ON THE ISLAND

H. E. Don Juan Manent Victory, Civil Governor of the Balearics, left on Monday night for Madrid. He expects to be away for about ten days on official business, which includes that of finding a new home for the Gobierno Civil in Palma.

During the Governor's absence Don Cecilio Garcia Morales, President of the Audiencia, is acting as temporary head of the civil administration of the Province.

DEPARTURES;—

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. N. Lang left on Tuesday to return to England. They let fall a hint of the possibility of their visiting Mallorca again, but have made no definite plans as yet.

Mr. Lang is the brother of the Archbishop of Canterbury. He is also a keen amateur painter, and produced some quite notable sketches of Palma and Ibiza during his stay in the Balearics.

Another homing bird is Lieut.-Commander Naill Griffin, who left on the Union Castle boat for Marseilles en route for England.

FROM ENGLAND;—

Mr. Percival Barnett arrived on Thursday from England on board the Llandoverly Castle. He is staying his brother, Mr. Olaf Barnett (Bobby to his friends), at the latter's cliffside house just off the Plaza Gomila.

CENTAURS;—

Quite a large crowd gathered at Palma Nova the other day for the equestrian contest in which Señores Socías, Vich, Montis. B. and P. Ramonell, Truyols, Montis Ruiz, Coll San Simón and Mr. Burgess took part.

The riders took their mounts in creditable fashion over various assorted jumps before the critical eyes of a jury presided over by General Pou (cavalry, rtd.), Señores Socías, Truyols and Vich riding two horses each. Señor Socías took first and third places, Señor Ramonell (B.) and Mr. Burgess taking third and fourth places respectively.

Señor Socías also tied with Señor Coll San Simón in the high jump test which followed. General Goded, Military Commander of the Balearics, presented trophies to the winners.

ODYSSEY;—

Mr. Ashley T. Day, the New England Odysseus, will be off on his travels again by the time these lines are read. He is due to leave on Saturday for London, where he intends to spend a week or two renewing his acquaintance with old haunts before going on to Oxford. He will be in residence at the home of lost causes next term, adding to that store of learning which the happy pedagogue imparts to his pupils back at home when not savouring the delights of travel.

AND ADVENTURE;—

Mr. Day's passing will be regretted by his neighbours in El Tetreño and boon companions in Palma. His recent adventures, however, suggest that it may be well for him to flit before some worse thing befalls him.

For example, there was the time he fell asleep in the sun on his terrace clad in a pair of trunks, and awoke without them. Mr. Day thinks there must have been a moth in the house, but his first propounding of that theory was greeted with raucous and vulgar laughter by his audience.

And then there was the episode of the black dog. But that is territory on which the Wayfarer dare not tread, as it has already been preempted by his colleague, El Gancho.

GERMANY'S AIR EXPANSION

DEBATE IN THE COMMONS

LONDON, Saturday

A special debate on the European situation has been fixed for next Thursday in the House of Commons, and in it attention will be concentrated on the air position with regard to Germany.

The rapid aerial expansion of that country is known to be one of the British Government's chief preoccupations. It is reported that activity behind the scenes in Whitehall is concerned specifically with revised plans for meeting the situation caused by that development.

The Government, it is learned, fully intends to implement its pledge that it will not accept a position of inferiority in the air to any country within striking distance of Britain's shores, while regretting that Germany's action has made such expansion necessary.

The Premier's recent article on Germany in the «News Letter», the official organ of the National Labour Party, has provoked the most diverse comment both here and abroad. The greatest surprise, however, is the moderate language used by the semi-official German paper Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz.

«Although Mr. MacDonald's many years efforts for peace have failed, he nevertheless considers himself Europe's peacemaker,» declares the semi-official paper, «and as such turns to Germany to mete out to her a carefully weighed measure of censure and encouragement.»

«MacDonald,» continues the Korrespondenz, «protests that he is not approaching the matter in the 'mind of Versailles', but his essential arguments are nevertheless those of a politician aiming to maintain the status created by Versailles.»

«It will be recalled that MacDonald signed the sensational English White Book of March 1, which already then—before the

SILVER BOOM

EFFECT ON INDIAN CURRENCY

LONDON, Saturday

The bullion market here was swamped with orders for silver yesterday in consequence of the boom in that metal, which has aroused speculative interest on a worldwide scale.

The result was a delay of some hours in fixing prices. The price, in spite of heavy sales by speculators, was forced up to 3s. a quarter-ounce.

This is the highest recorded since 1922. The London quotation was well ahead of that in New York, and equivalent to 77.57 cents.

No estimate can be formed of the daily silver turnover, which is a closely guarded secret. The only criterion is the activity of the bullion market, and at the moment this is such that bullion merchants are finding their resources severely taxed to keep pace with it.

American press critics point out that if the metal rises to 105 cents, with the silver bloc endeavouring to raise it to 129 cents, the melting down of Indian and Mexican silver coinage will follow.

Such a development would be a strong temptation for the countries concerned to place their coinages on a silver basis. That would tend to stabilise the high price of the metal, which is precisely the object desired by the silver standard bloc.

On the other hand, there would

RECORD ATTEMPT FAILURE

MASSED FLIGHT AT HENDON

NEW AIRWAY

LONDON, Saturday

Miss Jean Batten, the young New Zealand airwoman who is flying from Australia to London, has been held up at Marseilles.

