THE TRIUMPH OF INCONSISTENCY

Steps to revive international trade, which the mass effort of the Economic Conference was powerless to take, were made with less fuss and in a more restricted manner during the last week. Individual nations were working for themselves, and the results showed in various agreements and announcements of increased business.

The collapse of the Economic Conference threw almost every country represented back upon an attitude of defiant isolation. Nations and blocs of nations were crying that they could build high walls around themselves and live securely within while the rest of the world went hang.

around themselves and live securely within while the rest of the world went hang.

This tendency is still strong, but side by side and in opposition is recognition of the need for having some gates in the wall. The two ideas do not mix very well, but strict logic is not applicable to a world of muddled thinking and stubborn diversities of opinion. Consequently, we find the sternest isolationists willing to make concessions if they can get something in return.

England seemed to be the chief beneficiary to date. In London a set of intricate figures was issued practically without comment, but analysis showed a rather striking increase in the volume of British foreign trade (including the Dominions) and the increase is of that steady, solid nature which can usually be counted upon to last.

Further hope for the English coal industry is being held out in an agreement, nearly completed, by which France permits greater importation of English coal in return for certain concessions on French exports. This is interesting in view of the fact that France was quite the most vociferous of the «sufficient unto himself» school.

The United States, busy with the world's greatest experiment in the regulation of industry, is sparing a few glances towards foreign markets. Meanwhile the plan to run the nation's business according to code proceeds with such rapidity that where we heard a few weeks ago of tens and dozens of codes being worked out, we now read that they are being considered and adopted in hundreds. At the rate of production the market will soon be glutted.

That international co-operation in economic affairs was not entirely killed by the Economic Conference is being proved on the same field — London — by the Wheat Conference. There agreement between twenty-nine nations is practically reached, and the producers have agreed to accept a fixed price lower than they had expected to get. They have, with rare exceptions, also agreed to limit production to about 15 per cent. below the current crops.

The Revolutionary Idea

The new order in Germany continues to vie with the new order in America for popular attention. The Hitlerization of the country continues with undiminished vigor, and it is believed that some of the more Socialistic declarations of the National Socialist Party will be put into effect. Hitherto they have been overshadowed by the National features.

Of less lasting importance, but of more popular interest, is the beginning of a slight unpleasantness between the two most revolutionary nations of the moment. The United States is officially objecting to the way in which American citizens have been treated in Germany. So many of them have been beaten by the Nazi storm troops (one almost used the word «mediaeval»), that Washington is threatening to warn Americans against visiting Germany unless Berlin gives some assurances more concrete than words that the persons of the visitors will be reasonably safe Apparently the American Government does not object officially to punishing Americans under the laws although it may deplore such pro-cedure. The protest is directed against the irresponsible brown shirts who summarily beat up American visitors for not giving the Fascist salute etc.

Prehistoric Relics Found Here

Charseems to be one of the most important archaeological finds made in recent years in Mallorca is now being studied, and is expected to throw some light on that little known prehistoric race which raised the talayots and taulas abounding in Menorca and also found on this Island.

The discovery was made near the Caves of Artá during the excavation of the water reservoir for the hotel at Canyamel which the Hotel y Playas de Can-yamel company is putting up.

The workmen, who were proceeding under the direction of Don Antonio Salvá, turned up several human skeletons and other human bones, which were at first believed to have been the remains of smugglers buried in this once out of the way section years ago. However, a closer examination showed them to be much older than that, the formation of the skulls being particularly distinctive.

Work was immediately stopped while the find was reported to Mr. Kendall Park, manager of the company, and he accompanied Don Juan Thomas to the scene. The discovery seemed to be of such importance that the work of excavation will not be continued until experts have examined the bones and made further researches.

The queer, somewhat druidical monuments which are fairly common in Menorca, exist only in this particular section of Mallorca today. The race which raised them is one of the major mysteries of archaeology, and it is thought the Canyamel discovery may throw considerable light on these ancient peoples, scientists being able these days to deduce many wonderful things from the shape of a jawbone. A committee has already been appointed to take charge of this.

The men whose skeletons have been found picked out an extremely desirable part of the island in which to live. The bones were dug up near the wood of hundred year old pines, called Els Pins de Ses Vegues, overlooking Canyamel beach.

Swimming Champions

The fourth annual swimming race across the harbor was a triumph for the Club de Regatas, whose representative won the contest from a large field, and for the Club de España which organized the meet and gave a well run fiesta afterwards.

Jaime Servera was the winner, covering the 1,200 meters in 17 minutes 50 seconds, fifty meters ahead of the second man, Francisco Ruiz of the C.N. Tarragona. Juan Reinés of the C.N. Cataluña was third, and Carlos Manrique de Lara, also of the local Club de Regatas, fourth. There were 127 starters, a number of them from Barcelona, Valencia and Tarragona.

Only five entered the women's race of 600 meters. It was won by Catalina Bestard in 8 minutes 50 seconds, with Elsa Johnson second, Carmen Bernhart third, Juana Forteza fourth and Maria Bestard fifth.

On Friday the Club de Regatas tendered a banquet in honor of its two heroes, Servera and Manrique.

This week Servera, and possibly several other Mallorquin swimmers, will leave for Madrid to take part in the national championships in the capital next Saturday and Sunday. Servera will compete in the 1,500 meter race.

Uzcudum to Fight in Palma

On Sept. 12th Palma has a chance to see in action a fighter who is hailed by some of the foreign sports writers as a potential world's heavyweight champion. Paolino Uzcudum will fight an opponent still to be selected in the Palma bull ring, and those who wish to see him will be able to do so at not exorbitant prices.

When the big Basque retired from America some years ago, the experts shook their heads over him. He was strong and willing, but he couldn't really fight, they said. Now some of them have changed their minds. Accounts of Uzcudum's victory over the South African McCorkingdale so impressed them that they are saying he might very well be the man to beat Carnera.

