WHAT A WHALE OF A DIFFERENCE JUST A FEW POINTS MAKE!

AN ERA OF NEW VALUES.

You recognize the sentiment; we are indeed in an era of new values. But you are wrong about the date. It is not a preliminary to a schedule of falling prices. It is an advertisement from the glorious days of 1929 when every American who knew the word «buy» was cleaning up in the stock market.

What memories these fine but far from rare old examples of commercial optimism recall! We spoke in terms of millions and we even thought in terms of thousands. It didn't seem at all strange that there were full page advertisements screaming at us: «IN SHORT — TO MAKE PROFITS» and that the author promised not only to show us «where to make profits» but «how to make profits.»

Looking back we can see dark forebodings of the end in such announcements as: «No bond is good enough to forget.» When the National City Company of New York promulgated this dictum, it did not dream of the day when customers would be very glad to be able to forget a bond.

Dividends in Heaven

Perhaps, too, the Utility Securities Company meant to strike a warning note when it ordered set in large type: «Increasing revenues from darkened skies.»

But such remarks were lost in the general roar in which the words «substantial profits» sounded most clearly. Sober houses that would not for the world have fooled you were urging all and sundry that the way to get rich was to invest in stocks and bonds. «A new way to profits,» they said, and could think of no smaller figure than forty-two million dollars and 147 per cent.

Run down the list of financial advertisements, and the slogans sound once again their cheery notes, playing dulcet tunes on the theme, prosperity. How brave and gay was the world of business when it cried out to us:

Be Sure, Don't Guess!

An Attractive Investment Stock!

Steadily Growing Earnings!

New England Has Always Surmounted Obstacles!

An Investment of Unimpeachable Strength!

An Industry That Never Shuts Down!

It all seems so strange now, but perhaps it was natural in a world in which it could still be said: «There are so many people with plenty of money, high standards of living, liberal habits of spending!»

What Investors Worried About

There was only one problem. «With the steady growth of industry,» so the story was told by one big stock exchange firm, «there has come a plethora of security offerings so numerous and attractive that the investor's problem becomes one of careful selection.»

Why there was even a firm which advertised «Bonds to fit the investor.» And they weren't baby bonds either.

Magazines and newspapers grew fat and sleek on this sort of food. Pages upon pages assured the increasingly wealthy reader that there weren't any more luxuries. Diamonds and motor cars and country houses and winter trips to sunny (and terribly expensive) lands were put forward as the sort of thing people just naturally had. Books were five dollars apiece and bathtub gin was distinctly low class.

And then.... Well, perhaps you remember a well known cigarette advertisement that was in every periodical in the Age of Profits. It showed a happy

U.S. Consul's Visit

Remaining in Mallorca four days instead of the three he had originally intended, Mr. Richard F. Boyce, United States Consul from the Consulate General in Barcelona, left Palma Friday night after having transacted business in the way of passport renewals, income tax registration, etc., for about twenty-five or thirty Americans.

Mr. Boyce was misquoted as saying there were about 150 Americans on the island and, later, that he expected to know before he left how many there were. Late Friday afternoon he explained to THE MAJORCA SUN that this was never in his mind, as he had no way of telling the number of his fellow citizens on the island.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Boyce hope to return to Mallorca soon for a tour of the island, that having been impossible while Mr. Boyce was keeping office hours every day at the Hotel Royal.

There will have to be a great deal more consular business in Palma before a permanent official is stationed here, Mr. Boyce said, although he was surprised at the number of Americans who needed his services. It is not necessary, he added, that the business be commercial; a sufficiently heavy tourist traffic would result in the establishment of a consulate. The State Department requires only that the consul have work to do; it does not demand that the office pay for itself in fees.

That there is a great deal more of this than he thought was brought home to Mr. Boyce when he came from Barcelona. He had planned to be here on Monday morning but was unable to book passage, and consequently did not arrive until Tuesday.

Corpus Christi Day

Next Thursday, May 26th, is Corpus Christi Day, and the Catholic Church will probably not hold the customary procession of the Host through the streets, a ceremony that has always been attended with particular reverence in Catholic countries. There will surely be a procession within the Cathedral however.