She will therefore not break the record for a solo flight by a woman on this route, which she set up last year, as had been anticipated.

Miss Batten left Rome early yesterday morning and made a good landing at Marignan airport, near Marseilles. When taking off for the final stage of her long flight one of the tyres of her aeroplane burst.

Repairs were carried out, but the aviatrix was forced to land again on her second attempt, certain engine adjustments being necessary. She is expected to continue her flight to London today.

The biggest «fly past» of aeroplanes ever seen in the London area will be the culminating feature of this year's Royal Air Force display at Hendon on June 29. Nearly 100 machines of all types will take part in the massed flight, which will be an impressive finale to a series of events in which 200 aircraft, drawn from more than

«THE FIRST WORLD WAR» AT RIALTO

«The First World War» (Los Ultimos 20 Años), now showing at the Rialto cinema, is the most powerful screen sermon possible against war, mainly because it does not preach.

It consists entirely of actual news and documental films, edited by the Fox corporation to form a continuous and unlagging account of the events of the Great War. Its battles are real battles in which men are seen being really killed and wounded.

The earliest shots, black and white and flickery as early films were, are mainly concerned with military parades and royal ceremonies, and convey admirably the warlike spirit which prevailed in most countries of Europe in 1914. Touches of humour are provided at this stage by the dresses and automobiles of the period and by the breathless speed at which shots of marching men are rushed through.

There is nothing funny about the war itself, which is seen in all its phases, on land, at sea and in the air. Newspaper front pages with staring headlines are used with effect to outline the major events of the struggle, and kings and presidents, statesmen, generals, admirals, air aces and revolutionary leaders defile against the background of destruction.

The depressing moral of it all is hammered home in the final kaleidoscopic sequence, in which, after the rejoicings of Armistice Day, one sees Herr Hitler, Signor Mus-

BOOK AND PICTURE EXHIBITIONS AT THE COSTA GALLERIES

COUNT KESSLER'S FINE EDITIONS FROM WEIMAR ART PRESS

Count Harry Kessler and the Associació per la Cultura de Mallorca were responsible for the exhibition of modern artistic printing held at the Costa Galleries this week, beginning on Tuesday.

The books shown are the work of the Cranach press at Weimar, in which Count Kessler is interested. Apart from their value as examples of typographical art, they are given an added interest by the illustrations.

Gordon Craig, of whose work the Count is a keen admirer, and Aristide Maillol are responsible for most of the woodcuts which adorn the nobly printed pages. The text is mostly classical, English, French and German translations and bilingual editions of Virgil's Eclogues and Georgics and of the Odyssey taking a prominent place.

There were also on view an edition of the poems of Hugo von Hofmannsthal in handsome, clear Latin type with red titles and initials, and German translations of Hamlet and of the Song of Songs to which the same adjectives apply. The Song of Songs was open at a remarkably fine woodcut, the authorship of which it was impossible to identify.

The absence of a catalogue and of signatures in the cuts, indeed, made it frequently impossible to determine the identity of the open books or the language of the closed ones. The first omission might perhaps have been remedied, but the sense of frustration aroused in booklovers by the sight of volumes they cannot handle is inseparable from exhibitions of this sort.

The right place for books, of course, is on the bookshelf and not in a glass case, and it is to be feared that those who visited Costa's this week came out filled with envy, hatred, malice and all uncharitableness. Nevertheless they are indebted to Count Kessler and the Associació per la Cultura for an exciting glimpse of what can be done when writer and artist conspire with the printer and binder to fuse all their arts and crafts into a harmonious whole.

Also on view at Costa's during the whole of the week was an exhibition of paintings by the Spanish artist Don Juan Fuster.

Fish—dead ones, not the living inhabitants of an aquarium—are generally more attractive on a plate than on a canvas. Señor Fuster, however, has used them with effect in two of his still lifes, the one «in blues» and the one «in reds». In the latter a copper pot and a vase with crimson flowers help out the cleverly caught iridescence of certain creatures, known by sight but not by name to the present writer, which combine the colour of the well known salmonete of these waters with a magnificent array of spines.

The «Still Life in Whites», however, is definitely the best of the three. In it the artist has limited his means of expression with the utmost rigour, and by thoughtful economy has extracted from them the last ounce of variety and interest.

The same comment applies to the seascape entitled «Mañana Invernal», a winter morning scene of pale sunlight breaking through clouds over Palma Bay. The sea in varying moods is also the subject of three pictures painted in Andraitx, numbered 7, 8 and 9 in the catalogue, and depicting similar scenes under the afternoon sun, at nightfall and in the early morning.

No artist in Mallorca fails to come under the influence of the dazzling light and lavish colours of the Island scenery, which use all their wiles to betray him into producing admirable posters and picture postcards. Señor Fuster's way of facing this temptation is to be studied in such landscapes as the Valldemosa almond blossom picture and «Adiós al Día», which shows Sóller framed in orange trees against a mountain background aglow in the sunset.

Of the two portraits in the show, the more notable is that of the late Don José Socias Gradolí, commissioned by the City Council and destined to hang in the gallery of Illustrious Sons of Mallorca in the City Hall. The veteran notary is depicted standing, in his robe of office, with a law book under his arm. The head is particularly well portrayed.