In spite of the fact that the Basque is an old man for a champion — about the age of Fitzsimmons at his best, and his defeat by Carnera in Barcelona four years ago, it is said he is a better man than ever. Well, Palma will have a chance to see, and when the bull ring is converted into a prize fight arena the prices will range down from 35 pesetas. This will be for ringside seats; the last rows on the ground and the first rows in the permanent stands will be as low as 7 pesetas. Further back than this it will be difficult to see very much without the aid of field glasses.

Argument

The other day a gentleman and a lady had a little altercation over a purely private matter, and as a result the Pins Bar Orchestra has had to get another member.

The gentleman in the case was one of those who provide dance music in the Terreno resort, and in the course of the argument with a French woman some violence was used, and the musician suffered considerably. The affair was settled by the simple expedient of expulsion for both, since he is also a foreigner.

Another of the departures (by request) from the Island was a young man from the Peninsula who explained quite frankly that he preferred to live without working. It was thought he should try his talents in this regard in his own community.

Georgii Recovered

Mr. John Georgii, who was near death last week from an overdose of veronal, has almost completely recovered, and is able to be up and about again. Once he had recovered consciousness, he became rapidly better. He reports that he enjoyed a pleasant nap, four days, and is feeling quite sufficiently rested.

Calamayor to be Private Beach

This is the last season for the crowds to throng Calamayor Beach, the nearest to Palma, free of charge. It has been acquired privately and will be operated by a company which will charge admission. The organizers promise that sand and water will be kept much cleaner than at present. The condition of the beach today prevents many swimmers from using it.

There is nothing in the law, as has been reported, to prevent private individuals from owning a beach. The only provision is that it must be open to the carabineros, and in the resorts such as Sitges and San Sebastian beaches are privately owned. For this one it is planned to develop tennis and beach sports as well as swimming, and the company has acquired the land just back of the beach.

Exchange of the Week

Both pounds and dollars declined on the Madrid bourse this week, despite most optimistic statements from England and America. Sterling, opening at 39.60, closed at 39.35, according to Credito Balear quotations, and dollars went from 8.76 to come to rest Saturday at 8.52. That this was caused by no rise in the peseta is indicated by the steadiness of gold francs at 46.85 centimos all week.

But Not in Silence!

MR. and Mrs. Theodore Pratt reached New York a couple of weeks ago and the interviews he graciously accorded the press have come back to us. From them we learn that (if we are Americans) we really aren't here at all, or if we are that we're competing for the first passage out.

The writer, who aroused the indignation of a good many of his compatriots as well as of the Mallorquins by an article extremely uncomplimentary of their Island, character and habits, has been answered in the American press by Mr. Leonard Liebling, editor of the Musical Courier and a well known writer besides. Mr. Liebling has paid a couple of visits to Mallorca, his last one coinciding with the recent excitement, and his wife and daughter are res-

The Pratt interviews report him as repeating his original charges in the main, with some additions such as that he was treated with what «amounted to a modern Spanish inquisition» and that all the Americans were leaving.

Characterizing Mr. Pratt's statements as «misleading and unjust,» Mr. Liebling comments:

I found (in Mallorca) none of the discouraging conditions which Mr. Pratt describes so unfavorably, not to say maliciously. It is true that the hand of Spanish law has descended upon some American visitors (chiefly in the city of Palma) but only when they transgressed against rules and regulations that obtain in every civilized centre for the protection of the citizenry in general. There is no valid reason why foreigners should be permitted to offend against restrictions willingly respected by the native population of Majorca. I am not aware that America allows any such privileges to visiting Europeans in our country. Majorca has suffered much from the actions of Americans who permitted their whisky to get the upper hand of their wisdom but that is another story.

Of the statement that the steamers touching here would bring back all the 1,500 Americans (we wonder where the figure came from), Mr. Liebling says:

«That positively is not true, and is as egregiously violent as everything else that Mr. Pratt has said and written about Majorca... I feel that Mr. Pratt's experience is an isolated one and should not be allowed to foster general prejudice against a community the members of which I have found to be unusually peaceable, hospitable, polite — and understanding of foreigners who do not drink themselves into a state of offensive lawlessness.»

Indicative of the general accuracy of the Pratt statements as reported in the press is one that the crowning injury was the refusal of the Mallorquins to let him take his dog with him «on a technicality» and the warning that when it was sent to him the pup's eyes would be gouged out.

The «technicality» was Mr. Pratt's statement that he didn't care to pay the price of the dog's passage. When he bought his own ticket the day before his ship sailed, the agent of the American Export Lines explained to him that he would have to make up his mind that day, since it was necessary to make out a ticket for the animal. The Pratts said they thought they wouldn't take the dog at the price, but next day they arrived at the pier with the beast. They were late - the launch was waiting only for them — and they were refused permission to take the dog, although they then offered to pay; it was too late to make out a ticket. As for the dog's eyes being gouged out, the only person to whom they spoke about the dog was an Englishman, and he offered the prediction that Mr. Pratt would invent some such story

Mr. Pratt's statement that his house was stoned in Puerto Pollensa is difficult to reconcile with his attitude at the time the incident was fresh in his mind. A few days after he left the Puerto he was asked about the reports that any violence was attempted, and at that time he dismissed such versions of the incident as «ridiculous.»

He has also said he was put in the street where he was in danger of being physically injured. The nearest approach to an injury was that an American press photographer took a number of pictures of Mr. and Mrs. Pratt posing in front of the Hotel Royal. The extent of the injury thus inflicted cannot be estimated until the photographs have been seen, but they should hardly warrant such outcry.

Hillgarth's New Book

The Black Mountain, by Alan Hillgarth, published by Ivor Nicholson & Watson, Ltd. 7/6.

In this book, just published in London, the British Vice Consul in Mallorca, displays a great deal of the knowledge he acquired first hand in Bolivia—a knowledge of the character of the people as well as their traditions, history and environment. Furthermore it is a novel with an interesting story, a great adventure, of the sort that is usually described by the phrase «couldn't put it down until I'd finished it.

