ON THE ISLAND

Valerie Gorska is a familiar and well liked figure in the foreign colony. But few of the people who see her in Terreno or Palma are aware that she is really the Princess Valentine Gagarine. She has lived the kind of life adventure writers conjure up in their imaginations. But in this case the story is true.

At the age of sixteen, already an expert horsewoman, she cut off her hair and joined the Russian White Army. She joined as a man, and for two years she was accepted as a man and lived and fought with the regiment.

During all that time, through a set of fortuitous circumstances, she was able to preserve her incognito, and even won the coveted Cross of St. George for bravery. She was wounded during an attack against the Reds and taken to a hospital. There her secret was discovered. She was arrested by the Reds, despite the efforts of the hospital nurses to help her, and imprisoned with a sentence of death hanging over her.

Her escape from the prison at the last moment is a story in itself. The Reds searched for her, but she managed to cross the Black Sea in a small boat with several other refugees, and eventually reached Paris. From there she went to the Riviera, and two years ago she came to Mallorca.

Now, having lived one of the most exciting and adventurous lives of modern times, she has learned the prosaic trade of a carpenter. Working with the native woods, she turns out modern furniture in expert fashion, which with her partner, Miss Edith Lawrence, she sells in a shop in Terreno.

And unless you managed to see her Cross of St. George, which she still has, and her photographs, you would find it difficult to believe that this quiet, charming member of the foreign colony who is Valerie Gorska is also the Princess Valentine Gagarine, once a hard-riding officer in the White Russian Army.

PARTY:—

Mrs. Yvonne Hewett celebrated her birthday on Wednesday with a large and hilarious party. It is probably an exaggeration to say that the entire foreign colony was there to help the celebration, but it is certainly true that a large number of guests were present, and all of them agreed it was a fine party. Among the guests were Mrs. James MacMahon, Miss Gladys Lennox, Don Mateo Ferrer, Mme. Canaval and her son, Mrs. Backstrand, M. le Comte Robert Thubliet, D'Argenson, Miss Yvonne Lasserre, Don Miguel Corró Muntaner, Fr. Von Neuenburg, Don José Espina, Mrs. Gladys Kidd, Fr. Tea Teekamp, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Eston, M. Maurice Panzani, Mr. Kenneth Craven and Mrs. Clement H. Gurney.

LEFT:—

Capt. Harold Leinaw upped anchor on Wednesday and sailed his yacht Nimbus to Ibiza, after a stay of many weeks in Palma. Capt. Leinaw had as his guests for the trip Commander Harry Green and Mr. James MacMahon. He expects to spend the winter in Ibiza, making some changes in his yacht, and after that he will seek new waters in which to cruise. But next year without doubt he will again sail Nimbus into the harbour of Palma, and tie up at his accustomed berth at the foot of the quay to renew friendships ashore and make his usual short cruises around and about the coast of Mallorca.

HORSES:—

The foreigners who didn't go to watch the horses last Sunday missed some excellent races, one good fight in the grandstand, and possibly some winning bets. Colonel Riccard was back at the old stand in the betting ring, and apparently had lost none of his old cunningness for picking them because of his recent absence. Mr. Harry Clark and Miss Edith Lawrence were also on hand, but according to their stories Lady Luck failed to smile for them.

COLUMBUS DAY IN SEVILLE

SAILING OF THE ARTABRO

VISIT TO PALMA

Columbus Day, Saturday, October 12 is the third anniversary of historic importance to be observed in Spain within a week.

Sunday, October 6 was the first anniversary of last year's revolts in Catalonia and Asturias, and fortunately passed off without any of the demonstrations that had been expected. Monday, October 7 was Lepanto Day.

October 12, however, is the only one of the three dates marked in red in the calendar as an official holiday. It is celebrated both in Spain and in many American countries as the Fiesta de la Raza, the «Race» in this case being the community of Spanish and Portuguese-speaking peoples.

Christopher Columbus, the great navigator who is variously asserted to have been a Mallorquin, a Catalan, a Galician and a Genoese, sailed out of the port of Palos on that date in 1492 on the voyage that was to give Their Catholic Majesties an empire on which «the sun never set.» The phrase was used, if not coined, by Columbus himself in an official report of a later voyage.

The interest of this year's commemoration centres mainly in Seville, where the International Americanist Congress is due to open its sessions on that date. Señores Lerroux, Gil Robles and Rocha, Ministers of State, War and Public Instruction respectively, are to visit the Andalusian city for the occasion, and two ships that can both claim to be successors of Columbus' caravels will be anchored in the Guadalquivir.

The Artabro, with the Iglesias expedition to the Amazon on board, will arrive in Seville on Saturday and leave the same day to cross the Atlantic to Brazil. Palma residents will remember the trim white motorship which is

GOBIERNO CIVIL STREET NOISES IN PALMA

A Home Office order authorising the hiring of N.º 74, Paseo de la Rambla, Palma as offices to replace the old Gobierno Civil was approved by the Cabinet in Madrid on Tuesday.

H. E. the Civil Governor, Don Juan Manent, told the reporters who interviewed him when the news reached Palma that he did not yet know the full text of the order. If it covered all the details of the lease, added His Excellency, the transfer would be made immediately.

In that case it would take only two or three days, so that the business of the Governor's office need not be interrupted.

The order is the result of urgent representations made to Madrid in view of the ruinous condition of the present Gobierno Civil, the part not occupied by the Governor's offices having already been demolished. The police commissariat which formerly occupied the South-West wing of the building is now temporarily housed in a flat in the square at the upper end of the Calle de San Jaime, an inconvenient makeshift which it should now be possible to end.

While Palma sighs to complete the rejuvenation of the City by replacing the apparently immortal old post office and other minor improvements, the City Hall is taking action against noise. The

FOREIGN VISITOR ASSAULTED

AFFRAY AT THE RACECOURSE

TWO ARRESTS

M. Christian Noel, a French visitor from Toulon, received slight injuries in an affray at the Palma race track last Sunday.