BOOK DAY SCENES IN BARCELONA

POLICE CHECK ON SMALL BOYS

BRISK SALES

The Fiesta of the Book in Barcelona was celebrated on Tuesday by every bookshop and bookseller in the city. Before every bookshop stalls were erected on the pavement, and on them books were displayed for all tastes at the special ten per cent discount which held good throughout the day.

Most of the stalls were gaily decorated, garlands of flowers mingling with the signs proclaiming the Fiesta. Customers in every section of the city and at every bookstall were numerous.

The most intense activity was naturally centred on the Ramblas, where the display of flowers for once gave way to other items for sale. On the Ramblas numerous independent stalls were set up, and there too business was good.

Biggest of all the crowds was that collected around one large stall which not only specialised in Mickey Mouse books and pictures, but offered free a coloured Infantil comic paper of the adventures of Mickey to all comers.

All classes and ages joined the long line which extended for a considerable distance and slowly shuffled forward to receive the paper, greybeards in back of children, ladies of quality elegantly dressed following bootblacks and ditch-diggers in the line.

So numerous was the crowd intent on getting something for nothing for the kiddies that several Guardias de Asalto, rifles slung on their backs in a business-like manner, assisted in keeping order and even going to most unusual lengths to see that everything was done in a proper manner.

The lengths to which they went included the careful frisking or searching of urchins in line as they approached the stall. A quick pat of the front of the sweaters of the kids by the Guardias assured the blue-coated men that no copies of the free paper previously obtained were concealed on their persons. Thus was honesty safeguarded, even though the stern guardians of the law were forced to reach way down in order to accomplish their task.

As far as can be learned, no youthful «repeaters» were sent to jail, although one or two were severely and publicly admonished and paddled on that portion of the anatomy on which such action would do the most good.

From the standpoint of the urchins as well as of the more sedate and older public, the Fiesta of the Book in Barcelona was a success in spite of the rain which came at intervals in the afternoon, and caused a hasty closing of the stalls until the sun shone again.

HISTORY OF BALEARICS IN EXHIBITION OF SOCIEDAD ARQUEOLOGICA

VOLUMES RECALLING BRITISH RULE IN NEIGHBOURING ISLAND

An exhibition of books of extreme interest was opened at the museum of the Sociedad Arqueológica Luliana at Calle Almudaina, 8 on Tuesday, and will be open until April 30 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 4 to 6 p.m.

All the works displayed are concerned with the history of the Balearic Islands. They have been contributed by private book-lovers in Palma and other centres and by the official archives of Mahón and Ibiza.

Of special interest to English residents are those volumes which concern the British occupation of Menorca. There is one, for example, which was published in London in 1773.

It is a report of the proceedings in an action brought by «Anthony Fabrigas, gent.» against «Lieutenant-General John Mostyn, Governor of the Island of Minorca, Colonel of the First Regiment of Dragoon Guards and Groom of His Majesty's Bed-Chamber,» for false imprisonment and banishment from Menorca to Cartagena in Spain. The case was tried before Mr. Justice Gould in the Court of Common Pleas at the Guildhall, London, on July 13, 1773.

Other British officers whose deeds are recalled in the aged tomes reposing in the glass cases of the Museum are the unfortunate Admiral Byng and «El Excmo. Señor Almirante Don Juan Leake». The conditions which the Conde de Alcudia, Viceroy and Captain General of the Kingdom of Mallorca, demanded for the surrender of Palma, and Admiral Leake's reply to the Viceroy's communication, are set forth in two volumes placed side by side in the same case.

A «History of the Island of Minorca», by John Armstrong, Esq., Engineer in Ordinary to His Majesty, is another English book in the exhibition. There are laid out in a row the first edition, published in Dublin in 1761, the second corrected edition published in London in the same year, a French translation of the latter published in Amsterdam in 1769, and a Spanish translation which saw the light in Mahón in 1930.

The various occupations of the neighbouring island by foreign powers are studied from the point of view of international law in «Les Occupations Militaires de l'Île de Minorque pendant les Guerres de l'Ancien Droit», by M. Irénée La Meire of the University of Lyons, which is also on exhibition. A grimmer note is struck by studies of Don F. Hernández Sureda on the French and British cemeteries in Mahón.

All that is in the section devoted especially to Menorca. There is also an Ibiza section, and other devoted to general history, church history, biography, genealogy and heraldry, the history of particular periods and events, that of towns and districts. Such places as Pollensa and Felanitx, for example, have their own histories, and so has the island of Cabrera.

Among the works of religious interest the attention is attracted by an account of the life of Fray Junipero Serra, the Franciscan from Petra, Mallorca who considered the true founder of San Francisco and of the civilisation of California. It is by Brother Ripper's disciple F. Palou, written when the author was head of an important religious house in Mexico City and published there in 1787.

The depressing story of the «Jews, or Christianised Jews of Mallorca», is recalled by an undated, evidently earlier volume. It contains the text of a counter-petition to a petition made by them to the Lords of the Council regarding their situation.