Commander Hillgarth's style is admirably suited to the subject matter. Perhaps it is his naval training, but he writes in short, sharp sentences for the most part, and these lend the narrative a clarity and simplicity which furnish the reader an illusion of being set himself among the scenes the writer describes.

In The Black Mountain, Commander Hillgarth traces the career of an Indian boy who wins an education by chance and has his ambitions aroused by a belief that he is almost of pure white blood. Throughout, however, he is unable to escape from a sympathy for the race to which he really belongs.

The book shows a remarkable understanding of the Bolivian scene, from the opening chapters in the wilds of the country through the patriarchal society of the provinces to the semi-European glitter of the capital. The writer seems to have understood sympathetically and has described with skill the various types—the patient, debased Indian, the mixed bloods, the nearly pure Spanish hidalgos and the gringo, all of whom join in making a very entertaining book.

Mary Goetz, former film actress and the wife of Mr. Ronald Goetz, sat for the above portrait to Peer Lundt, the young Danish painter who has been living in Genova. The original is being sent to Oslo to be hung in a national exhibition there next October. Until recently the artist has confined himself to black and white, but he is now making interesting experiments with the brush as well. His color effects are strangely impressive and in his portraits he shows a strong feeling for decorative organization.

The Modernization of Andorra

NOORRA, country of mediaeval institutions and hardly less than mediaeval isolation, has come through an exceedingly modern revolution, of which this week seems to have seen all but the dying echoes. To the world, the events of recent weeks have been of absorbing interest because in this tiny state the political forces are exhibited in miniature which makes them seem simpler and less devastating than similar phenomena in other lands.

The distinctive feature of the revolutionary idea in these 1930's is bloodlessness. The Andorrans, peasants and smugglers, have observed the spirit of the decade, and they have maintained an admirable attitude of restraint. Endless talk, demonstrations and argument have constituted the revolutionary weapons. The opposing forces, each claiming to represent constituted authority, and each able to advance plausible arguments for its case, have refrained from the cruder forms of violence, and the final and most forceful argument came with the introduction of a body of the French gendarmerie into a turbulent but hardly disorderly country.

General Election

These, it is announced, will remain until after a general election on Thursday, when the voice of the people is expected to restore its wonted calm to «The Valleys and Suzerainties of Andorra,» the official designation of the tiny country

The political organization of the place explains some of the agitation which has been in progress. The name is derived from the Arabic «Aldarra» meaning a place of many trees, but the trees were cut down and burned many a long year ago. Some 5,500 people inhabit the 452 square kilometres of Andorra's territory, tending their flocks by day and smuggling by night.

It is not a republic but a principality. Until 1278 it was a fief of the Counts of Castello in the province of Lerida, but in that year it was brought by an heriess of the house as part of her dowry to Roger Bernard, Count of Foix. The Bishops of Urgel, however, had claims which dated from Carlovingian times, like so many Pyrenean privileges, and in 1278, by an act of division Andorra swore allegiance to the County of Foix and the See of Urgel in a suzerainty equally and indivisibly shared.
When Henry of Navarre mounted the throne of France and absorbed the heritage of the feudal system, the half interest in this suzerainty passed to the French crown. Today the co-princes, as they are termed, are the Bishop of Urgel and the French Republic, represented locally by the Prefect of Per-pignan.

Each of the co-princes is represented by a viguier. These two officers command the armed force and dispense criminal justice. There is a general council of twenty-four members, four from each of the six provinces of Andorra la Vella (old), San Julian de Loria, Canillo, Massana, Ordino and Encamp. Each of these provinces has a local council of its own. Little has changed here in the last six or seven centuries, and the state has kept its mediaeval customs, privileges and institutions. Time has passed over the valleys without leaving noticeable traces, and history spared the Andorrans wars and revolutions, crises and conferences. Their sole dispute with the outside world was over the matter of smuggling, of which France has tried in vain to cure

Suddenly, almost over night, Andorra developed a modern history. The most modern part of it was the commencement of a gigantic power station by the F.H.A.S.A. (Forces Hidroelectriques d'Andorra, S.A.) which has imported 2,000 foreign workmen to build the plant which will provide Andorra and the neighbouring parts of France and Spain with light and power. These workmen, far more modern than the Andorrans, have called two strikes recently, a display of civilization which gave the Andorrans a great deal to think about.

The first call for modernization came from the young men of the country, who wanted votes. Under the century-old system in Andorra, there was one vote for each family, and the families were veritable tribes with the elders living to far more than the scriptural term, so that sons, grandsons and great-grandsons were disfranchised, although there might be twenty or more grown men in the family. Agitation for adult suffrage has won the concession that it will be granted for the coming elections.

Disputes

Meanwhile the council and the co-princes were drifting into disputes. The council charged the princes were interfering in local affairs, contrary to established custom. The princes felt that the council was trying to run the country its own way. One cause of dissension, according to the Bishop of Urgel, was that several members of the council gave a concession for building a casino although the Bishop had refused his consent to the introduction of gambling into Andorra. Finally the princes ordered the dissolution of the council and called new elections. Th ecouncil retorted that this action was illegal and called elections of their own for Aug. 10th. This date passed without any voting; it has been said the council decided not to permit balloting since they stood little chance of re-election. The country buzzed with discussion at such a rate that a week ago two lorries full of gendarmes in steel helmets drove over the frontier, the first time foreign troops have penetrated the valleys. There was more hot discussion; the president of the council refused to turn over the key to the town hall; one leader of the «rebellion» was expelled from the country, but there was no shooting. Finally the council gave in and agreed to the elections on the understanding that when the will of the people has been discovered, the troops will

In miniature, the so-called revolution has left Andorra like so many other countries have been left by revolutions - bewildered but carrying on the old life as nearly as may be. The flocks remain to be tended, the power plant rises, and it will be just as impossible as ever to keep the Andorrans from improving their God-given opportunities to smuggle. The revolutions may considered as ended.