Bartolomé Oliver Amengual, 39, labourer and Jaime Oliver Campins, 26, chauffeur, both of Consell, were arrested for assaulting the Frenchman. They have been placed at the disposal of the police judge of the Lonja district.

M. Noel and his wife, who are on a holiday trip to Mallorca, were watching the second race on Sunday when they found their view obstructed by the two men from Consell, who were standing up in front of them. The Frenchman politely requested the obstructors to sit down, pointing out that they were preventing him and Mme. Noel from seeing the race.

The Mallorquins refused to move or alter their position. An argument resulted, grew fierce and ended in the attack.

The details of what happened were hidden by the crowd which immediately surrounded the box where the foreign visitors were. Above the heads of the crowd a chair, swung by a powerful pair

SURPRISE FOR POLICE

Angel Rocio Sagues walked into the police station in the Barcelona suburb of Badalona one day last week and tried to borrow some money.

The police were rather surprised. Not that Señor Rocio didn't give them an excellent reason for wanting it, and explain why he applied to them. On the contrary, it was the reason and the explanation that surprised them most.

Señor Rocio explained that he had to go to Madrid in a hurry, and needed the railway fare. And why had he to go to Madrid in a hurry? Because he had just been appointed Ministro de Gobernación, which is the Spanish equivalent for Home Secretary.

The police, of course, knew that there had been a change of Government recently, but they rather thought the name of the new Ministro de Gobernación was Pablo Blanco, and the photograph that had appeared in the papers was not like Señor Rocio either. But Señor Rocio had no doubt about his appointment, and exhibited an official-looking document communicating it to him.

The police thought some investigation was called for. It was a difficult piece of work, but at last they succeeded in finding the author of that imposing piece of paper. His name is Jaime Torrents, and he explained to the police that he hadn't wished to cause them any trouble, only to play a little joke on Señor Rocio.

ACTING GOVERNOR MURDERED

ESCAPE OF THE ASSASSINS

SHOT IN STRRET

The inhabitants of the quiet little city of Santa Cruz de Tenerife, capital of one of the two provinces into which the Canary Islands are divided, were startled on Thursday morning by the news that Don José Ramón Fernández, President of the Audiencia and acting Civil Governor of the Province, had been assassinated at midnight on Wednesday, while they were calmly slumbering.

The telegram bearing the news was received at the Home Office in Madrid early Thursday morning. The Minister, Don Joaquín de Pablo Blanco, in announcing the assassination to the press, was unable to say more than that Señor Fernández had been shot dead with revolvers. Further details became available later.

Señor Fernández was on his way home at the time of the shooting. As he passed by the steps leading to the church of San Francisco, three strangers fired at him, killing him instantly.

The assassins fled, pursued by several guardias de seguridad who ran to the spot on hearing the shots. The pursuit was unsuccessful.

The police picked up a large calibre pistol and three cartridge clips on the scene of the crime.

An active search is being made for the killers, but so far no arrest has been reported, nor any clue to their identity. The motive for the crime is therefore still shrouded in mystery.

A later message adds that one of the assassins was tall and thin and the other short and stout, but the few passers-by who saw them were unable to give a more detailed description. All three of the wounds received by the President of the Audiencia were necessarily mortal, one of them being in the head, another in the heart and the third in the groin.

NEW BRITISH AMBASSADOR IN MADRID WITH HARD TASK AHEAD

PROPOSED QUOTA CHANGE REGARDED AS RUIN OF SPANISH MINES

Sir Henry Chilton, the new British Ambassador in Spain, arrived in Madrid last weekend, accompanied by Lady Chilton and Miss Anne Chilton.

The new Ambassador returns to Spain after an absence of thirty-five years. His last post was the British Embassy in Buenos Aires, and before going to the Argentine he was Ambassador to Chile.

Before Sir Henry had had time to present his credentials to the President of the Republic news has reached Madrid which served to emphasise the importance and the difficulty of one of the tasks he will have to handle—the negotiations for a new commercial treaty between Spain and Great Britain.

Sir Henry arrived in Madrid on Saturday, October 5. On Sunday, October 6 a meeting of local interests and deputies to Cortes for the Province of Asturias met at the Diputación Provincial in Oviedo to discuss the problems of the Asturian coal mining industry.

The Asturian coalfield, which is the most important in Spain, was in a bad way even before the destruction and confusion caused by the Communist revolt just a year ago. Now there are 7,000 miners unemployed and large stocks of coal waiting in vain for a purchaser.

Speakers at Sunday's meeting in Oviedo blamed the quota for the importation of British coal into Spain for a large part of their troubles. The quota now stands at 750,000 tons, but the draft treaty proposes to increase it to 1,500,000 tons.

If this doubling is granted, declared the Asturians, the result will be the immediate closing of all the local mines. The mine owners are determined to close if the Spanish Government signs the treaty with that clause still in it.

The meeting resolved to ask the Government to reduce the British quota to 500,000 tons, and to ensure that the whole surplus production of the Spanish mines shall be absorbed by the home market. A commission headed by the Civil Governor of Asturias was sent to Madrid to lay these claims before the Cabinet.

A commercial treaty which is expected to have important effects in reducing Spain's adverse trade balance is that with Finland, which was finally placed on a legal footing by an exchange of notes between Don Alejandro Lerroux, Minister of State and former Premier, and the Finnish Minister in Madrid on Monday. Señor Lerroux, in reporting this to Tuesday's Cabinet meeting, also mentioned an exchange of notes between Spain and Lithuania with the object of concluding an agreement on tourist traffic.