Church authorities profess to fear some sort of hostile demonstration if the procession is not heavily guarded, and the civil authorities are disinclined to set a precedent of military protection for religious ceremonies. However, it is not yet definitely known whether the procession will be held.

It is, of course, a holiday which will be celebrated by the closing of banks and shops.

Guild Awakes

The Palma Theatre Guild, which had been resting from the labors of its first production last month, has come awake again, and is preparing for a reorganization and future performances.

For this purpose Mr. Gomez del Val, the Secretary, has called a general meeting for this (Sunday) afternoon at 3:30 at the home of Mr. C. L. Allis, Villa Enriqueta, Calle Santa Rita, Terreno. Meanwhile Mr. Norman Jacobsen, the President, convened a meeting of the Guild Committee Friday evening.

At the gathering this afternoon the treasurer's report will be read, from which it will appear that the Guild made its expenses. A plan will be presented for the reorganization of the group on more business-like lines than were deemed necessary at the beginning. The officers are urging all members to attend this meeting.

Friday's session of the committee was the first official activity of the Guild since the night of The Dover Road on April 27th. In that time the officers have been straightening up accounts, collecting money for the tickets sold, receiving bills and paying some of them. Although this has not yet been entirely completed, it was early in the week decided that a meeting should no longer be postponed.

The Committee listened to reports from Mr. Jacobsen, Mr. del Val, Miss Sybil Sutton-Vane, the director, and Mr. Heber Blankenhorn, the public relations counsel. Mr. del Val presented a summary of the financial statement, and Mr. Jacobsen read his views concerning the necessity of giving the Guild more formal shape by the drafting of a constitution and by-Laws which will not only insure better organization but will define the duties of various officers and committees to prevent the overlapping of effort which took place in the rather short time which was at the Guild's disposal for its first production.

These reports and other business will be considered by the general meeting this afternoon.

OF PERSONAL INTEREST

Mrs. Henry P. Loomis, who has been staying at the Hotel Mediterraneo, is leaving Palma next Wednesday for a motor trip in the south of France, Northern Italy and the Balkans in connection with the work of the American Society for the Relief of Russian Exiles. With her will be Col. Malevski-Malevitch, who is the European representative of the Society.

The headquarters of this organization are in New York with branches in most of the European capitals. The work is mainly to help Russian charitable institutions and hospitals in collaboration with the Russian Red Cross (not to be confused with the Soviet Red Cross). A great many tuberculosis hospitals, children's homes and rest houses for the aged have been financially aided in France, Jugoslavia, Bulgaria, Greece, Austria, Italy, Belgium, Poland and Esthonia. Assistance is also given to individual Russian refugees.

Sir William Sheppard left the Island last Tuesday by the Marseilles boat, to spend two or three months in England. Meanwhile, Lady Sheppard will move into their seaside home at Mal-Pas for the summer, and Sir William will rejoin her there upon his return.

Having left Palma for Paris last September, Mrs. Gertrude Bacchus returned to Mallorca the other day. She will spend the summer on the Island.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacobo Sureda gave a moonlight party on the terrace of their home in Genova last evening. A novel touch was the local guitarists who serenaded the company with an extensive repertoire of Spanish songs. Those of the guests who were familiar with the popular tunes joined in, to the accompaniment of castanets. Some of those who sang along were Señor and Señora Fernando Esteban, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Jones, Señor Pedro Sureda, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Friede, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Jacobsen, Miss Martha Foley, Mr. Whit Burnett and Mrs. Louise Beach.

Lady Hamilton and her son, Sir George Hamilton, left for England Saturday after a short stay in Pollensa. During their visit on the Islands, they collected many interesting pieces of old Mallorquin furniture which they have had sent back to their home in England.

Col. Malevski-Malevitch and Major Goetz had arranged an octopi hunt for last Monday evening, but owing to the north wind they were forced to postpone the expedition. The Colonel is at present having his portrait painted by Henry Mottez.

Col. and Mrs. Charles Stuart Davies, who have been living at Pollensa for the last eight months, will be leaving Mallorca soon. The Colonel has been called to duty in Singapore.