Mr. Gye, British Consul General at Tangier, who holds the personal rank of Minister in the Diplomatic Service, passed through Barcelona last week, and then went on to spend two days at the Terramar Hotel, Sitges. Mr. Gye has recently taken up his appointment at Tangier and was formerly head of the Consular Department at the Foreign Office.

Mr. Norman King, who had been recovering from his recent illness at Vichy, has now proceeded to England on leave.

Miss Elizabeth Deeble returned from the Canary Islands on Tuesday morning, after a long trip which included Portugal. She has great plans for the future of tourism in this latter country and in the Canaries and during her tour has collected a wealth of interesting information. Mrs. Catherine Andrews is remaining a little longer in the Canaries.

Mr. L.P. Warner and Mr. J. Woodburn returned this week from England where they spent their holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Roberts are spending the week-end on a camping tour.

Mrs. John Bigham is suffering from an attack of appendicitis. This misfourtune curtailed her stay with Mrs. Bishop at Aix-les-Thermes and necessited cancelling a motoring holiday in Galicia with her husband.

Miss Margaret Mayer left on Friday to spend a short holiday in England.

Mr. Robert McAlmon left on Sunday for Madrid. He intends to spend months there in congenial intellectual company, and write a novel or two.

Mr. William Bett died on Monday, Angust 21st, after a long illness.

The tennis tournament at Camprodon started on Wednesday and will probably be finished today. The surprise of Thursday's play was the victory of Buby Maier's youngest sister over Mademoiselle Chailly, the favourite of the ladies singles. Harald Wolf seemed to be well on the way to repeat his victory of last year over Suqué. He won the first set 6-3, but then Suqué took the iniative and won the next two sets to love. Some of the results were: Garriga-Nogués vs. Carles (J.) 6-4, 6-1; Rubio vs. Viñamata 3-6, 6-1; 6-0, Park vs. L. Carles 6-3, 6-4; Blanc vs. Soler Cabot 9-7, 6-1; Sta. Torras vs. Mrs. Park 6-4, 6-3; Albiol vs. Aguiló 4-6, 6-1, 8-6; Garriga-Nogués vs. Rubio 6-1, 6-3; Boter vs. Ayxelá 6-4, 6-3; Garriga-Nogués-Boter vs. Carles-Carles 7-5, 6-2; Maier-Suqué vs. Rubio-Viñamata 6-1, 6-2; Srta. Maier vs. Srta. Gamboa 6-1, 6-4; Srta. Maier vs. Srta. Chailly 6-4, 3-6, 6-2.

Film fans will be interested to know some statiscs about the number and kind of films that were released in Barcelona during the last season. Barcelona has seven cinemas which release only new films: Tivoli, Coliseum, Fantasio, Capitol, Cataluña, Femina and Urquinaona. Another five theatres release new films now and then: Paris, Principal Palace, Volga, Kursaal and Intim Cinema. During the last season 358 films were released in Barcelona, of which 227 were American and 131 European. The following table shows the number of American and European films released in the various theatres:

Buropean mass	American	European
Tivoli	14	12
Coliseum	34	9
Capitol	48	18
Cataluña	51	11
Femina	33	22
Fantasio	1	32
Urquinaona	38	1
Intim		8
Kursaal	4	1
Principal Palace	1	11
Volga	2	5
Paris	1	1
		F 1' 1

Of the 131 European films, 15 were English, 57 German, 53 French and 3 Spanish. Of the 227 American films 41 were doubled in Spanish. Paramount and United Artists each released 45, Metro Goldwyn 38, Febrer y Blay (Ufa and other German makes) 27, Fox 25, Universal 23, Warner Bros. 21, Cinnamond Films 17, S.I.C.E. 11, etc.

The twenty-five most popular pictures were Remordimiento, Amame esta Noche, Una Hora Contigo, Shanghai Express, Blonde Venus, Topaze, Der Rebell, Mercedes, I am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang, Der Kongress Tanzt, Ronny, Dos Corazones y un Latido, Violetas Imperiales, El Hombre que se reia del Amor, Maedchen in Uniform, Una Canción, un Beso, una Mujer; Atlantis, 14 de Juillet, Primavera en Otoño, Buscando Fieras Vivas, Grand Hotel, Mata Hari, Tarzan, El Ultimo Varon sobre la Tierra and The Mummy.

Owing to an error the date date of the reopening of the English School was given last week as Oct. 22nd instead of the Oct. 2nd, the day on which the term will begin.

Mr. Robert Nichel of the American Export Line spent two days in Palma, returning to Barcelona this (Sunday) morning.

Barcelona as a Hollywood

T the Orphea Studios in the Palacio de la Industria Química, one of the buildings in the exhibition grounds, the story of the Costa Brava fisher-men is being filmed. The screen version of José Maria de Sagarra's El Café de la Marina, which was the big success of last season on the stage of the Teatro Romea, has for its theme the problems, pleasures and frustrations of the people along the Spanish coast whose livelihood is gleaned from the sea

There is a sequence of colorful scenes worthy of the subtitle «poem» which the play carries. A masterly way of depicting atmosphere makes up for the lack of action in this story.

It is a new and difficult task to make a film from such a play, a film which will have to entertain by its artistic merits and which does not bid for success through the obvious medium of sensationalism. Art for art's sake is not often attempted by film producers these days, and Domenec and Pere Pruna are to be congratulated on what they have accomplished. The former directed El Café de la Marina and his brother, Pere, designed the scenes. He will be remembered for his decorations for Diaghileff's Jeus d'enfants which was received in Barcelona with great enthusiasmlast winter when Massine's Russian Ballet Company gave a number of performances at the Liceo.

Most of the artists have had no movie experience. There are Moragas, Ventayols, Tort and Gilberta Roger playing their scenes six and seven times over, never losing patience nor showing signs of temperament which would seem to be the prerogative of all Hollywood stars — if stories from that part of the world are to be believed. Perhaps the artists at the Orphea studios realize that as an example of an wholly artistic production, Café de la Marina has revolutionized the technical side of the film industry, and the actors would follow suit in their sphere.