The counter-petition asks that the descendants of Jews be granted the equality which they enjoyed with the «good Men of the Kingdom of Mallorca», and that the statutes barring them from public office and from membership of the Guilds be maintained. The request for maintenance of the old custom is backed by the City, the Cathedral Chapter, and the University of Palma.

The opening of the exhibition which includes books in Spanish, Mallorquin, English, French, German and Latin, coincided with the Day of the Book, the annual occasion when booksellers drop their prices by twenty per cent and open-air book mart occupies the pavement of the Plaza de Cortes. It is as worthy of the day as last year's exhibition of Mallorquin Renaissance books, likewise organised by the Sociedad Arqueológica Luliana.

TWO WEEKEND CONCERTS

CHOPIN & LIEDER

Don Bartolomé Calatayud and Don Jaime Roig are the artists who are billed to appear in a concert at 6:30 p.m. today at the Almudaina Palace.

Señor Calatayud, the guitarrist, is one of the few Mallorquins who have reached the first rank of performers on that instrument, and likewise one of the few musicians of the Island whose fame extends beyond the borders of Spain. Today's concert will be a guitar recital, with piano accompaniment by Señor Roig.

The programme includes a number of the works which Señor Calatayud has rendered with such success abroad, and also two compositions which are very rarely heard.

They are a suite—entitled a Diapertissement—by Weber, and a Sonatina by Diabelli. Both compositions were originally written for guitar and piano, as they will be rendered today.

Señor Calatayud's most recent triumphs on foreign concert platforms were in Switzerland and Toulouse. His performance in the French city won him high praise from the important newspaper La Dépêche de Toulouse, as well as a festival organised in his honour by the La Palladienne society. Tickets for the recital are to be obtained at the Almudaina Palace between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. and between 4 and 7 p.m. Although it is not a Capella Clássica concert subscribers to the Capella will be admitted on the same terms as if it were.

A Chopin concert in which the members of the Trio de Mallorca and Mrs. Alice Weitzen will take part is scheduled to take place today in the cell supposed to have been occupied by the Polish composer in the monastery at Valldemosa, to commemorate the 125th anniversary of his birth.

The programme opens with the Trio in G minor, Opus N.º 8, by the Trio, and closes with the Twelve Preludes, Opus N.º 28, by the notable pianist Don J. Mas Porcel. Mrs. Weitzen will sing a number of Polish Lieder—the kind of song in which she excels—and Don Jesús Quintana, the 'cellist of the Trio, will play the Largo from the Sonata Opus N.º 65.

A special bus service from Palma has been arranged in connection with the concert. Tickets for both bus and concert can be obtained at Borne, 38.

THE HOLY GRAIL, PRIZED POSSESSION OF THE CATHEDRAL OF VALENCIA

STRANGE HISTORY OF SACRED VESSEL FAMED IN LEGEND AND OPERA

VALENCIA, Saturday

Valencia, which celebrated Holy Week and Easter this year with the same fervour as other cities of Spain, stands out above them all, even Seville, as the guardian of the Holy Grail.

The ancient chalice traditionally identified with that used at the Last Supper has a bowl of cornelian about the size and shape of half an orange, a slightly larger base of the same shape and material, and a gold stem and handles of simple and elegant workmanship. It is kept in the old chapter house of Valencia Cathedral, and how it came there is a curious story.

The Grail, preserved by Saint Peter, was the object of veneration at Jerusalem, Antioch and Rome during the earliest times of Christianity. It remained in Rome until the year 261.

Pope Sixtus II ordered its removal in that time of persecution. Fearing that the sacred relic might be lost or desecrated, he charged Lawrence the Deacon, afterwards Saint Lawrence and at that time keeper of the treasures of the Church, to place it in safe keeping.

Lawrence was from Osca, now Huesca, in Upper Aragon. He had the Grail taken to his native city and placed in one of its churches, dedicated to Saint Peter.

Saint Peter's Monastery at Siresa, near Huesca, is also declared by some chroniclers to have kept the Grail. Certain it is that it passed to Sesabe, Bailo and Jaca, the tiny Pyrenean city which was the first capital of the nascent kingdom of Aragon, before finding a resting place at San Juan de la Peña.

The withdrawal of the sacred vessel towards the Pyrenees coincided with the conquering advance of the Moors, and was due at each stage to the desire to keep it from profanation by the Moslems. San Juan de la Peña corresponded with their high water mark, and there it remained during the ebbing of the tide.

San Juan de La Peña is generally recognised nowadays as the Montsalvat of Wagner's «Parsifal», though it has a rival in the Catalan monastery of Montserrat, near Barcelona. Certainly no safer or more impressive place could have been chosen for the preservation of such a treasure.

The Aragonese abbey is partly built on a rocky shelf in the side of the mountain from which it takes its name, and partly excavated in the hillside. Its ancient Romanesque cloister has never had a roof, for it is amply protected by the overhanging wall of rock behind the monastery, in the crevices of which eagles nest.

Audobert, Bishop of Huesca, himself bore the relic to the monastery and gave it into the hands of the Abbot. The abbots of San Juan used it in celebrating Mass until the year 1399.

Meanwhile the crown of Aragon had passed from insignificance to glory. The union of the kingdom with the County of Barcelona had produced a force which drove the Moors out of Saragossa and Teruel and added to the Aragonese Empire—for such it must be called—the kingdoms of Mallorca, Valencia and the Two Sicilies.