The Spanish wine merchants and producers will benefit especially from the treaty with Finland. The Finnish state wine and spirits monopoly grants several advantages to the Spanish exporters, and legal recognition is given in Finland to the geographical names indicating the origin of the more important types of wine.

The Finnish customs tariff is to be modified so as to reduce the duties on Spanish small arms, and also on a wide range of agricultural products, including oranges, grapes, raisins, figs, almonds, tomatoes, saffron and orange and lemon juice. More favourable treatment is to be given to Spanish merchants and commercial employees trading and working in Finland.

The most important clause, however, is that in which both countries accept the principle of balancing their respective imports from each other. Hitherto Spain has had a balance against her of nearly 4,000,000 gold pesetas in her trading with Finland.

REAL ESTATE IN THE ISLANDS

LIMITING FOREIGN OWNERSHIP

BILL IN CORTES

Foreign owners of real estate in the Balearics, whether private persons or foreign-owned businesses, are affected by a Government bill read in Cortes during the past week.

The bill applies to all islands that are Spanish territory, and therefore particularly to the Balearics and the Canary Islands. It provides that the total extent of land belonging to foreign individuals or corporate entities in any one of the islands shall not exceed twenty-five per cent of its entire surface.

Furthermore, authorisation must be obtained from the War Office before any foreign individual or corporation can acquire a legal title to any land or building situated in certain zones. Applications for such permits, accompanied with plans and details of the situation, shape and size of the estate concerned, must be made to the military authorities of the area where it is situated, and will be sent by them to the Ministry with their report.

The zones affected by this provision are the Balearic and Canary Archipelagoes, the coast of the Strait of Gibraltar and certain areas in Galicia. Sites and buildings within the limits of towns are exempt from its effects.

The bill has of course still to pass through its various stages in Cortes before it becomes law, and may be modified in that process. It is therefore impossible to say yet how far, if at all, it will alter the existing regulations applying to buildings and land in coastal areas.

MIMIC WAR IN MALLORCA

DEFENCE OF BAY OF ALCUDIA

«INVASION»

While Italians and Ethiopians are fighting fiercely under the African sun a mimic war is in progress on the North coast of Mallorca.

An imaginary enemy has effected a landing on the shores of the Bay of Alcudia. By Monday evening it is expected that the troops of the Mallorquin garrisons will have succeeded in driving him back into the sea or on board the vessels of his supporting fleet.

The defending force consists of the 28th (Palma) Infantry Regiment, the 3rd Machine Gun Battalion, an artillery group consisting of one battery of seventy-fives, one mountain battery and one mechanised 155 mm. battery, a company of engineers and sections of the medical and supply corps.

The operations form the third part of the field exercises which began in Mallorca on September 16 simultaneously with similar exercises in Menorca and Ibiza. The first two sections of the programme have been carried out by the individual units near their respective quarters.

The defending force was assembled last Tuesday near Son Serra, on Alcudia Bay, the machine gun companies closing on that place from Alcudia and Inca. The remaining units left Palma on Monday, the artillery halting on Monday night at Sineu and the infantry and other troops at Inca.

The enemy fleet, consisting of two heavy and several light units, appeared outside the Bay on Friday and began to bombard the coast, where only a few sections of riflemen and machine gunners were in position as observers. The first stage of the operations consisted of placing the remaining units in defensive positions.

In the second phase the enemy, after an intense artillery preparation, is attempting to land troops in lighters, represented by floating marks, while other marks set up on the shore indicate points where units have succeeded in gaining a footing. The mission of the troops is to oppose the disembarkation by fire and manoeuvring.

In the third phase an enemy force, composed apparently of a battalion of infantry and some light guns, has succeeded in disembarking under cover of the darkness and occupied the Colonia de San Pedro and positions East of the road linking the Colonia to the Inca-Artá road. The de-

DYNAMITING FISHERMAN ON TRIAL

Vicente Mari Ramón, an Ibizan fisherman, escaped with a fine of 1,000 pesetas and costs when he was brought before the Tribunal de Urgencia in Palma on charges of being in unlawful possession of explosives and of fishing with dynamite.

Actually he was fined 1,000 pesetas for possessing the explosive and sentenced to two months imprisonment on the other charge. But as he had been detained for that length of time while waiting to be tried, he was released immediately.

The practice of using dynamite to kill fish is forbidden by Spanish law owing to the harm it does to the fishing grounds. Not only does the dynamite kill far more fish than he catches, many of them small, halfgrown fish that would be thrown back if caught in the usual way, but the explosions frighten away the fish that are not killed.

The Public Prosecutor, Señor Prada, asked the court to give a sentence of two months for the illegal fishing, which was stated to have taken place off San Antonio Abad, Ibiza, on June 10 last. On the charge of unlawful possession of explosives he asked for an additional sentence of three years.

Don José Luis Piña, defending, urged that his client should be acquitted of both charges. He emphasised the evidence given by the defendant and another witness to the effect that the other man had bought a fish—a saupa—from Vicente Mari at the time of the alleged dynamiting.

The court found the defendant guilty on both counts, but held that there were attenuating circumstances attaching to the possession of the explosive. Judgment was therefore given as recorded above.

Defenders have to dislodge the landing party from this position and, in the final phase, when the enemy is retreating between El Español and Cala d'es Parral, protected by the fire of his fleet, to press home the attack and drive the invaders into the sea.

The general order of the Balearic Command which sets forth the plan of operations also orders a series of strict precautions to prevent accidents or damage to property during the manoeuvres. There are meticulous provisions for making sure that no live ammunition goes missing, that no fires are caused in the dry fields and woods, and that ground used for camps and field works is left as it was found. Threshing floors must not be used for any purpose.

REMEMBERING CERVANTES CHESTERTON AND DON JUAN

LEPANTO DAY

Two of Spain's most famous men—Don John of Austria and Cervantes—were honoured on Monday, October 7, when the armed forces of the country celebrated Lepanto Day.