A moonlight bathing party, one of the very first of the season, was given on Friday night by Mrs. Louise Galbraith of Corp Mari.

Mr. Mark O'Connell, the New York lawyer, left during the last week for home after an extended stay at the Hotel Victoria.

Future of Chopin Festival Assured

The three concerts of the Madrid Symphony Orchestra last Sunday, Monday and Tuesday brought to an end the Chopin Festival for 1932, and in such a general atmosphere of complete success that the permanence of this musical event is now certain.

The promise of such excellent orchestral music as was furnished by the Madrid Symphony under the batons of Enrique Arbós, Alexander Tansmann and Balthasar Samper would alone be sufficient to guarantee a successful season next year. The programs of the entire three days were splendidly rendered with a great deal more than mere competence.

There could have been but one possible improvement. The Teatro Principal, big as it is, was not built for symphony and there is no better hall in Palma. Yet outdoor concerts should prove popular; they have won high approval elsewhere, and perhaps next year we will have them in Mallorca.

LATEST NEWS

London.—The Chamber of Commerce announces that since the new tariff act, about one hundred new industries have been started in Great Britain or are installing machinery to commence production within the near future. Naturally there has been a considerable decrease in unemployment.

About a dozen of the firms which have already begun operations are manufacturing goods which were hitherto imported, and the others are factories established by foreign companies planning to work in England rather than send their wares from abroad. Of these, twenty-seven are German, fifteen Dutch, fifteen American, six Belgian, four Swiss, two French, two Austrian and one Danish.

Dublin.—Despite pointed warnings from the British Government, the Dail Eireann has passed a bill abolishing the Irish Free State oath of allegiance to King George. The London authorities have declared they would regard such a measure as a violation of the treaty of 1921 by which the Free State was established. However, there is still a chance the Senate, before whom the bill comes this week, will reject it.

Santander.—The palace of the Marquis de Merdabal was robbed during the week of extremely valuable works of art and other valuables. The Marquis was in Palma de Mallorca and until his return a complete inventory of the missing articles cannot be given. However, it is known that among the missing treasures were seventeen pictures valued at 150,000 pesetas and a priceless collection of antique fans.

Trenton, New Jersey.—Despite every effort and tremendous publicity, the search for the murderers of the Lindbergh baby were as fruitless last week as was the effort to find the kidnappers before it was known that the child had been killed.

A LESSON IN APPROPRIATE APPAREL FOR PALMA STREETS

A crowd was moving up the Calle de Conquistador, a rather exclusively male crowd, walking along, craning necks, circling about the central figure who later gave the police the name of Mlle. Vultou, and said she was stopping at the Ca's Catalá Hotel. On this bright Wednesday morning, she had ridden in on the tram, dismounted at the Glorieta and started up the hill.

The throng about her grew rapidly, for Mlle. Vultou presented a picture new to Palma streets. She was clad in beach costume of pyjama trousers low on the hips and a kerchief across the breast, the sort of thing that has been very popular on the sands at Nice and Cannes.

The wearer got as far as the Plaza de Cort. There a policeman requested her and a friend who accompanied her to step inside the Ayuntamiento. The officials there read her a severe lecture on the impropriety of appearing in such a costume in the city, where that type of dress is as infrequent as it is in the business sections of New York, London or any other capital.

The authorities refrained from making it a court case, and sent Mlle. Vultou home in an automobile.

Sharing the distaste of a large part of the foreign population of Palma for this incident, the Civil Governor issued the following announcement, which it is hoped will prevent any repetition of the incident:

«The cosmopolitan character which this city has acquired, and which is increasing more and more every day, thanks to the stream of tourists who are coming from all the countries of the world, imposes upon all of us, those who live in Palma as well as visitors, an obligation of mutual tolerance of habits, customs, manner of dressing, styles, etc.

«In matters that refer to styles it is manifestly useless to struggle, and that which once appeared ridiculous and unsightly to many has later been accepted by most people.