One day in 1399 Anthony, Bishop of Athens, climbed the steep path leading to San Juan de la Peña, which tourists must still tackle on foot or on muleback, leaving their cars or buses in the village at the foot of the hill. The Bishop came as the representative of Martin the Humane, the last of the Catalan kings of Aragon, and his mission was to obtain the Holy Grail for the royal chapel.

The negotiations were long and difficult. The Abbacy was vacant, and the Prior was unwilling to surrender the relic without orders from his ecclesiastical superiors. There was much going and coming of riders on the hillside path.

Finally all was arranged, and Prior Bernardo carried the precious vessel to Saragossa, where he handed it to King Martin. He received in exchange a magnificent chalice from the palace treasury, resplendent with gold and enamel and precious stones, which the Abbey was pledged never to sell or alienate.

The Grail remained in the royal chapel in the Palace of the Aljaferia in Saragossa for thirty-three years. At the end of that time King Martin sent it to his chapel in Barcelona, where its presence is attested by an inventory of the jewels of the crown of Aragon, drawn up in 1410 after Don Martin's death.

King Alfonso V sent all the jewels and relics which he inherited to Valencia, and the Grail remained in the palace here from 1424 to 1437. In the latter year Juan II, King of Navarre and Governor of Aragon and Valencia, donated the revered relic of the Passion to Valencia Cathedral, and there it remains.

AIR CONTEST IN MADRID

TO PICK 'PLANE FOR ARMY

SPANISH DESIGNS

MADRID, Saturday

A competition of great importance for the future of aviation in Spain, which has been going on unpublicised for many weeks at Cuatro Vientos aerodrome, is now drawing to its close, and the results are expected to be announced here on Tuesday.

The object of the contest, which is organised by the army air force, is to select a suitable training 'plane for future army pilots. Its importance lies in the condition which requires the chosen machine to be of Spanish design and construction.

There are plenty of aeroplanes built in Spain under foreign patents. The army, however, wishes to be independent of manufacture under licence.

The winner of the competition will be rewarded with an order for 100 machines, as well as a cash prize of 200,000 pesetas. There are further prizes of 50,000, 30,000 and 20,000 pesetas.

Each competitor had to provide two machines, one of which was destined to be smashed in the course of laboratory and wind tunnel tests to see just how much of each kind of strain it could stand. They have all passed the tests with flying colours.

The duplicate machines are being tried out in the air. They must have a maximum speed of 150 and a minimum of 70 kilometres an hour, rise to 1,000 metres in not more than nine minutes, and land and take off in less than 100 and 150 metres respectively.

All those conditions have been both fulfilled and surpassed in the tests. It is understood that the competing machines have reached speeds approximating 200 kilometres an hour, taken off in a space of 50 metres, and so forth.

The competitors include a bi-plane made in the Hispano-Suiza works at Guadalajara, very like the well known British Tiger Moth, a low wing monoplane designed by the famous aviator Señor González Gil, and a tiny Adaro sesquiplane. There is also a Loring low wing cabin monoplane which is believed to have a future as a touring model.

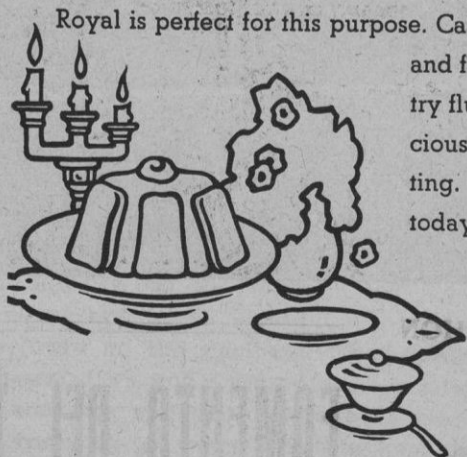

The result of the competition is expected to give a distinct fillip to the infant Spanish aviation industry. It is also regarded as a step towards the reequipment of the air force, whose magnificent pilots are at present greatly hampered by having to work with mainly old and superseded machines.

BALEARICS LISTED AMONG CHIEF SPY CENTRES OF EUROPE

SPAIN'S SUPPOSED PERIL SUBJECT OF ANONYMOUS ARTICLE

MADRID, Saturday

A map showing the islands of Mallorca, Menorca and Cabrera, with the shadow of an open hand stretching between the first two, the thumb hiding Ciadadela and the little finger Inca, is one of the exciting illustrations to an article on espionage in Spain published here by the weekly magazine Estampa.

The article, which is unsigned, purports to be by a foreign agent who has just settled an account with Spanish justice for some of his activities in this country. If one believes the author, the Iberian Peninsula is simply crawling with the secret agents of Britain, France, Italy and above all Germany.

The writer, who if he were not a spy would make an admirable writer of thrillers, mentions Barcelona, San Sebastián and the Balearic Islands as the chief haunts of this invisible army. Or rather armies, for he hints darkly at a grim struggle between rival bands each striving to gain the secrets and thwart the plans of the others.

Spain, he declares comfortingly, is not being spied upon. The country is merely being used as a convenient refuge from which to spread the net, and also to prepare revolutions and so forth abroad.