Don Juan de Austria, the hero of Chesterton's poem, was in command of the combined fleet of Spain and her Italian allies that crushed the naval power of Turkey at Lepanto at the mouth of the Gulf of Corinth on October 7, 1571, and so removed one of the nightmares of contemporary European statesmen.

Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra was merely a humble private of Spanish infantry serving as a marine in one of Don Juan's vessels, who received a wound at Lepanto that cost him the use of his left hand. However, he used the other hand in later years to write the world's greatest novel, «Don Quixote», so last Monday's ceremonies were dedicated even more to the memory of the soldier-author than to that of the illegitimate son of the Emperor Charles V and half-brother of King Philip II of Spain.

The army in Mallorca, being on manoeuvres, celebrated Lepanto Day in camp. On the mainland, twenty-one guns boomed a salute from the Montjuich batteries overlooking Barcelona harbour, and in barracks all over the Peninsula soldiers listened to lectures on Cervantes and his work.

There are several references to Lepanto in «Don Quixote», but the most striking is a retort in the preface to the Second Part to certain critics of the First Part. Cervantes records that some of them had the impertinence to mention his maimed hand as if it were a reproach, and was the result of a tavern brawl instead of «the highest occasion that past or present ages have seen, or future ones hope to see.»

Neither Don Juan de Austria nor Cervantes was favoured by fortune after that «high occasion». Cervantes, on his way back to Spain from Naples four years later, was captured by pirates and spent the next five years as a prisoner in Algiers.

After being ransomed he tried to make a living by writing and also as a purveyor to the navy. His efforts led to his being imprisoned for debt, and even the tremendous success of his best known work, begun in prison, did not save him from dying a poor and disappointed man.

Don Juan de Austria, appointed Governor of the Netherlands, failed in his efforts to make peace in that distracted country, and was likewise disappointed in his dream of becoming King of England by marriage with Queen

FORGED NOTES BANK OF SPAIN DECEIVED

Ramón Espino, 45, of Puerto Rico was arrested on Tuesday at Valladolid on a charge of forging Bank of Spain notes.

The prisoner made no attempt to deny his guilt, according to the message received here. On the contrary, he boasted of his skill.

The forged notes are of the twenty-five peseta denomination, with the design that includes a portrait of the dramatist Calderón de la Barca. They were made by a chemical process which took direct copies of genuine notes, somewhat on the lines of a blueprint, but in the proper colours.

Espino declared that he took some of his forgeries to the Bank of Spain itself, and they changed them for him without hesitation. He preserved his manufacturing secret by smashing the bottles containing his chemicals while his room was being searched by the police.

The forged notes are declared to be perfect in every respect except one. The pictorial part of the design comes out just a little fainter in the forgery than in the genuine note.

SAILORS ASHORE

Six British seamen from the cruiser Achilles were arrested last weekend in Las Palmas, Grand Canary, after a trip ashore when they are alleged to have got drunk and assaulted the waiters of an establishment they visited. The sailors were placed under arrest on board their own vessel.

It was erroneously reported in London that the incident had occurred at Mahón, Menorca. The report was promptly denied by H. M. Vice-Consul in Mahón.

Elizabeth. He died in Namur in 1578 while still in his thirties—officially of the plague, though there were those who said that Philip II found his half-brother too clever and too popular for the safety of his throne.

INFANTE JUAN TO MARRY SON OF EX-KING OF SPAIN IN ROME

The ex-Infante Don Juan, son of ex-King Alfonso and ex-Queen Victoria of Spain, is to marry Princess Maria de las Mercedes de Borbón in Rome on Saturday, October 12, festival of the Virgin of the Pillar and Fiesta de la Raza.

The ceremony will take place in the basilica of Santa Maria dei Angeli in the Piazza Esedra. The church, which can hold 12,000 people, has been specially adorned for the occasion, and a silver image of the Virgin of the Pillar, sent from Spain, has been placed on the high altar.

Among the royal personages present will be the King and Queen of Italy and all the princes of the House of Savoy who are now in Italy. The bride's parents, Don Carlos and Doña Luisa de Orleans, have already arrived in Rome with the Count and Countess of Paris and Princess Mercedes.

Others who are expected are the Queen Mother of Rumania, Princess Ileana, Archduke Otto of Austria and members of the royal families of Jugo-Slavia, Denmark and Belgium. It is uncertain whether the Queen of Bulgaria will also be there.

The former King of Spain and his party are staying at the Grand Hotel, which is across the Piazza from the Basilica. There Don Alfonso has given several collective audiences during the week to the many Spaniards who have travelled to Rome for the wedding.

Among the Spanish aristocrats and Monarchists who have made the journey are the Duque and Duquesa de Santullano, the Marqués de Alella, the Conde de Gamazo and Señor Serrano, Deputy to Cortes. The two last named travelled from Madrid with a party numbering ninety-one.

Some of the Spanish visitors are expressing their conception of the significance of the occasion by wearing in Rome the traditional peasant costumes of their respective regions. The Romans are thus being treated to a display of picturesque raiment such as many people in Spain have never seen.

The friends and partisans of the former royal family have also sent many presents to the ex-Infante and his bride. Those from Andalusia, where the bride spent her childhood, are especially rich and numerous.

A set of silverware has been sent by the Monarchists of Madrid, and another by those of Catalonia. The latter is a fine example of Spanish plateresque style by the well known Catalan silversmith Masriera, and consists of 300 pieces adorned with the Spanish royal crown and coat of arms and the intertwined initials of the bridal pair.

LATEST WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

GENEVA, Friday

The Assembly of the League of Nations closed its proceedings yesterday by approving the application of sanctions against Italy, there being one dissenting vote and two abstentions among the fifty-three nations represented.