Last year the first Catalan movie was made at the Orphea studios. It was called Mercedes and proved a hit all through Cataluña. The picture was along the lines of a Paul Whiteman review with a good deal of dancing, and music by the popular Jaime Planas orchestra.

Previous to that, a French company which was called the Orphea Films, took over the building in the Exhibition grounds and made several French movies of the musical comedy class in which, among others, Gina Manés frequently played the leading

The development of Montjuich as a cinema centre is the result of some racking of brains after the closing of the Exhibition as to what to do with the buildings. It was essential that the enormous capital invested in the pavilions should continue to bring in some revenue, at least sufficient for the upkeep of the buildings and the grounds.

Consequently several of the pavilions were leased to various enterprises, among which were two movie studios. The French company took over the Palacio de la Industria Quimica about two years ago, and the other firm is installed in a pavilion in the main alley.

Pablo Picasso in Barcelona

Pablo Picasso, for many connoisseurs the greatest painter of our times, has come to Barcelona on a visit of a few days. The object of the visit is to see his mother and a few friends whom he had not seen since his last stay in Barcelona some seven years ago.

His room at the Ritz is full of friends and reporters who want to know his opinions about modern painting. But Picasso refuses to say anything and wants to be left in peace. He is accompanied by his wife and his son, who is eleven years old and is said to have the same metallic look as his father. Picasso is spending his time in Barcelona with the sentimental occupation of reviving the memories of bygone days and expects to return to France very soon.

An Old Roman Spectacle

The representation of Medea in the Spanish version of Don Miguel de Unamuno was so greatly acclaimed at the Roman festival in Merida, held recently in the old Roman amphitheatre there, that the great Seneca drama will appear at least twice in Cataluña with the same Xirgu-Borrás company which played it in Merida.

The first will probably be in Tarragona, the date for which has been set - Sept. 22 - during the annual fiestas there, and the leading lady, Margarita Xirgu, has been in that city inspecting possible sites for the performance.

Another is promised in Barcelona at the Greek Theatre on Montjuich, but for this the date has not yet been fixed.

Potential Boom for Spanish Exports

News from Jugoslavia indicates that this country offers an excellent market for the expansion of Spanish trade, especially export trade. Since the rupture of trade relations between Jugoslavia and Germany, the Jugoslavian Jews, who are particularly important in the trade of the country, are looking for new sources of supply.

Many if not most of these Jews are of the «Sephardic» line, that is the Spanish Jews who still speak a species of Spanish mixed with Hebrew, just as Yiddish is based on German with Hebrew expressions. They are reported as especially desirous of buying their goods in Spain. Their immediate needs are electrical equipment and machinery of almost all kinds, bicycles, piping of iron and copper, wire and machinery.

Major and Mrs. Tatton were out fishing from their motor boat, one day last week, off Las Caletes, when they caught a large ray. The ray, while flopping about at the bottom of the boat, gave birth to six young ones. This sounds a very fishy story, but is perfectly true.

Mr. and Mrs. Rose's dance at Scottie's bar on Thursday, can only be described as a wow. Originally it was intended that everybody should be dressed either as a baby or a nurse. It was decided, however, that baby clothes would be apt to impede dancing, though I confess I should have liked to have seen Mrs. Rose, who must be six feet tall, attired as an infant.

The sailing club was handicapped last week by too much wind or the lack of it. The ladies' race has had to be postponed; but to-day, a fishermen's race is being held, in the boats of members of the sailing club. It will be interesting to see if the professionals make better times than the amateurs.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillips have left the Puerto for a house in the Huerta of Pollensa. Both are artists of distinction, and they will be much missed. Fortunately, however, they come down for a bathe and a cocktail every now and again.

Everybody in the Puerto knows little Anne Dowling, the flaxen haired, brown skinned daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dowling — Mr. Dowling is a well-known American poet. She has been seriously ill, and has had to have all her pretty hair cut off. Fortunately she is now well on the way to recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Pietsch left the Island yesterday (Saturday) on the Ussukuma, after three years residence in Puerto Pollensa. They altered their original plans so as to spend a short time in England before returning to America, expecting to sail on ihe Dunluce Castle Friday. They were unable to get passage, however, and took the German African liner instead. They were back here during the week for a last visit and were entertained to luncheon by Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Lincoln. On Wednesday they gave a farewell party in Palma for Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gavett, Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Lyons, Mr. Fulton Leser, Capt. and Mrs. Barley and Mr. and Mrs. Duane. Information About London

The London office of The Majorca Sun and Spanish Times is at the disposal of readers who intend visiting or returning to England. They may have their mail addressed there, secure information or reserve hotel accomodations through the office, to which inquiries and requests may be sent direct. The address is 205 High Holborn, W.C. 1.

Mr. Duane's ancestors took a prominent part in America's struggle for independence. His descendents, however, entertain quite as many English as Americans at their parties.

Among Puerto passengers on the Dunluce Castle are Mr. and Mrs. Bond, Miss Greenwood, Miss Kennedy, Mr. Finkel and Col. Norman, commanding officer of the Royal West Kent Regiment. Mr., Mrs. and Miss Allison Burbidge — Miss Burbidge won the last tennis tournament here — left on Saturday for Estoril on the Ussukuma.

Mr. and Mrs. Navasky — Mr. Navasky is a portrait painter and recently painted Lord Howard de Walden's family — are contemplating renting a house in the Puerto.

IN IBIZA

Mrs. Lene Schneider-Kainer, German painter who has designed the bar and tea room in Ibiza, returned Wednesday evening from a trip to Germany. She spent a few days in Palma before she came to Ibiza.

The yacht Atlantide which is cruising the Mediterranean was here for a day this week.

Two members of the Ibizan foreign colony are preparing with considerable labor manuscripts to enter in the local literary festival which will be held on Oct. 12th. Neither of them are attempting works in the Ibizan language, as the competition is open to both Castillian and Ibizan manuscripts. However, it is reported that one earnest student of the local tongue is considering putting one of his poems into Ibicenco as an exercise in composition.