Hungary, it is pointed out, has enemies today because the assassins of the late King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia and M. Barthou prepared their crime on Hungarian soil. Spain, affirms the literary spy, may quite likely find herself in the same position one of these fine days.

He compares Spain to the owner of a café in which two strange customers have started a fight. The owner has no idea what it is all about, but he has to pay for the broken crockery.

The writer comes to the cheerful conclusion that nothing can be done about it all.

LABOUR DAY IN SPAIN

NATIONAL HOLIDAY ON MAY 1

NO PARALYSIS

Wednesday, May 1 will be a public holiday, in accordance with the custom of observing Labour Day in that manner which has been maintained since the establishment of the Republic in Spain.

It appears, however, that the cessation of labour will not amount to the almost complete paralysis both of business and pleasure, as in previous years. Shops will close, but cafés and restaurants will be open, and possibly cinemas as well.

The circular in which the Home Minister has instructed the Governors of Provinces on the observance of the holiday lays down that it should be a national holiday «like April 14, for example», and that the suspension of business is not to go further than on such occasions. Public services must be maintained at all costs.

Señor García Morales, the acting Governor, in communicating the text of the circular to the press, announced that the necessary steps would be taken to enforce its provisions in Palma and the rest of the Province.

EASTER SERVICES AT ENGLISH CHURCH WELL ATTENDED

VISIT OF VEN. DR. RAGG, ARCHDEACON OF GIBRALTAR

The sale held in Short's Tea Room on the morning of April 12 on behalf of the English Church realised 1,110 pesetas.

The church was fully attended on the morning of Palm Sunday, when the Ven. Dr. Ragg, Archdeacon of Gibraltar, was the special preacher. The offerings, devoted to the Gibraltar Diocesan Fund, amounted to 270 pesetas.

On Good Friday a special service was conducted by the Archdeacon. The offerings, ranking with those at the Lenten services amounted to 313 pesetas, and were on behalf of the Mediterranean Missions to Seamen.

On Easter Sunday there were again large congregations. The presence of the Archdeacon enabled him formally to dedicate the gifts which had been made by members of the church during the last two seasons, including those provided by the committee. Special mention was made of the fact that some had been given as permanent memorials of the deceased. Some gifts were seen for the first time this Eastertide, including a further series of benches for the north aisle, and the embroidered work enclosing the sanctuary.

Interesting excursions can be made to the neighbouring towns of George-town and Luis, which take their names respectively from George III of England and Louis XV of France. Ciadadela, formerly the capital of the Island, is also worth a visit with its fine cathedral, old houses, and quaint narrow streets.

Many prehistoric monuments, most of them still well preserved, show the skill of the islanders as builders in the Bronze Age. There are abundant opportunities of visiting these structures, some of which are unique, there being nothing similar to be found elsewhere in the world.

Out Of My Head
 by HARRY GALLAND

They haven't played baseball in Spain very long, but that doesn't mean they don't play it with enthusiasm. Very solemnly they announced in one of the evening newspapers that a local Barcelona team on the following Sunday morning would meet a Mexican team, and meet they did, in a sand lot surrounded by waving palm trees, tenements, and twenty yelling spectators.

The umpire took his place behind the pitcher, the team took the field, while the Mexican team's batter stepped to the plate with a confident air and the stump of a cigar between his lips.

On the sidelines a big Negro, coaching for the Mexicans until his turn to bat, shouted hoarse Spanish encouragement with an occasional «O.K., hombre, O.K.!» thrown in for good measure.

The umpire wasn't so sure about his decisions, but he was decidedly certain about how to call them. «Bol one,» he called when the pitcher missed the plate entirely or apparently had set out to maim and permanently injure the batter. The strikes and balls were called and counted in recognisable English, but the English was almost immediately inundated by a swift rush of Spanish and Catalan from the sideline coach, the teams, and the spectators, all together.

They made two runs in the first inning before the side was retired, but there was no discouragement noticeable anywhere. Why should there be, when an obliging fan disclosed that in the «baseybol» played regularly in Barcelona the scores ran to something like 83 to 67, more often than not. In fact, two runs in the first half of the first inning was just a rather slow beginning to the game.

Out in the field the Barcelona second baseman caught a fly ball with a lighted cigarette dangling from his lips and whipped it back in to the pitcher—who missed it. The Mexican with the cigar was up again, the cigar gone out by this time but still in position in the center of his face, just below his nose.

That cigar must have frightened the pitcher, who wound up elaborately for each pitch, then resumed his original pose and threw the ball. This time his pitch was caught fair and square and the Mexican with the cigar whammed it out between first and second base.

There was nobody on base at the moment, but it was time for a little excitement anyway. So the fans got up and relieved their lungs, while the Negro on the sidelines danced up and down and encouraged his lumbering teammate around the bases as he yelled for «Música! Música!» as if the runner were a matador who had just done excellent work at a bullfight, and was about to kill his bull. It was a home run, and the cigar came home too.

SPAIN, THE FAVOURITE MEETING PLACE OF WORLD CONGRESSES

AUTHORS AND LIBRARIANS TO FOLLOW OCEANOGRAPHERS

MADRID, Saturday
 Spain is rapidly becoming the favourite meeting place of international conferences of a learned or scientific character, no less than three of which are now in the news, following each other in rapid succession.