The dissenting vote was naturally that of Italy. The abstaining countries were Austria and Hungary, which definitely abandoned their previous negative attitude and contented themselves with formally expressing sympathy with Italy.

The exact procedure of the sanctions decision was the adoption by the Assembly of a draft resolution proposed by the Praesidium—later termed a «wish» in view of objections of a technical nature raised by Baron Aloisi. This «wish» expresses the readiness of the members of the Assembly, in view of the League Council's decision of October 7 and of their obligations under Article 16 of the Covenant, to coordinate the measures they intend to take by means of a committee on which each nation would be represented by one delegate and experts.

The task of this coordinating committee would be to examine and provide for the uniform execution of sanctions and to draw the attention of the Council to any circumstance that might need its investigation. Doctor Benes, President of the Assembly, stressed that this committee would not be an organ of the League Council or Assembly but merely a kind of conference between members for the purpose of deciding on the application of Article 16.

Yesterday's debate in the Assembly reached its climax in the statements made by Mr. Eden and M. Laval, in which both of them affirmed the determination of their respective countries to defend the League Covenant as a bulwark of international law, though M. Laval somewhat qualified this declaration by hinting more or less plainly that he still hoped for the success of another attempt at conciliation.

This suggestion appears to support the rumours, current since M. Laval's conversation with Baron Aloisi last Sunday, of a new Italian initiative for the resumption of three-power negotiations.

M. Motta, the Swiss delegate, declared his Government's readiness to take part in enforcing sanctions as long as they were purely of an economic and financial character, but stressed Switzerland's inability to do anything that might compromise her neutrality. Other speeches in support of the resolution was made by the representatives of Haiti, Mexico, Chile, Venezuela and Jugo-Slavia and by the Greek delegate, M. Maximos, on behalf of the Balkan Union.

LONDON, Friday

Early moves in the application of sanctions, according to the «Daily Telegraph», will be the cutting off of supplies of coal, oil, cotton and minerals from Italy and the lifting of the arms embargo from Ethiopia.

A message from Rome declares that there is considerable diplomatic activity behind the scenes, which is understood to be due to the Duce's effort to bring about a discussion with France and Britain for a settlement of the East African problem before military operations are carried further, although Italy intends to remain within the League of Nations in spite of the decision taken yesterday by the Assembly.

Mr. Cordell Hull, U. S. Secretary of State, strongly reaffirmed yesterday President Roosevelt's warning that Americans traded with belligerents at their own risk, according to a message from Washington. This is interpreted as meaning that the United States will not oppose sanctions, though Le Journal of Paris declares that a group of American bankers is planning a $ 100,000,000 loan to Italy if a legal loophole can be found.

ADDIS ABBABA, Friday

An Ethiopian official communiqué states that Italian planes bombed Gorhei, Kaffari, Katama and Jialm, while other machines distributing propaganda flew over Harrar and Dire-dawa. The communiqué adds that two of the occupants of an Italian plane which crashed at Garaalta on the northern front were killed and the other two injured.

Arrangements are being made for the defence of Addis Abbaba by the concentration of 125,000 well equipped troops, the Emperor having pledged his entire fortune for the salvation of the capital of the Empire.

About 1,000 askaris are reported from Makale, on the northern front, to have deserted from the Italian lines and gone over to the Ethiopians on Wednesday with their full complement of arms after Italian planes had vainly attempted to drive them back with machine gun fire.

In spite of the Ethiopian Government's request that the Italian Minister, Count Vinci, leave the country at the earliest possible moment, he seems to be biding his time and has informed the Foreign Ministry here that he will not leave the capital until the last of the Italian consuls stationed in other parts of the country has arrived here. Since the Italian consul at Degamo cannot possibly reach Addis Abbaba before the beginning of next week Count Vinci will remain at his post for another week or so, in spite of the breaking off of diplomatic relations.

GENEVA, Friday

The newly appointed sanctions coordination committee met at 10:40 a.m. today, electing the Portuguese delegate Senhor Vasconcellos chairman by acclamation. After a short discussion the suggestion of Doctor Benes that the proceedings should be private in view of the delicate matters to be discussed was adopted, and the chairman declared the public session closed after the proceedings had lasted exactly nine minutes.

After the private session, which lasted only half an hour, it was announced that a «small» committee would be set up, consisting of the representatives of France, Great Britain, Russia, Poland, Spain, Belgium, Holland, Turkey, Sweden, South Africa, the Argentine, Canada, Greece, Rumania, Switzerland and Jugo-Slavia. This procedure was adopted in deference to the wishes of Britain as the plenary session is too cumbersome to work quickly.

ASMARA, Friday

ces under General Santini is pressing forward towards Makale, where the Ras Selassie Guassa commanding the Ethiopian troops is waiting inactively. Italian circles attribute this passivity to political grounds, since Ras Guassa and Ras Seyoum are personally hostile to each other.

The forces under the Ras Seyoum are offering a stubborn resistance to the Italian advance.

The Italian central forces under General Birolli are at present behind Amba Augher, while the right wing under General Maravigna is holding the heights and valleys round Adowa. Skirmishing is taking place on all fronts.

