enough, but when passers-by decided to take a hand in helping the police, the fighting began and lasted for more than half an hour.