«This does not mean to say, however, that anything at all which signifies lack of respect, consideration and courtesy of a few for the many ought to be permitted, and these can be subjected to rules previously established. We have to consider, for example, that it is not correct to pass through the city enveloped merely in a robe or clad in plain pyjamas, and those who use them need not pretend that they possess no other street clothes.

«Without going to ridiculous extremes, nor yet permitting insolence and impudence against the good taste of all, it is hoped that it will not be necessary to have those in authority interfere to correct violations of the rules of courtesy and morality on the one side, and at the same time avoid interfering with the right of appearing according to the customs of their respective countries on the part of any who honor us with a visit to this country.

«These reflections and recommendations are called forth in order to avoid incidents such as that which occurred a few days ago in the Plaza de Cort and which could not have been agreeable to any of the persons involved in it.»

At the Ayuntamiento, it was explained that there is no intention whatever of interfering with anyone appearing in scanty costume on the beaches or in the country. But it is felt that these should not be brought into the city streets. No one in authority cares what is or is not worn.

As evidence of the tolerant view of the Mallorquin people and officials, there was not in all the comment on the incident one reference to the fact that we are, in a manner of speaking, guests in Mallorca and that therefore in behooves us to consider the usages and feelings of our host,

Marvels of Journalism

There is something exhilarating, something irrepressibly — and irresponsibly — optimistic about any place that is on the boom. It is difficult to be in a place such as, say, Mallorca, without imbibing a little of this spirit; the most fantastic figures seem hardly improbable.

And so when it was announced yesterday morning that Palma was the scene of the journalistic marvel of the age, it was not even surprising. To be specific, the announcement was that our English daily, the Palma Post, has 3000 readers every day. That was news, and the editors of THE MAJORCA SUN sought out Mr. G. G. del Val, the general manager of the Post.

Mr. del Val was disappointing. He offered another miracle in place of the one indicated. He said he had not seen the announcement in his paper and could not explain how the figure was arrived at. He thought one of the copies might have ten or fifteen readers, but he couldn't make an estimate about the others.

Special Postal Service For Foreign Residents

The local Postal authorities have approved a branch post office for Santa Catalina. The service will be instituted mainly for the benefit of foreign residents in Terreno, Genova and San Agustin and the staff will include an interpreter to facilitate foreign mailing negotiations. This announcement has been made by Señor Fernando Esteban, Secretary of the Palma Post Office. He also says that a branch station has been planned for Puerto Pollensa.

In response to an article on the local postal service which appeared in THE MAJORCA SUN of April 24, Señor Esteban says:

«The Spanish Post Office, like all other services of the Spanish Administration, is centralized in Madrid. Every reform or change must be previously subjected to the consideration, then the approval or rejection by headquarters in Madrid. It is easy, therefore, to understand the lengthy proceedings which this occasions.

«The fact is evident that the foreigners in Mallorca are every day more numerous. This is the logical result of the propaganda that Spain is making on all sides. And foreigners make the most use of the post office in all its branches. But what we see so clearly here in Mallorca is evidently misted over in the distance to Madrid.

«The postal service on this island needs to be improved in many respects. The building in which it is installed in Palma combines the worst possible conditions — small, dark and dirty. You unfortunately know this almost as well as I. And if outsiders notice this, it can be imagined what it is like for those of us who are obliged to remain within those walls working under such unpleasant circumstances.

«A branch post office with complete service has been approved for Santa Catalina, and those who live in Terreno, Genova and San Agustin will be able to make use of this branch. Also, one has been planned for Puerto Pollensa where there will be one official and perhaps two postmen — and if possible, an interpreter.

«Mail boxes should be placed in San Agustin, Cas Catalá, Porto Pi, and more in El Terreno with a last minute collection made by special messenger. In Palma itself, more personnel is necessary, and at least one interpreter should be present during office hours.

«Some of these things have already been conceded, other are under consideration; but neither the former nor the latter can be put into practice because of lack of personnel and the necessary appropriations to carry them through. Up to the present the Post Office in Spain has always been considered by the heads of the Government as a good source of income, and not as a service to be regulated for the convenience of the public.