FIESTA DE LA RAZA

On Saturday, October 12, Spain annually makes amends to the man to whom she showed the world's most astounding example of ingratitude while he was alive. Once again the nation considers its debt to Christopher Columbus, and does its utmost to honour him. When Columbus died even the glory of his lifework was taken away from him. Only a year after he was dead a German schoolmaster suggested that the newly-discovered lands in the West should be named after a Florentine merchant called Amerigo Vespucci, and the suggestion was adopted. Vespucci had merely followed the trails which Columbus blazed. Today only the name «Columbia» perpetuates his memory by having been given to a portion of the lands he courageously discovered. The man who had given untold wealth to Spain was reduced to living on mere loaves of bread for years before his death. Honours were denied him, and his contemporaries refused to grant him the slightest reward or even justice. So quiet was the funeral of the hero who had provided Spain with an empire that for years afterward his acquaintances in Valladolid, where he was buried, thought he was still living. Generally overlooked in surveys of his achievements are the tremendous obstacles which were placed in his way, particularly the opposition of the Church and the scepticism of the Court, before he could even set sail. No one today denies his courage. His amazing voyage now stands foremost in the annals of discovery. But the recognition came too late. He was a broken and disillusioned man when he died. The honours which are heaped on human nature cannot be changed, and the world will continue to upon his memory, now that he is dead, cannot but seem a mockery. Yet the debt of gratitude which Spain owes to Columbus remains, some useless. It is at least something that the achievements of Columbus are acknowledged now, grant rewards when they have been, although it is 443 years after the event.

Out Of My Head

by HARRY GALLAND

Down on the quay the other day a crowd of workmen stood about. It was near the end of the luncheon and siesta period, and they were lounging in the vicinity of the Barcelona boat.

Somehow or other it looked as if something was afoot. Something more important than the mere loading of the bales and concrete pipes which lay in piles waiting to be carried and hoisted aboard.

You can generally tell from a distance of about half a mile when there is a Mallorquin crowd of workers anywhere near. If, that is, your ears are normal, Mallorquin workmen don't converse with each other. They shout. An ordinary and friendly conversation carried on between two friends only two feet from each other sounds something like the capture of Adowa, unless of course the men are angry, in which case it sounds like a pair of 15-inch guns attempting to outdo one another in rapidity of fire.

But this particular crowd of dockers near the Barcelona boat was strangely quiet. They seemed to be waiting for something. What that something was didn't appear on the surface. But there was a feeling of impending excitement in the air.

Off on the end of the string-piece a lone fisherman sat dangling his legs over the water, a fishing pole patiently held in one hand while he munched a tremendous sandwich of butifarra.

He sat calmly, as fishermen do, especially fishermen who expect to catch something in Palma Bay. In back of him, on the other side of the quay, a white schooner was loading timber planks. Slowly the yellow boards were swung aboard, and even more slowly they were stacked against the bulwarks and on the deck.

Suddenly there was a commotion. A policeman came running. There were shouts. The lounging crowd of dockers stirred, moved, and two or three men detached themselves from the group and sprinted.

Over in the east heavy rain clouds lowered on the horizon, covering the sun and lending a grim grey air to the scene. Anything might happen in such an atmosphere.

Within thirty seconds a group of workmen had collected around the end of the quay. The shouting continued. The policeman had disappeared from view, apparently overwhelmed by mere force of numbers. And there were no reinforcements for him in sight.

The reinforcements never arrived, but eventually the group parted and the policeman emerged from the midst of the workmen, unharmed. And then the cause of the running, the shouting and the general excitement became apparent. The lone fisherman had caught a fish.

by Bibliófilo

GREY WOLF: MUSTAFA KEMAL, by H. C. Armstrong. The Albatross Modern Continental Library. Vol. 261. 6 ptas.

When Mustafa Kemal was born in Salonika in 1881 the Ottoman Empire was in its last agonies. Centred round the Sultan, its organization was the same as it had been in the great days of the sixteenth century, but it had grown effete, decrepit and corrupt. Everywhere there was poverty and inefficiency, and with them discontent.

All the young men cried out for reform. Mustafa Kemal was a disobedient, violent child, and he grew into a young man so unmanageable that his parents decided the only thing to do was to make a soldier of him; he was sent to the Military Cadet School and from there to the Senior Military School at Monastir in the Balkans, where he found all the cadets full of the spirit of revolution. He quickly established his authority over them, and pictured himself leading the revolt, overthrowing the Sultan, and saving the country.

But his was not all. Although completely Oriental in his private life, Mustafa Kemal had Western ideas where others were concerned; he wanted to free the Turks from the mental slavery of Islam, to emancipate the women, even to abolish the fez, which he considered a symbol of something or other. He preferred the bowler hat or derby.

His fellow cadets laughed at these ideas; they only wanted to overthrow the Sultan and put another in his place. So Mustafa Kemal turned his attention to politics, although he remained a soldier.

He went to the Staff College in Constantinople, where he joined a revolutionary Society known as the Vatan, or Fatherland, which held secret meetings and published a paper, passed from hand to hand, attacking all the established facts of Turkish life. Its members bound themselves by oath to replace the Sultan's despotism by constitutional government, to release the people from the priests and the women from the veil and the harem.

This society was disbanded by the police and Mustafa Kemal was imprisoned. When he was released the Druses, warlike tribes in the mountains near Damascus, were in revolt; they were joined by the Macedonians, and the troops sent to quell them refused to act. They had not been paid since they could remember, and the revolution was on. The Sultan capitulated, declared a constitutional government, blamed his advisers for all the misrule of the past, and welcomed the revolutionaries. Mustafa Kemal thought his chance had come, but he was cold-shouldered by the job-hunting politicians, of whom the chief was Enver Pasha, and pushed into the background. He went back to his soldiering. He was needed, for from then, 1911, until 1923, Turkey was continually at war. First the Italians took Tripoli; this was followed by the First Balkan war, in which Montenegro, Serbia, Greece and Bulgaria attacked Turkey, and by the Second Balkan War, in which Bulgaria fought Greece, Serbia and Rumania, while Turkey fought them all indiscriminately.

Then came the Great War (to end war) in which Mustafa was given a High Command and repulsed the British attack on the Dardanelles. In October 1918 Turkey signed an armistice with the Allies, who proceeded to plan how they could cut her up into little pieces and give them away. Mustafa Kemal could not allow this, so the Allies inveigled the Greeks into attacking Turkey once again. Mustafa Kemal was made Commander in Chief, with the powers of a Dictator, and he defeated the Greeks in August 1922. Having proved to the Allies that Turkey was determined to go on existing, he abolished the Sultanate. He then sent Ismet Pasha to the Conference of Lausanne, as a result of which all foreign troops finally evacuated Turkey.