Madrid Report

Details Arranged for Return of Ibañez' Ashes to Valencia

PLANS for the removal of the remains of Vicente Blasco Ibañez from Mentone, France, to Valencia have taken definite form following a visit to Madrid by the Valencian committee sponsoring the project.

After conferring with President Alcalá Zamora, Premier Azaña, Minister of State de los Rios, and other public leaders, the committee announced the event would take place late in October or early in November.

Battleships of the United States, France and Italy, as the three foreign countries where the works of the Spanish novelist were most appreciated, will escort a Spanish ship bearing the bones from the Cote d'Azur to Valencia. In Valencia a patriotic celebration will take place, commemorating Blasco Ibañez's work as a Republican leader as well as that as a novelist.

Plans have been laid for the construction of a large mausoleum for the late novelist on a site adjoining the Valencia cemetery. The mausoleum is to be of Valencian marble, and most of the best known Valencian scu!ptors and artists will help with its erection.

Mr. Frederick Pentland, who formerly played for the Blackburn Rovers, Birmingham, and Middlesborough, this week began his duties as football manager at the Athletic Club of Madrid. The Madrid club, which has not had much luck in recent years winning championships, signed up the veteran English trainer last spring

Last year Mr. Pentland was manager of the Athletic Club of Bilbao, which won the championship, for the fourth time under his guidance. During his twelve years as football manager in Spain, Mr. Pentland has coached ten international stars, among them Gorostiza, Cilaurren, and Roberto, who played for Spain against England at Highbury.

Don Agustin Velarde, head of the sección de in-

caja de 3 apósitos 0,95 ptus. SAHITARY Sold Everywhere in Spain

tervención y abastecimientos of the Ministry of Agriculture, left last week to represent Spain at the international wheat conference in London.

Since Spain does not have the grave wheat problem that some other countries do, he said, he will remain silent during the early part of the conference.

Spain is one of 29 wheat exporting and importing nations at the conference, the principal exporting countries being Canada, the United States, Australia and Argentina

Spain's annual wheat consumption, said Señor Velarde, amounts to 39,183,000 metric quintals, and the average annual production over the past ten years is 37,900,000 metric quintals. «Thus we must import some wheat every year, but I believe the Agrarian reform will soon enable us to intensify our production to the extent that this will be unnecessary,» he declared.

Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Mr. A.J. Drexel Paul, Jr., returned to Madrid Tuesday after a tour of southern Spain, and motored to San Sebastian, accompanied from Madrid by Mr. Rex Smith. From San Sebastian they proceeded to Paris, preparatory to sailing for the United States.

Mr. Roosevelt became an aficionado of the corrida in Spain, and could not resist attending a final bullfight at Bilbao before leaving the country. Several bulls were dedicated to him during his stay in Spain. At the Arias de la Reina ranch near Seville he was invited to try his hand with the cape, but friends dissuaded him, declaring the novillos looked too fierce. Mr. Richard Ford, United States Consul, expressed the belief that publicity the President's son would receive in the American press might be taken in the wrong light. Before leaving Seville, he drank a toast in manzanilla to his hosts.

Stamp vending machines will be installed in various parts of Madrid, it is announced by Don Serafin Ocon, Post Office director. One hundred fifty additional letter boxes will also be installed.

Among other improvements is to be the adoption of a system whereby newspapers may be mailed in packages by the publishers, instead of wrapped singly. Postal clerks will then distribute the newspapers according to a subscription list to be furnished them by the publishers

Other improvements, Señor Ocon said, are also in store for Madrid, and from Madrid the new plans will spread to other cities.

Ambassador Claude G. Bowers, Mrs. Bowers, and their daughter, Patricia, are spending their vacation at San Sebastian. The Ambassador plans to be in Barcelona for four or five days from Oct. 10, and hopes to attend the ceremonies at Valencia when the ashes of Ibañez are returned to that city.

The first Soviet Ambassador to Spain will be Lunacharsky, former comissar for education in the U.S.R.R.

Insularities

By Mildred Willis Harris

T is the latent instinct, born in every Spaniard, to try his hand at mastering a bull. You see it in the youngsters playing in the street who dart directly at your motor car, waving an old coat or a fragment of red cloth, and as you jam your brakes on suddenly, they execute intricate passes and dart back to safety in a sheltering doorway. You see them doing graceful capework before their dogs, their mules, or any other mobile object which, to their imaginations, represents a bull.

Not long ago a corrida was given in the old Roman amphitreatre at Alcudia, with the organizers taking part, to the amusement of their audience, as amateur toreros, and so successful was it that the backers planned a second, more elaborate, bullfight. Young bulls, novillos were ordered from the mainland, and to assure their good condition, they reached Alcudia some days before the fight was to take place, but so impatient were the local fans, that they stormed the corral and took possession of the bulls.

When the day scheduled for the fight arrived the impressarios, gleeful as small boys with a whole circus of their own, arrived with all their costumes and equipment. They were quite understandably annoyed to find the bulls that they had paid for were run ragged and their annoyance was increased when they discovered that the bull ring was completely filled by the gate-crashing populace so that there were no seats available for the cash customers who had come all the way from Palma for the fight.

But they still had one trump card in their hands. They said the fight was definitely off, and every-one... but most of all the impressarios themselves... were forced to go home disappointed.

Monopoly

There are three kinds of cigarettes in Palma.... those made in Spain and sold at government estancos; those that are legally imported and consequently high in price; and contrabandos, brought in unblessed by the aduana. The latter class includes most of the popular brands of English and American tobacco.... as well as clever imitations of them made in Africa. Only the most discerning eye can tell which pack of Lucky Strikes was made by the American Tobacco Company and which, without so much as «By your leave!» flaunts a neat counterfeit of the familiar package.

What puzzles us is why it should be so much easier to buy the contrabandos than the cigarettes, for the monopoly of which the Spanish Government receives a goodish price. Yet more than once we have been forced to go from one estanco to another searching and searching for Canarios. And often, when we find them, they are stale or else the paper is so badly glued that they refuse to draw. The Spanish matches.... three lights to a box... are also part of the monopoly.