The Ibero-American Oceanographical Congress was held in Madrid this week. The countries represented in it included Great Britain, Canada and the United States, besides Spain and Portugal and their daughter nations on the American continent.

The assembled scientists discussed a great variety of marine matters, ranging from meteorology to fishery. Papers read to the Congress included one by Colonel Herrera, the Spanish aeronaut who is planning a stratosphere ascent, and another on the survey work which is being done in preparation for the boring of the tunnel under the Strait of Gibraltar.

The tenth International Congress of Authors is to open in Seville next Saturday, May 4, and continue until May 11. Mr. George Bernard Shaw will not be present as he has had to make a trip to South Africa, but Signor Pirandello and Signor Pedro Mascagni will attend, the latter as the representative of the composers of Italy.

The list of Spanish authors among the delegates is long and imposing, containing such names as Marquina, Benavente, Quintero and Muñoz Seca. France, Portugal, Germany, Great Britain, Austria, Italy, Denmark, Sweden and the Uruguay will also be represented.

The main business of the Congress is to decide on the proposals which the International Confederation of Authors' Societies is to make for the revision of the Berne Convention on copyright laws.

The delegates will wear a badge bearing the portrait of the great Spanish dramatist Lope de Vega, whose tercentenary is being celebrated this year. Lope will also be honoured at the International Congress of Librarians, which is to be held from May 20 to May 30.

The librarians' Congress will be a migratory affair, starting in Madrid and ending in Barcelona, after passing through Salamanca, Toledo, the Escorial and Seville. The famous library of the Escorial and the Biblioteca Colombina in Seville will receive special attention from the visitors.

The National Library here will hold a special exhibition of manuscripts of Lope de Vega's plays during the Congress. The Madrid Municipal Library will hold another of theatrical manuscripts of the Golden Age of the Spanish stage and of eighteenth century music, and the Municipal Archives have arranged to show documents relating to the history of the capital.

The delegates will include Doctor Thomas, who has charge of the Spanish books at the British Museum, Mr. Kumar Manondra of the Rai Mahassi in Calcutta and representative of the Library Association of India, and Monsignor Tisserand, librarian of the Vatican. Mr. Svensma, director of the Library of the League of Nations and Mr. Hu, director of the same body's International Chinese Library, also figure in the list, which includes also representatives of Germany, France, Holland, Belgium, Finland and Bolivia.

In Barcelona the congressmen will visit the Library of Catalonia and the Archives of the Crown of Aragon. In their formal sessions they will treat of such matters as popular libraries, special libraries, cooperation and the loan of books between different libraries and countries, and the libraries of Spain.

The popularity of Spain as the venue for such gatherings is explained both by the notable florescence which the intellectual life of the country has experienced in the last few decades, and by practical advantages. Learning and great wealth are not so commonly bedfellows that the cheapness both of living and of travelling in Spain can be ignored, and the more erudite the traveller, the better he generally is able to appreciate the beauties of Spain's countryside and historic cities.

And then, of course, there are not lacking wits in Madrid who see a strong contributory cause in the atmosphere of Spain, which is said to be more conducive to talk than that of other places. The café wits point to themselves as the proof of their assertion.

SHIP DELAYED

The Palma agents of the German-African Line announce that the Ussukuma has been held up for two days in her homeward voyage to Germany. She will therefore call at Palma on her way to Southampton and Hamburg on May 8, instead of May 6 as previously announced.

Intending passengers will be embarked at 11 a.m. on the new date from the steps by the new Customs House.

SOCIETY OF ARTS

The exhibition of art at the Mallorca Society of Arts, which was to have been closed yesterday, is being kept open today. The reason for the change in the arrangements was the popularity of the show, which decided the organisers to give those who have not yet visited it a further opportunity of doing so.

BY HOOK OR BY CROOK

*There once was a norrible mawf
 Wot id in the pants of a tawf.
 They reached to is knees
 When he lay down at ease,
 But when he woke up they were awf.*

The horrible tragedy related in the foregoing verses of The Post's tame Cockney poet actually took place on a terrace in El Terreno, and is an awful warning against sunbathing without first taking the precaution of scattering a sufficient quantity of camphor balls about the place. About half a kilo would do the trick, I fancy.

On the other hand, I can think offhand of no effectual remedy against another adventure which befell the luckless sunbather in question during the course of the week.

The intimacies of the home, of course, are sacred to every journalist who attempts to uphold the high standards of his profession, but the Terreno-ite who so disastrously discovered the inordinate appetites of Mallorquin moths should be on the high seas by the time the public seizes avidly on this account of his misfortunes, and he is not a very large man anyway. So here goes.

The Terreno-ite had a merry evening with some friends one day last week. Nothing coarse or riotous, you understand, but just a spot of good clean fun in pleasant company. He remembers everything quite clearly up to a point, but after that there is a sort of hiatus.

His next memory is of walking along the street that leads to his erstwhile home. With him was a black dog.

He is quite definite on that point. There was the dog, and it was quite black. Where it came from, or why it chose to appoint itself as his bodyguard, he has no idea.

The dog followed him home and into his bedroom, where it made itself comfortable on the bed. The householder likewise prepared for slumber.