«But it seems this will change, and we have great hopes, perhaps for selfish reasons, that this will be the case. I believe that the public ought to get the good service for which it pays, and not excuses. I hope that my modest opinion will be taken into account in Madrid.»

Señor Esteban was appointed to his post here after studying postal administration methods in London for some time for the Spanish Government.

Beginning tomorrow (Monday) Rul-lan will exhibit the photographs he has made of Mlle. There is also to be on display some unusual photographs made by Rul-lan of the Caves of Drach.

Next Wednesday, the 25th, the Galerías Costa plans to open an exhibition of paintings of local scenes by artists whose work has not yet been shown in Palma. Some of these are Mallorquin painters, and one is a young German of great promise.

After a successful showing of her photographs at the Galerías Costa the last two weeks, Mlle. Helene de Marguerie closes her exhibition today (Sunday). She expects to open her studio for portrait photography in the Calle de Sagraera on Tuesday.

Summer Cruises

Palma is going to be as popular for the summer tourist cruises as she has been during the colder months. Among the many ships including this port in their itinerary are several big ones that have never put in here before.

The P. and O. Line's latest vessel, the Strathnaver, will come to Mallorca on her maiden voyage, arriving in the morning of August 28th. The Lapland of the Red Star Line is due in Palma on four different occasions, July 22nd, August 5th and 20th and September 3rd. This line has never sent a ship to the Balearic Islands before. The Homeric is scheduled for three visits, July 21st, August 24th and September 11th. She expects to carry 1,000 passengers on her first voyage.

Mr. Lawrence Answers Hospital Critics

(The following letter from the Director of the Enfermeria Evangelica is his reply to criticism which was publicly voiced in letters from Mr. H. Lawton Higman contained in these columns last week.)

Barcelona, 14th May 1932.

Dear Major Higman,

As promised in my letter handed personally by me to you on May 6th, also in answer to your letter on May 6th, I have much pleasure in giving you herewith a full explanation of the points raised.

As regards the case of the late Miss Murray, it was first brought to my notice by some of the friends of the hospital that certain misleading stories were being circulated amongst the foreign colonies about a young Irish servant girl who had just died in a Spanish Hospital, stories which, as also the statements made in your letter received on the same date, I could not but consider misleading and not conforming to the exact facts of the case.

The Beginning

Let me now give you my version of this regrettable affair.

About a fortnight ago Mr. John Witty, H.B.M. Vice-Consul in Barcelona, rang me up on the telephone and asked me whether I could receive a Spanish lady who wished to consult me about a matter concerning the Hospital. I saw her fifteen minutes later in my office and in the course of our conversation she informed me that her Irish maid, who had been in her employ for 18 months, was dangerously ill with meningitis and she would like to have her removed to our Hospital.

I immediately telephoned to the Matron and asked her if she could admit the case at once and received the reply that there were no beds vacant but that within a couple of days some of the patients would be leaving when she could reserve a room for the girl.

I gave the reply to my visitor and asked her if she could wait the necessary time, to which she answered that as she had the girl sick in bed for the last 15 days she did not at all mind nursing her for another day or two. Previously the girl's mistress had told me that her maid was a Roman Catholic and she was naturally desirous of knowing whether the sick girl could be visited by a priest. I explained that the hospital was founded preferentially for Protestants, but as it was a nursing home, not a centre for propaganda, we admitted patients of all creeds so long as they conformed to the rules and regulations. In the Rules of the Hospital provision was made for the attendance of a priest of the inmate's own religion, in special or extreme cases if requested by the patient, his friends or his doctor. I added that I had personally arranged with the R. C. Rector of the Parish in which the hospital is situated to attend R. C. patients, when requested to do so, without any ostentation which might cause annoyance to patients of other creeds. This he very willingly agreed to do; so that if the girl had needed a priest he would immediately have been sent for.

As the lady informed me that her maid was most of the time in a comatose state I remarked that if she were a very strong R. C. she might resent, on recovering consciousness, having been taken to a Protestant Hospital without her consent. The lady said in reply that she had already asked the sick girl if she wanted a priest to visit her and that she had refused, but that in spite of her refusal the priest had been sent for and that the girl had been quite pleased to see him.