In 1923 the Turkish Republic was declared with Mustafa as President. He abolished the Caliphate, secularized the country, introduced the German, Italian and Swiss Legal codes, forced the Turks to wear bowlers, and even taught them to read and write. He had fulfilled his ambition, he was supreme ruler of Turkey, but there was nothing left of the Ottoman Empire.

In other, and fewer, words, At-ta Turk. Mr. Armstrong tells this story in a rousing military style, abounding in clichés and peppered with exclamation marks!! His book can be recommended as an antidote to all who are so poisoned with boredom that they are looking forward to the next Great Big Bloody War. —R. L. H.

BY HOOK OR BY CROOK

Though the Boundless Brotherhood of Embattled Beavers has been in existence but a brief space, messages of encouragement and donations of old razor blades and anti-dandruff lotion are already pouring in from all parts of the Continents of Europe, Asia, America, Africa and the Isle of Man. Here are just a few that have been received and sorted up to the time of going to press:

«Excellent idea. Intelligent men use spinach externally and internally. Back to Methuselah.» — George Bernard Shaw.

«There once was a bearded young man

Whose whiskers spread out like a fan.

They were not in the way
As a rule, but they say

That they cleared the whole street when he ran.» — Canon Streeter.

«I warn you that my name is copyright in all countries, including the Irish Free State.» — Lord Beaverbrook.

«You have my moral support. Unfortunately my hands are rather full at the moment.» — Haile Selassie I.

«I regret that I can make no statement without first consulting the War Office.» — Air Marshal Italo Balbo.

The last message quoted is believed to have some connection with a mysterious asbestos envelope received in the office of the B. B. E. B., which bears the return address «Palazzo Venezia, Rome.» Unfortunately the envelope contains only a small quantity of ash, Signor Mussolini's private secretary having apparently placed some ordinary notepaper in the rack by mistake.

The following letter has been sent to Doctor Athanasios Astigmatizmos (on whom be peace), President of the B. B. E. B., at his residence in the Odos Uiskeros, Athens.

312 Calle del 5 de Noviembre,
Palma de Mallorca

Dear Mr. President,

It is with great regret that I hereby place in your hands my resignation from the post of Treasurer of the B. B. E. B. You will realise that after what happened at the last Committee Meeting no other dignified course lies open to me.

I have the greatest respect for our worthy Secretary, Herr Professor Doktor Adalbert von Stichelbach, but there was no reason at all why he should go off the deep end over the purely hypothetical question whether lottery tickets contributed to the cause should be applied to the use and behoof of the Treasurer. I mean to say, Stiggy, old man, if old Addlepatte thinks he can get away with that sort of thing, he has another think coming, the big bonehead.

Yours, etc.

ON THE ISLAND

By The Wayfarer

COMING:—

Miss Doris Nevin is expected to arrive on the Export Liner which is due to put in at Palma about the middle of November. Miss Nevin is the daughter of the famous American composer Ethelbert Nevin. Mrs. Alfred Greenough of Boston is coming with her, and they hope to stay here a long time.

BIRTHDAY:—

Wednesday (and a few days thereafter) was celebrated as the birthday of Mr. Lawrence Dundas, the distinguished editor of the English page of El Dia. To him congratulations, and to his colleague, Mr. Evan Freer, sympathies.

RETURNED:—

Mr. and Mrs. Sherry Mangan have returned to the Island after an absence of three years. Mr. Mangan is an American writer. Mr. and Mrs. Mangan have, they say, found things somewhat changed since last they saw Palma, but exactly how and why they didn't divulge.

LEFT:—

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Weguelin left on Friday for England. They spent six weeks in Mallorca, and will spend the winter in London before returning to Mallorca. In view of the frequency of their trips to the Isle of Calm they are almost entitled to call themselves commuters.

FIGHT:—

Last Sunday's charivari bullfight at the Plaza de Toros was distinguished by the presence in the ring of Bartolomé of the Negresco Bar, who juggles drinks when he isn't performing as the star turn in the bullring at charivari fights. Toño gave a splendid exhibition, according to all accounts, achieving the distinction of being both intentionally and unintentionally funny at various times. Mr. and Mrs. William Cook, Mr. Johnson, Miss Peggy Lippe and Mr. Roland Hayes were among those who enjoyed his antics. Mr. Hayes isn't being seen about much these days, since he is hard at work on a new novel for which the publishers have been clamouring for some time.

SYSTEM:—

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Brierly have a system all their own and spend three nights every week carrying it out. They have two Spanish friends who are trying to learn English. Mr. and Mrs. Brierly know English, but they don't know enough Spanish. So they are swapping lessons. The first hour the conversation is all in Spanish and the second hour it is all in—you guessed it! To avoid distraction, each pair goes into a separate room for the two hour period, and the pairs are changed off at each session. It sounds pretty complicated, but it seems to be working out. Already both the Spanish students can say «Thank you!» and «Good morning, Mr. Brierly!» when they meet in the evening.

MOVED:—

Miss Gladys Lennox, who appeared on the English stage under the aegis of Mr. Charles Cochran, has joined the trek to the Chalfont House. She moved in early in the week, and has been spending her time adding to an already rich coat of tan.

RECOVERED:—

Miss Nita Drelberg has recovered from her recent illness, and expects to be out and about again as well as ever this coming week. She says the doctor was a very nice man, but she's had enough of ing the distinction of being pills and hot water bottles.

TRIP:—

Captain R. H. Checkley is leaving early next week for a short business trip to London. He will return as soon as he has completed his work, and will join the Hon. Mrs. Louvima Checkley in a hunt for a bigger house. The one they recently moved into in the Calle Salud has already proved inadequate.