When he was ready to climb between the sheets, however, he encountered unexpected opposition from the dog. It bared its teeth, growled fearsomely, and showed its determination to defend its illicit gains to the last.

All blandishments were unavailing, and the hapless Terreno-ite was compelled to spend the night on the mat, while the intruder slept the sleep of the unjust on his downy couch.

What I want to know, however, is what the authorities intend doing about it. If black dogs are to steal people's beds, and moths eat their trousers off them with impunity, I can see Mallorca becoming about as popular as the man who forgot to take the tin-opener to the picnic.

El Gancho

ON THE ISLAND

-- By The Wayfarer --

FROM FRANCE;—

M. Pradal of the University of Toulouse and of Albi (Tarn), arrived on Tuesday from Valencia at the head of a party of French professors and teachers hailing from places as far apart as from the Jura and Haute Savoie to the Basses Pyrénées and from Pau to Clermont-en-Argonne.

M. Pradal is an enthusiastic lover of Mallorca, and for several years has paid the island an annual visit, always as leader of a party of his colleagues in the teaching profession in France. This time they stayed four days, and used them to visit Bellver Castle, Palma and the coast as far as Ca's Catalá, the Caves of Manacor, Sóller and Valldemosa, and Formentor and Pollensa.

COLLEAGUES;—

The party included Mles. Cordeaux, Jacques, Janton, Gran-Clément, Murati, Champagne, Guenot, Sonnet, Clemenceau, Guittin, Cullie, Biçon, Vuillet, Cazabonne and Duchene. M. Pradal's male colleagues who joined him in the expedition were MM. Cordeau, Janton, Gramont, Vanvincq and Nourrit.

WEDDING;—

The first international wedding in a long time was held in Palma last Thursday, when the noted young barrister, Don Francisco Xabrow and just settling down to a solitary manzanilla. «He looked anything but gubernatorial,» adds the report, «and too harassed to bother with questions in broken and badly bent Spanish as to why he was in Barcelona, and if so how known to most members of the foreign colony as the property of Miss Joy Peterson was parked last week outside the Hotel Colón,» adds the message from Barcelona. Our correspondent does not mention seeing Miss Peterson herself and we give the report with the natural reserve inspired by an observer to whom one small Swedish flag looks plural.

PAINTER;—

Don Angel Espinosa left Palma for Barcelona just over a week ago after a profitable and productive stay, during which he painted several of the portals for which he is famous. Now we hear of his being seen taking the air in the Plaza de Cataluña with an English friend on Monday.

The Englishman, in the opinion of our correspondent, was nibbling at a portrait commission and on the point of being hooked. How our correspondent knows this is beyond our comprehension, as he admits that he did not speak to Señor Espinosa, nor did the latter notice his presence.

POET;—

The correspondent also reports the presence in the Catalan capital of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Salt, formerly of Deyá and Génova. The American poet and his wife are stated to be in that city for an indefinite stay. They are quoted as saying that they went there «in order to hear some real Castellano.»

TAILPIECE;—

The Barcelona message concludes on a note of optimism. «Young Herr Gittelton, who ran the gymnasium connected with Los Pinos last season, has found himself a

ENGAGEMENT;—

The engagement is announced of Mr. Frederick Witty, son of Mrs. Arthur Witty of Barcelona, and Miss Peggy Marshall daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall of Chateau d'Oex, Switzerland.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall are in Palma, but expect to leave for England. The wedding take place in England in the month of June.

FANCY;—

Mrs. Gladys Kidd was the guest of honor at a Fete at the Pension on Saturday at 10 p.m. Dances and competitions were arranged and fancy dress was the order of the day—or rather evening.

groom were Don Elviro Sans, his brother, and his uncle Don Joaquín Rosselló Miralles, and for the bride, Don José Moragues Monlau and Don Raimundo Gual de Villalonga.

IN BARCELONA;—

The Wayfarer's Barcelona correspondent reports having seen H. E. Don Juan Manent, Civil Governor of the Balearic Islands, seated in front of a café on the Ramblas last Tuesday.

The Governor, according to the correspondent, was mopping his Arrangements have been concluded between the Elder Dempster Lines and Imperial Airways to form a joint company known as Elder's Colonial Airways. The purpose of the new concern will be to operate air services in West Africa.

Arrangements are also in hand for the inauguration this year by Imperial Airways of an air service from Khartoum to Nigeria. The effect of this development will be to provide through air connection between London and Lagos, by way of Khartoum, El Fasher, Fort Lamy, Maidugani, Kano, Ladun and Illorin.

Elder's Colonial Airways will operate an extension of this Imperial Airways service to Accra.

solini, the Mikado, President Roosevelt and Mr. Gandhi against a background of more uniforms, more marching men and fresh preparations for war.

The film has a spoken commentary in Spanish, but the commentator is never obtrusive and after a while stops and lets the pictures tell their own tale.

The Rialto programme opens with a quite amusing comedy called «Honeymoon for Three». There were a lot more than three people on board that liner, and most of them got mixed up in that honeymoon in one way or another.

As a matter of fact, it develops into three honeymoons. Sally Eilers plays the lead, and Zasu Pitts is also on the passenger list. One knows the sort of thing which is likely to happen when she is on board. — E. H. H.