The next point discussed was that of payments. I explained fully the financial position of the Hospital — that there were no fixed tariffs but that each patient, or his friends, were expected to contribute according to their means — that the Hospital was not endowed — that the only source of revenue was derived from subscriptions and donations made by charitable persons and by patients. She then asked me how much she would be expected to contribute for her maid, to which I replied that it was quite a voluntary matter — many patients paid 30 Ptas. per day but as she said she could not afford to give so much she might perhaps manage 20 Ptas. a day. She said she could get the girl admitted to the Hospital Clinico for 10 Ptas. a day.

The Hospital's Offer

I then made another suggestion on which she said she would consult with her husband and let me know his decision. My offer was that as her maid was very ill and that her illness would probably be a very short one ending in death, she could contribute 20 Ptas. a day for the first week of the patient's treatment and that if the girl continued alive after that time we should accept anything they could afford to give for the remainder of her stay. My last words to my visitor were: «Do not worry about the payments, as the girl is British she will be admitted to the Hospital in any case.» The lady did not return and I presumed that she had sent her maid elsewhere. Two or three days later Mr. Witty again rang me up on the telephone. I gathered from him that the masters of the sick Irish maid, on whose behalf I had been approached, were again in his office and were asking him to request of me again on what terms we would admit the case. I was greatly surprised because, as I have said before, the girl's mistress had promised to call again and let me know to what decision they had arrived at with her husband, but thinking that perhaps the husband preferred to carry out these negotiations through the Consulate, I asked Mr. Witty to repeat to them the suggestions I had already made to the lady when she visited me two or three days before. Mr. Witty conveyed my reply, and after a few minutes, returned to say that the girl's master was not a wealthy person, etc., etc., so then I proposed that they should contribute 15 or 20 Ptas. a day for the first week, and if they could not afford so much and as a last resource, after the first week we would forego any payments whatever.

No mention at all was made regarding the admission or non admission of the case, because that had already been settled with the lady. Mr. Witty ultimately gave me these peoples' address and asked me to call on them and arrange for the removal of the girl to our hospital. I did so without a moment's loss of time, but when I arrived at the house I was informed by the portero that the Señor and Señora had just gone to a hospital to take their sick maid there.

Next morning I informed Mr. Witty, and he agreed with me that everything possible from the hospital side had been done for this poor girl.

I have since learned that the reason the girl was not taken to our hospital was the opposition of one of her friends to her being taken to any other than a R.C. hospital.

Before answering the two queries in your letters I should like you to know that many British and other foreign destitute cases have been in the past, assisted in the manner suggested by you.

I am sorry you take exception to my affirming that the statements made in your letter of the 5th May are misleading; you might have cause for resentment if I had said that your statements were intentionally misleading, I do not say this and am willing to admit that your mistake arose from ignorance of the true facts of the case. I am sure you will understand that while I might have privately denied an assertion which on admission would have convicted me of intolerance and bad faith (to my subscribers) I had to publicly deny rumours, rumours which I have learned from several sources are being circulated in the Colony, which were bound to cause harm to our Institution if unrectified.

A word occurring in your first letter lends itself to different and conflicting interpretations, namely the word "distressed". You have defined your meaning somewhat more plainly in your second letter.

Do you mean distressed or destitute? If the latter I certainly cannot agree with you, as the girl involved was living in an upper class district and, according to her mistress, surrounded by every comfort. She was undoubtedly ill but not stranded nor destitute. All our patients rich and poor, are, to a greater or lesser extent, in distress, but they are not, even the poor Evangelicals, necessarily destitute.

I fail to see why if you were interested in getting a case admitted into the Hospital you did not come to me as Director of that institution instead of going to the British Consulate. Will you allow me to point out that all this unpleasantness would have been avoided had you done so.

With reference to your 1st question. When Consulates obtain admission of destitute cases to the Hospital they always pay for such services. If any of our British Subscribers are interested in destitute cases I have no hesitation in assuring you that they will be admitted on exactly the same conditions as a poor Evangelical Spaniard. Care however has to be taken by the Hospital Authorities to avoid cases being admitted free for whom other parties have a legal responsibility to provide.