We can't help wondering if the Republic isn't a bit paternalistic in its attitude, and feels that if it makes it difficult enough, in time the country, as a man, will swear off smoking.

A Paying Pet

We know of one estanco which, whether they sell a lot of cigarettes or no, seems to be making lots of money. There is a white Spitz owned by the proprietor who, with his friendly ways, is a great favorite with the customers. When they come in to buy, he stands beside them with wagging tail. If, counting change, they drop a coin upon the floor and stoop to look for it, they rarely find it, because the dog is smart enough to run behind the counter after his pink, moist tongue has picked up the

The Way of the Transgressor

The penal problem on the Island is not so serious as in other places of its size. Spanish law enforcement is divorced from politics, so that the foreign malefactor finds that the appeal to influence, so potent in other lands, is unavailing here; the usual remedy for such a trouble maker is both quick and permanent — deportation.

There is no noise or fuss about the matter. The Governor investigates the charges carefully, and if he finds the person guilty, he is escorted to the boat and put aboard. The suspect may not even know he is suspected, but from the Governor's decision there is no appeal.

None of our friends have left yet in this manner, so that we don't know whether they are given time for farewell parties, explaining that important business takes them home....or whether they are forced to send back postals saying, «Sorry. old man, I didn't have a chance to say good-bye. My wealthy uncle has just had a stroke.

The idea that there may be sudden exits should strike a note of warning....like the Writing on the Wall. One day you're here, the next....you're gone. Life's like that. Pretty solemn on the whole.

INTEREST PERSONAL

The Misses Alice Michaud and Faith Lumley are back from a holiday spent in Andorra, a very peaceful vacation in the midst of what has been described to the world as revolution. The two young women found the tiny state singularly quiet after Mallorca, in spite of the disturbed state of politics. They saw the population discussing the situa-tion in the most animated manner; they saw the steel helmets of the French police, but there was nothing to interfere with complete rest and enjoyment of the beauties of the Pyrenean valleys.

Miss Helene de Marguerie and Mr. René The-beault were married Friday morning at eleven o'clock at the Juzgado Municipal in Palma and left at noon the same day for their wedding trip, which will take them to Ibiza. Later they will return to Mallorca to continue the practice of their respective professions. Miss Marguerie, who is twenty-three, is a photographer of considerable talent. She is the daughter of Mme. de Marguerie and the granddaughter of Mrs. Helen Blair Stein of Son Riera. Her husband, who is thirty-one, is a publicity designer and painter. Both are French citizens.

To the surprise of his friends, Clifford B. Harmon and his companion, Mrs. Elliot Paul, left unexpectedly last Monday night on the Barcelona boat. They were on their way to France.

Weather being what it is, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Williams have shut their tearooms, The Rendezvous, in Terreno for a breath of cool air in a less peopled part of the Island.

Miss Frances Wharton of Philadelphia, who arrived on the SS. Exeter early in August, is staying with her sister, Mrs. Muñoz, and her niece, Mrs. Nell at S' Ermita in Genova. Miss Wharton expects to return to America on the Exochorda which sails from here September 23rd.

Mrs. Peter Colefax, daughter-in-law of Sir Arthur and Lady Sybil Colefax, who are spending a holiday in Formentor, was the house guest of the American pianist, George Copeland, last week. She sailed yesterday.

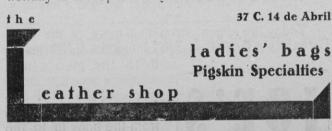

The Dunluce Castle took on sixty-six passengers, all but three of them booked for London, when she called here Friday. The greater part of them were teachers and professional folk returning to England after holidays in Mallorca.

The Misses Clara L. Hays, Alice Schwartz and Sarah Shapiro were destined for Gibraltar.

Among the departures were Mrs. Harold Jenkin, wife of the former official of the Gas y Electricidad, and Mrs. and Miss Firbanks, wife and daughter of Mr. Harry Firbanks of the same company. The passenger list also included Dr. and Mrs. H.P. Warren, Dr. Evelyn McPherson, Mr. W.A. Richards, Mr. and Mrs Robert McCrea, Lt. Col. E.H. Norman, Mr. and Mrs. H.F.C. Southey, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Stamer Gubbins, Major and Mrs. H.S. Goodwin, Dr. and Mrs. E.F. Armstrong and Miss Armstrong, Capt. and Mrs. S.H. Owen, Mrs. E.M. Roxburgh, Mr. H.L. Roxburgh, Mrs. M. Speed, Mr. and Mrs. Mr. H.L. Roxburgh, Mrs. M. Speed, Mr. and Mrs. Albert F. Valentine and Mr. Stafford Leake.

Mr. and Mrs. Chanter arrived from Genoa on the Dunluce Castle.

Mr. and Mrs. S.C.R. Gauntlett of No. 17 Dos de Mayo, Terreno, have departed for a fortnight's holiday in the Spanish Pyrenees.

Having tried it and liked it, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Davies will make their home here for some time to come. They have lived at an hotel the first six months of their stay, and will start housekeeping the first of October. They have rented Santa Rita No. 6, Terreno.

Mallorca continues to attract architects, and the reason's not hard to guess. They come by boat from America and they come by air from France, but the greatest number come from Germany and Austria. The latest to look over the Island with an eye to the future is Herr Adolf Steiner, a native of Vienna. He has studied the place carefully and says that when he returns in a couple of months he will probably concentrate on the southern end of Mallorca to work out the plans he is perfecting for a garden city,

Mr. J. Crabtree, manager of the Villa Thea, is spending a week or so in England. Meanwhile the Villa is crowded, many visitors there as in other places remaining in Mallorca beyond their expected terms. Among the new guests in the pension are Miss Couper of Edinburgh and Miss McPherson of London.

Professor Ogden, an eminent psychiatrist, left for Barcelona Thursday night after a holiday of some days in Mallorca. He had been staying at the Victoria. New arrivals at the Victoria this week were Miss B. Knowles, Mrs. Sonbwan, Mr. A. Bradshaw and Mr. Alan Sylva.