BOOK:—

Miss Norah Nisbet, who with her sister left the Island a few weeks ago after a long stay, is represented in the latest publisher's lists. Her book is «The Men from the Mountains and Other Poems,» and it has been published in London by Blackwell. Miss Nisbet has also published a small book of her poetry in Palma.

EXHIBITION:—

Marise, the well known masseuse and physical culture expert, is giving an exhibition of exercises on October 12 at 12 o'clock in the Trocadero. The exhibition will consist mainly of exercises designed to lengthen the legs and strengthen the thorax and abdominal muscles, as well as help achieve that Mecca of all modern women, slimness. The exhibition will be repeated on October 23 at Tito's. Those who want to know all about the exercises and how to become slim but can't be present for the public demonstration will find Marise at 45, Calle 14 de Abril in Terreno.

KRALJICA:—

A cruise ship flying a flag rarely seen in Palma Bay was the Kraljica Marija of the Jugo-Slav Lloyd Line, which arrived on Thursday morning. Her 110 passengers spent the day sightseeing in and around Palma under the guidance of Mr.

Thomas Cook's young men. Kraljica Marija, if by any chance you didn't know, means Queen Marie. The vessel was formerly the Araguaya of the Royal Mail line. This was her third annual call at Palma.

DINNER:—

Colonel Riccard will be the guest of honour at a dinner on Saturday night which is being given for him by Antoine of the Restaurant Parisien. Among the invited guests are Mrs. Semour Burt, Mrs. Pamela de Prizer, Mrs. Dina Harris, Mrs. Phillip Hedges, Mrs. Doris Cameron, Mrs. G. Lindeman, Mrs. Killi, Mrs. Bowman-Burns, Don Lorenzo Roses, Señor Homs and Señor Garau.

BETTER:—

Mrs. Doris Cameron has been confined to her home in the Plaza Santa Catalina during the last few weeks, having suffered a slight accident to her foot. She is on the mend now, however, and has begun giving a few of the luncheons for which she is justly famed. Nine guests were present at the latest, which took place during the week.

Captain Iglesias' floating laboratory, and which called here at the end of June on her trial trip.

Before she leaves there will be a ceremony on board, in which the Mayor of Seville will present the symbolical «flag of the Race» which the City Council is giving to the expedition. A similar flag will be presented on the same day in Seville by the Argentine Ambassador to the ship's company of the Argentine training vessel Presidente Sarmiento.

The Presidente Sarmiento is already at Seville. She is an old steam and sail frigate, and is making her last voyage with a large number of Argentine navy cadets on board.

She left Vigo early Monday morning for Lisbon amid the cheers of the Viguenses, to which the Argentines replied with vivas for Spain and for their own country. After dropping into the Tago for a short visit the old ship rode to her anchor in Seville river at 6:30 a.m. on Wednesday.

A special 30 céntimo commemorative stamp has been approved and printed to mark the departure of the Amazon expedition. These «Artabro» stamps will be on sale from Saturday.

GOBIERNO CIVIL

Mayor, Don Luis Ferrer Arbona, issued two orders during the week for this purpose.

The first refers to street sellers who cry their wares at unseasonable hours, when those who prolonged the previous evening unduly and many who did not are still slumbering, or trying to. The Mayor declared:

«It is certainly unpleasant that at unseasonable hours of the morning certain salespeople, especially fishmongers, greengrocers, bakers and sellers of lottery tickets, with marked lack of consideration for people sleeping at those hours, shout their wares to the discomfort of everyone and with no profit to themselves; for at such hours (they start their cries at 6 a.m.) the sales they might make are slight, or rather nil.»

So the order went forth to the Municipal Guard that those who thus greet the dawn shall be warned that if they do it again they will lose their licences as hawkers.

The other measure was a response to a complaint from the inhabitants of the Calle de la Portella, the steep little street that climbs into the old town from a small gate in the Muralla. Their spokesman, Doctor Don Antonio Oliver, told the Mayor that the street is habitually used by all the lorries which are not allowed to pass through the central streets.

Señor Ferrer Arbona told Doctor Oliver that such vehicles were likewise forbidden to pass through the Calle de la Portella, and must go round by the gas works. He promised that immediate steps would be taken to enforce the prohibition.

FOREIGN VISITOR ASSAULTED

of hands, rose in the air and poised for the downstroke, while first a guardia municipal and then a couple of civil guards hastened to the scene.

The chair-wielder found himself suddenly confronted with the figure of a civil guard with uplifted sabre. He checked the descent of the chair, which seemed about to impale itself on the point of the weapon, and surrendered.

M. León was taken to the race-course enfermeria and treated by the doctor in attendance there. His injuries included scratches on the face and ears and the loss of some hair.

SHOPPING GUIDE

MAISON LUCY, Conquistador 26, have at last received their long awaited models from Paris. With their years of experience here they will be able to show you every sort of hat, in the very last word in chic, suited to this Island.

ALMACENES RIBAS, San Nicolás 14. For those interested in making a home comfortable as well as beautiful this winter, Ribas specializes in materials for interior decorating. There are some lovely reproductions of Mallorquin linen tapestries at very reasonable prices, and what is still more interesting, they are practical.

ESPASAS, Calle Olmos 129. If you are beginning to have ideas about what you are going to order for your winter evening wardrobe, do not forget you will need at least one pair of evening slippers. They can be made to your measure by Espasas. Very much in demand on the Continent are Grecian sandals, which should be made to order to assure perfection.

ANNE, Calle 14 de Abril, 35, Terreno. If you don't want to worry or bother too much about such problems as clothes, you will find every satisfaction in Anne's personal help and taste.

COLMADO PARISIEN, Plaza Cort. Special brands of the very finest brandy at extraordinarily low prices are regularly carried in stock.