With reference to your 2nd question. The relation existing between the Foreign Colonies and the Spanish Evangelicals is in the nature of a partnership. The Foreign Colonies contribute funds for carrying on the work of the Hospital and the Spanish Evangelicals contribute the Buildings, Ground, Equipment &c. The existence of both is necessary to the continuation of the Hospital. Even so, however, Spanish Evangelical cases are not all admitted free, only those who are in fact poor.

The total annual contributions, including interest on capital, of and for the Spanish Evangelicals has been estimated at Ptas.35,000. which well covers the cost of treatment of these cases.

I may also remark that funds received for the Hospital are used exclusively and absolutely for Hospital purposes, no money whatsoever being used for religious propaganda, &c.

I remain,

Yours sincerely

GEORGE LAWRENCE

Hospital Correspondence

To the Editor:

I shall certainly withhold any contributions to the so-called British Hospital until Mr. Lawrence has assured me that members of the Roman Catholic Church would have equal rights with the Evangelicals of practising their religion should they find themselves patients in the Hospital. I hope I will be supported by all fellow Catholics.

I enclose my card.

Children's Entertainment

New Barcelona Golf Club

The finals of the Ladies' Championship will be played this afternoon between Sra. Lopez Sert and Mrs. Frost over the San Cugat course. Sra. Lopez Sert defeated Sra. Giró in the semi-finals and Mrs. Frost beat Srta. Margarit.

Monthly Medal

The 18 hole stroke handicap competition was played on Whitsunday. Owing to the excessive heat and the rapidly drying ground, high scores were returned. Sr. Vizconde de Illa and Mr. J. Wihl tied with the best scores, and the Vizconde won the play off on Monday.

The Club championship will start today.

Mr. Higman Satisfied

16th May, 1932.

Dear Mr. Lawrence,

I have to acknowledge and thank you for your long explanatory letter of the 14th inst.

As far as I am concerned the following underlined paragraph on page 3, i.e. "As the girl is British she will be admitted to the Hospital in any case" is a complete answer to my original question. I only regret that you did not give me this in your first letter, or even in our subsequent conversation, as it would have saved a lot of misunderstanding.

On this assumption, i.e. that a Britisher will be admitted to the Hospital in any case, I shall be glad to increase my subscription by five pesetas per month until further notice.

Yours faithfully,
H. LAWTON HIGMAN.

Concerning the Races

To the Editor:

A few weeks ago you asked in your paper why the sport loving British and American colony do not support the races organized by the Barcelona Turf Society. Well, my name is not Gilby of the Sunday Express or Captain Coe, but just «Banks», an ordinary lover of racing be it at Newmarket, Longchamps, Nice, Algiers or Mallorca, and I wish to tell the Barcelona Racing Committee that theirs is one of the worst managed shows I have seen.

One tries all Sunday morning to buy a racing paper on the Rambla—which it would seem a town the size of Barcelona could support. Nothing doing! Only on the course can you buy a program; too late to study form. I was told the Catalans follow the good old fashioned custom of «picking them out with a pin.» Perhaps that is why they advertise that the races will start at 3.30, open betting booths at 4 and run the first race at 4.30.

The quality and quantity of the flat races cannot be criticized. Keep to that sort of thing, Barcelona—you cannot go far wrong. The Committee should make arrangements with some Palma or even Manacor judge to see that the horses conform with trotting regulations, and not allow the horses to trot or gallop around the course as the mood takes them. I quite understand that the course is so rough and grass so tuftie that often a horse has to break into a gallop to keep himself from falling when he encounters the mounds on the course.

To the Barcelona Turf Club, I would say:
Start on time and keep to it.

Put your box out in the grounds where you can see all racing.

Disqualify even the last horse if he does more than his share of galloping instead of trotting, or does not keep his place.

If you must run the last race almost in the dark, light up the far end of the course.

Make it a cinder track like Paris, Algiers, and even Palma; they are easy on the horses and one can get record times on them. The animals won't look so much like cab horses, as I believe one critic called them. Evidently he has not tried to buy one.

cost a lot both ways, and do you really think you put up a good enough show for it? If you get down to business and run your races so that they compare in some way to similar shows in other parts of the world, you will not have to complain that the foreign colony will not support you.