San Agustin's annual fiesta takes place today and Dr. Jaime Rover and Don Pedro Bosch are taking a large party to see the fun, especially the local dancing. Among the guests will be Mr. and Mrs. H. Davies, Mrs. W. Dean, Mrs. Doris Cameron and the Messrs. Harry and Frank Shute.

Today the annual swimming meet of the Club Barbara will be held, with a number of entries in

Mme. Dorogni and her son are returning to their home in Budapest, leaving on Tuesday. Mme. Dorogni is the daughter of Mrs. Helen Blair Stein of Son Riera and a sister of Mme. Marguerie.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Weguelin have gone to inaugurate the Hotel Costa d'Or at Lluch Alcari, the new hotel's first guests. Mr. Weguelin is a well known English character actor. His uncle, Mr. Bernard Wcguelin, and Mr. Blundell sailed for England on the Ussukuma yesterday.

Among the passengers who sailed on the Exeter on Saturday were Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Wilkins of Raxa, one of the show places of Mallorca. They had booked passage several times on previous boats of the Line but Mrs. Wilkins health would not permit them to travel. She has been very ill this season, and when they finally did depart, the only accomodations available were in the ship's hospital.

Mrs. Ivé Washburn and her young son, Larry, are making ready to leave for America next week. After she has placed Larry in a school over there, Mrs. Washburn will probably return to her home in Porto-Pi. Her plans include a flying trip up to Paris where she also has a residence. However, she has not occupied her house in the French capital for nearly two years.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fawkes of Genova are trying to sell their house, as they have taken a notion that the Virgin Islands would be a pleasant place to live for a time.

Mediterraneo's Sick List

Mrs. Edith Bulson has been confined to her room for a week as a result of an infected bite from a fly. She is under the care of Dr. Porcel.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Fay and their small daughter will make their home at the Mediterraneo for the present, but they intend to take up permanent residence here and are looking for a villa. Mr. Fay is interested in a huge real estate development project under consideration by outside interests. He has had vast experience in this field, for he was extremely active in the Florida boom when that was at its height.

Mrs. J. L. Essen who expected to go to the Hotel Victoria when she arrived the other day, for she had booked her room long in advance, is now comfortably settled at the Mediterraneo. There was some misunderstanding about the booking she made at the former hostel and when she got there, found that the reservation had been alloted to someone else. She plans to remain here for a long visit and will stay at the Mediterraneo until she

Other arrivals during the past week were Marguerite Conyne who has arrived from the United States, W. R. G. Duane of New York, Alison Burbridge, Patricia and Alfred Burbridge from Scotland, Mlle. Paulette Marrey from France, and Marie Harris from London.

Verbena

A very succesful verbena was held in the Pension Moncada on Thursday night, so many of the foreign colony desiring to come that many were turned away for lack of space. It is said the Pension will repeat these affairs weekly in future.

Dancer Makes a Hit

Marie Trini's popularity as a Spanish dancer and entertainer promises to gain in popularity to the point where she will have to make a series of return engagements at Los Pinos where she appeared last night for the first time. The new orchestra at this popular outdoor dance place added much to the success of the evening and the originality of the clothes of some of the patrons helped

The Mallorquin dancers carried off their part of the program with honors and applause, and the management has promised a series of such divertisement during the season. One of the attractions scheduled for the near future is the appearance at Los Pinos of a popular tango dancer from Madid.

Mallorquin Mansion

The fame of Antonio Maura as a political leader of Spain has somewhat obscured that of his brother, the painter, but the works of the latter won some attention in his own day and a good many of them are to be seen now in the home which he built for himself forty years ago.

At that time Porto Pi was considered a most desirable suburb for summer villas, and Maura acquired probably the most picturesque site of all. His home, a typical pile of late nineteenth century architecture, adjoins the Torre de Pelaires, a tall block tower which dates to the earliest days of the Reconquest. Porto Pi was for hundreds of years the shipping center of the Island, and this tower was built on the headland nearest Palma. Its twin, now surmounted by the Porto Pi lighthouse, was at need connected with the Torre de Pelaires by a heavy chain which closed the port to enemy ships.

With this national monument towering above the roof, the Maura house was built in somewhat less graceful proportions, and the family lived in it for years. Recently it has been taken over by a Swiss couple, and, as the Pension Porto Pi, this typically Mallorquin mansion is now run on Swiss lines.

The furniture is that of the wealthy Island families of recent years, and on the walls are numerous examples of Maura's paintings, in a style entirely distinctive of the era in which he worked. His landscapes are never grand or striking; a secluded nook was his favorite subject. In the great dining room they seem to regard themselves complacently in an enormous mirror on the opposite wall.

Fiesta

This week-end the principal regional fiesta is that of Felanitx, traditionally the most lavish and magnificent in the way of fireworks that the Island can boast.

The park in which the celebrations will be held has been fitted up with dance floor, illuminations and so on. There will be a builfight (novillos) on Sunday. Another feature of the fiesta will be the dancers from Alaró known as Els Cossiers, who dance the typical steps of their own district. There will be special service of autobuses today and tomorrow from Palma, and Felanitx will be gay with peasants from all the surrounding countryside in their best clothes and with their carts handsomely decorated.

Other local fiestas this week-end are at Son Servera, Son Ferriol, El Molinar de Levante, and Consell.

Strike a la Mallorquina

The mason's strike in Palma continues, and while negotiations are under way for a settlement, the numerous building operations have been suspended. There have been no signs of disorders in connection with the strike, which has one distinctive feature. The men are not idle. Work is at a standsill only in Palma and environs, and most of the masons have taken their tools and moved temporarily to other parts of the Island, where builders are blessing the strike since it permits them to fill the ranks caused by a shortage of workmen.

Among those who have benefited has been the Hotel Canyamel near the Caves of Artá which has been able to put a number of additional men to work, at least until the Palma strike is settled.