The annual general meeting of the Barcelona British Chamber of Commerce took place at the Ritz Hotel on Friday morning, May 20th, under the chairmanship of Mr. Norman King, H. B. M. Consul General.

The meeting was followed by a luncheon which was attended by about thirty-five members and guests. The Chairman proposed the toast for His Majesty the King, which was followed by one for the President of the Spanish Republic.

In thanking Mr. King for attending the luncheon and acting as Chairman, Mr. Loveday O.B.E., Vice-President, said he was sorry that more members had not attended the meeting as they had missed some very good speeches, perhaps the best ever heard at any meeting of the organization.

Third Lesson

The tenses which present greatest difficulty to the foreign student of English are the PRESENT and the PAST. In the issue of the 8th of May we dealt with the present tense; now we will deal with the past tense; that is, of course, the simple past used in ordinary conversation.

As there are two tenses which refer to the PRESENT, so also there are two tenses which we use referring to the PAST.

First Past He went to the Cine yesterday (definite).

Second Past He has gone to the Cine (indefinite).

The first is used when giving definite and detailed information about the action which is completed. (why? when? how? where? etc.,)

The second only tells you that the action is performed, not stating why? when? how? where? etc., it is used when the performance just precedes the present. Examples:

I came here yesterday but there was nobody (no one) in.

My brother has come; he is in the other room. (acaba de venir).

I went home late last night, because I had much work.

Your friend has gone to the station; he went in a taxi.

I wrote many letters yesterday to my clients.
He has written the letter and has gone home.

When did he go? He went about an hour ago.
How did he go? He went by tram.

Why did he go? He went because his wife telephoned for him.

Has he spoken to you about this matter? Yes he has spoken to me about it.

When did he speak to you about it? He spoke

They Don't Want to Go Home

Contrary to all except the most optimistic hopes, the Balearics are still the residence of many who were expected to have left long since. The recent spell of warm weather, the bathing and boating and other summer attractions have caused many visitors to remain longer than they intended.

For example, the Excalibur of the American Export Lines sailed from Palma to New York yesterday with only three passengers picked up from here—Mrs. F. F. Wilkins, Mr. Karlton Winter and Mr. Raymond O. Richards, of the American consulate in Madrid. Others had planned to leave and had booked on the Excalibur but have changed their tickets for later dates.

Nor is the summer popularity confined to Mallorca. Ibiza, too, is being increasingly visited, and reports from that island say that every bed in every hotel, pension and fonda between the first and tenth of June has been reserved.

Ship for Alicante Damaged

Friday at noon, just as she was pulling out for her regular trip to Ibiza and Alicante, the Rey Jaime I suffered a slight accident to her machinery and was obliged to return to the dock.

The inspectors came aboard and pronounced her unfit to make the trip until repairs were made. The Ciudad de Alicante thereupon took the passengers from the Rey Jaime I and left after a short delay.

Spanish Legends

A collection of legends current for ages in Northern Spain is contained in a book just published in England by Sydenham & Co. under the improbable title of The Diabolical Diamond. The author writes under the pseudonym of L. Veaho (El Viejo) and has given to the book the name of the first story, a mystery yarn very different from the legends that follow, although perhaps based on one.

The tales are those of the mountain people, and in several instances the author has incorporated the probable facts that gave rise to the legend in the story itself.

The legends, collected during «L. Veaho's» wanderings through the country, are those ancient tales that the mountaineers, unspoiled by the advance of too much progress, still tell each other and the very infrequent traveller through their difficult country. They recapture to some extent the spirit of the great days of Spain, but they could have been improved if the author had omitted the first person singular that makes his style unmistakably amateurish.

Spain's Best Bullfighters Coming

On Sunday afternoon, June 5th, Palma may expect a bullfight that will enable her to forget the sad performance of May 8th. They will kill full grown bulls — bravos — and the connoisseurs are looking forward to as fine a show as the season is likely to offer anywhere.
